U. S. Acts Swiftly to Start Bases; Britons Hail America as 'Ally'; Leaders of Congress Favor Deal

Carol Escapes Assassination By Iron Guard

Fascists Attempting To Enthrone Mihai Attack U. S.-Owned Telephone Works

The War Today

INTERNAL DISSENSION over loss of Transylvania to Hungary reaches dangerous proportions in Rumania as Iron Guardists attempt to assassinate King Carol and enthrone Mihai; disorders continue in Transylvania, with Rumanian troops preparing to fight, in defiance of orders; projected German occupation of Russian border stirs speculation on Axis-Soviet relations.

BRITAIN FIGHTS OFF continued raids on London, but Nazi bombers pound other cities; R. A. F. flies over Berlin again, reports heavy raids in Ruhr and northern Italy.

HONGKONG HEARS reports Japanese troops may enter French Indo-China this week, despite the colony's rejection of Japanese demands for troop-transit rights; Tahiti backs Gen. de Gaulle as Petain pleads for empire loyalty.

Uneasy Lies the Head

By the Associated Press

Bucharest (Wednesday), Sept. 4.—Gunmen attempted in vain to assassinate King Carol last night in an alleged Iron Guardist plot to seize power and place Prince Mihai on the throne.

While the would-be assassins broke through the palace guard and fired seven shots at a lighted window in Carol's palace, other groups of Iron Guardists attacked the Bucharest radio station and the American-owned telephone company's central office.

Similar coups were attempted at Brasov and Constanza but were quickly crushed.

Machine Guns Guard Palace

The situation through the country became increasingly critical. Immediately after the incidents in Bucharest soldiers were rushed to the palace with machine guns, gas masks and full equipment. All restaurants and other public places were closed at once, and soldiers and gendarmes filled the streets.

Unconfirmed reports spread that four of the highest ranking generals of the Rumanian army were under arrest. There also were rumors that three army corps in northern Transylvania had revolted.

It was about the Transylvanian issues—the government's submission to Axis demands that Rumania give northern Transylvania to Hungary—that the crisis arose. Two undersecretaries of state resigned in protest.

Magyar Mayor Killed

The Hungarian Mayor of St. George, in the ceded area of Transylvania, hung out a Hungarian flag on the city hall and was killed by a crowd which stormed the building. Several other deaths were reported at St. George.

At Timisoara, in south Transylvania, Italian and German consulates were wrecked, as were Hungarian and German stores.

The minister of interior issued a new warning that "severe measures" would be taken against certain members of old political parties for their present activities.

Some circles here expressed fear that the Germans might establish a complete military occupation of Rumania—thus making this nation a battleground if Russia should move further to the southwest.

This was based on the fact that yesterday (Wednesday) it had

The Gallup Poll

Voters Prefer Roosevelt if British Lose

Wanted by 58%; Only 51% Favor Him If Election Were Today

By Dr. George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 3.—Evidence to show that the Presidential election may be decided not so much by the campaigning of the political parties in the next few months as by Adolf Hitler is revealed in a poll of public opinion by the Institute.

Many observers have wondered what effect an intensification of the crisis in Europe would have on the American political campaign. Would an imminent victory for Hitler cause voters to shift from Wendell Willkie to Roosevelt, or vice versa?

To anticipate the trend in case any such set of circumstances did arise, the Institute put to voters the following hypothetical question:

"If England is defeated between now and election time and it looks as though the United States might have to fight Germany, which candidate would you prefer for President—Willkie or Roosevelt?"

Would Prefer
Roosevelt..... 58%
Would Prefer
Willkie..... 42%

Only one in ten (10 per cent) was undecided.

On the same ballot the same voters were asked how would they vote if the election were held today. The results were:

Roosevelt..... 51%
Willkie..... 49

The contrast indicates a substantial increase in Roosevelt's popular strength in case war seems imminent. The results are, of course, only a rough indication of how sentiment might shift, for much would depend on the actual situation in Europe at the time.

What lends support to today's poll is the fact that foreign crises have almost always caused a rise in Roosevelt's popularity in the past. The Sudeten crisis of 1938 brought a 6-point rise, the outbreak of war last autumn an immediate rise of a little under 5 points, followed by a steady gain.

Today's poll is significant for the light it sheds on Willkie's problem as a candidate. In his handling of foreign affairs everything depends on how much confidence he is able to build up with the voters.

Can he inspire such confidence in his own abilities as to prevent any shift of votes to Roosevelt in time of crisis?

3 Mass Raids On London Are Repelled

25 Attackers Shot Down, British Say, Admitting Losing 15 of Own Planes

By the Associated Press

London (Wednesday), Sept. 4. German raiding planes in great waves beat in vain yesterday at a curtain of defensive fire thrown up about London and were driven off a third time late last night after a 14-minute engagement at the city's outskirts.

Other night bombers, however, attacked the Midlands; northwest, northeast, southeast and southwest England and areas in Wales and Scotland. Bombs fell in at least one southeast town. At least 13 cities reported raiders overhead.

The day's third raid on London came at 11:55 p. m. (5:35 p. m., eastern standard time). It was the shortest on record for the London area.

Czechs Help British

The Nazis' daylight attacks on southeast England had brought one of the war's biggest air battles, but the air ministry said the Germans managed to bomb only one spot in Kent, and the majority were turned back at the coast.

Helping in the defense of Britain, a newly formed Czech squadron was officially credited with destroying seven German planes during the day, bringing its total bag to 16.

The British said 25 attacking planes were destroyed during the day at a British loss of 15 planes. Eight R. A. F. pilots, however, were said to be safe.

Power Plant Raided

As for the offensive, at the start of the second year of war, the air ministry told of successful raids by the Royal Air Force "night hawk patrol" on objectives all the way from German-conquered Norway to Italy.

Especially heavy blows were rained upon a power plant at Genoa, a dynamite works near Cologne, and gun emplacements on the French coast, the ministry declared. "Nazi supply ships in a Norwegian harbor on Sogne Fjord and off the Dutch coast also were bombed.

Heavy thudding of bombs heard across the Channel Tuesday afternoon indicated the British were attempting once more to smash German gun emplacements on French soil from which shells have been dropped on the English coast.

(From Folkestone, the United Press reported that British bombing raids on the Nazi-held French coast, apparently extending from Bou-

Man-in-the-Street In England Says: 'We've Someone With Us, at Last'

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 3.—The British rejoiced tonight wherever they gathered, from Cheapside pubs to the austere and musty corridors of the foreign office, over the news that 50 over-age United States destroyers will fill the breaches in the Royal Navy to meet the total German siege of these islands.

First Lord of the Admiralty A. V. Alexander in a statement greeted "with the utmost pleasure and satisfaction" the transfer of destroyers. He added: "They come at a time when the strain upon our destroyer fleet has been very great, and will be of inestimable value to us not only for escorting convoys but also for protecting our coasts from the threat of invasion."

Moreover, he added, "this event will strengthen the feeling of goodwill and friendship between our two great peoples.

For Once, Good News

The official reaction from a foreign office spokesman was that "successful conclusion of this agreement (for delivery to Britain of the destroyers; for lease to the United States of North and South Atlantic air and naval bases) is greeted with the greatest possible satisfaction by His Majesty's government and the peoples of the British Empire and commonwealth of nations."

The traditionally careful spokesman could not restrain his personal enthusiasm. He greeted reporters with the words: "For once I've got some good news for you."

Need Is No Secret

On the street men read President Roosevelt's message, and, despite its assurance that the deal does not in any way affect the United States' status of peace, his usual reaction was something like this:

"It looks like we've got someone with us at last, eh, mate?"

Prime Minister Churchill, who will describe the agreement to the House of Commons on Thursday, went tonight to see the King and, undoubtedly, to discuss the arrange-

Isolationists Call Destroyer Swap 'Act of War,' None Hopes to Halt It

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt's action in exchanging 50 over-age American destroyers for defense bases in British colonies yesterday evoked commendation from Congressional leaders, although Congress was not advised of the deal beforehand.

There was, however, adverse comment by some isolationist leaders.

Speaker Bankhead called it "a fine trade," and Senate Majority Leader Barkley predicted that the public will give "full approval."

No direct comment on the historic agreement was made by the Republican leadership, but it was ascertained that the G. O. P. chiefs would not sponsor any move to block the agreement.

The transaction "is one of the greatest accomplishments in behalf of national and hemispheric defense that has ever been consummated in the history of the United States," Barkley said.

"England is fighting our fight now," said Senator Schwartz (Democrat), of Wyoming. "I favor any aid we can give them."

"Gone Crazy," Knutson Says

Typical of bitter comment from the bipartisan isolationist bloc was the reaction of Senator Clark (Democrat), of Idaho. "Transfer of the destroyers amounts substantially to an act of war," he said.

"The whole world's gone crazy," said Representative Knutson (Republican), of Minnesota, one of two men now in Congress who voted against American entry into the World War in 1917.

The agreement is likely to draw daily criticism on the House and Senate floors through the remainder of this session, it appeared at the Capitol, but critics of the deal conceded that no other avenue of protest is open to them.

Any move to enact legislation nullifying the transfer would bog down in Congressional committees under Democratic control, it was pointed out, while an attempt to discharge such a bill from committee by petition would require the backing of a large number of Democrats. Meanwhile, the destroyers would already have begun service in British waters.

One Republican Representative said, "It's what they call a fait accompli over in Europe."

War Plan Suspected

The House received the President's message a few minutes before opening debate yesterday on the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill. Opponents of the draft immediately linked the destroyer transfer with compulsory military training as evidence of the Administration's alleged aim to involve this country in the European war.

"We discussed this issue of the destroyers a few days ago in Congress," said Representative Burdick (Republican), of North Dakota, "and we assumed we had something to say about it. . . . How do we know President Roosevelt won't turn over our men to England next week?"

Representative Bender (Republican), of Ohio, attacking President

Willkie Decries Failure to Tell Public of Ship Deal in Advance

Candidate Says It Was Regrettable Roosevelt 'Did Not Deem It Necessary' To Obtain Prior Congressional Approval

By the Associated Press

Rushville, Ind., Sept. 3.—Although declaring "the country will undoubtedly approve" of the Administration's trade of destroyers for naval base rights in British possessions, Wendell L. Willkie said today it was regrettable President Roosevelt "did not deem it necessary" to obtain prior Congressional approval or permit public discussion.

Willkie handed reporters this formal statement at a press conference in his back yard:

"The country will undoubtedly approve of the program to add to our naval air bases and assistance given to Great Britain. It is regrettable, however, that the President did not deem it necessary in connection with this proposal, to secure the approval of Congress or permit public discussion prior to adoption.

"The people have a right to know of such important commitments prior to and not after made.

"We must be extremely careful in these times when the struggle in the world is between democracy and totalitarianism not to eliminate or destroy the democratic processes while seeking to preserve democracy.

"It is the contention of the totalitarian rulers that democracy is not effective. We must prove that it is effective by making full use of its process. Congress has constitutional functions as important and sacred as those of the Chief Executive."

Asked whether the Anglo-American exchange arrangement constituted "an act of war," the Republican Presidential nominee replied: "That is one of the things debate and discussion would have completely clarified."

Willkie's statement did not specifically express his own views regarding the agreement and he declined to elaborate for publication.

Asked for comment on President Roosevelt's Tennessee address yesterday, Willkie asserted "when I

Japan Believed Ready to Grab At Indo-China

Ultimatum Rejected, Invasion Reported Set for Friday

By the United Press

Hong Kong (Wednesday), Sept. 4. Reliable British informants said today that Gen. K. Nishihara, head of the Japanese military mission in Hanoi, has informed the government of French Indo-China that Japanese troops will start entering the colony on Friday.

The informants said the general's decision was reached after the French home government in Vichy had given an unsatisfactory reply to a Japanese request for the right to move troops through Indo-China.

French-Japanese discussions were being continued in Indo-China late yesterday prior to expiration of the Japanese ultimatum, according to reports from Saigon today.

The Japanese were said to have denied that any ultimatum was delivered, but authoritative sources insisted that one was and that it may have been recalled because of the action of the French in "calling Japan's bluff."

Military authorities suggested that there was no need for hurry on the part of the Japanese since weather conditions will continue unfavorable for military operations for at least another month.

Both Parties Ready to Clash In Midwest

Republican Strength In Corn Belt Brings 2 Moves by Democrats

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Campaign fire of both parties turned west of the Mississippi yesterday as Democrats contested G. O. P. claims of mounting Willkie sentiment in the whole Western area.

Jubilantly, Republican National Chairman Joseph W. Martin told reporters that Willkie daily is picking up strength in the Midwest and Far West and if the election were held today "would win in a breeze."

Drily, Democratic National Chairman Edward J. Flynn rejoined in New York that he would come to Washington today to report to the President that Willkie "is gradually losing ground."

Meanwhile, two Democratic moves in the Middle West showed party concern at Republican strength in the corn belt.

From Bloomington, Ill., former Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, Democratic Vice Presidential nominee, started a 1,100-mile campaign speaking tour through downstate Illinois.

At the Stevens Hotel in Chicago, Democrats opened Western regional offices and Senator Lucas (Democrat), of Illinois, the President's Midwestern manager, prepared for a swing through 13 States.

Bold Move

Post Staff Writer

The United States, new possessor of air and naval base sites on eight British possessions in this hemisphere, acted swiftly last night to put them to use.

Defense experts were already on their way to Bermuda a few hours after the Government yesterday acquired rights to erect bases in crown colonies of the invasion-threatened British government, giving in return 50 over-age destroyers, valued at $85,000,000.

Eight of the destroyers are now at Boston, and are expected to be transferred to the British by Friday.

As the destroyer-bases trade was made, Lord Lothian, the British Ambassador, handed to Secretary of State Hull a pledge that it is "the settled policy" of Britain never to sink or surrender its fleet. The British pledge was taken to be an assurance that the 50 American destroyers would not fall into German hands.

Major Expansion

Members of Congress variously applauded and assailed the deal when a message from President Roosevelt, which said that the trade was an accomplished fact, arrived on Capitol Hill, accompanied by an opinion of the Attorney General that no action by Congress was necessary.

The President also dropped hints that yesterday's history-making step might soon be followed by others, perhaps extending this country's formal defense commitments farther

London, Sept. 2 (delayed).—It may or may not be significant, but certain waves of German bombers which came over the southeast coast of England today were not engaged by British fighters until they got into the London patrol area.

In neither the morning nor the afternoon raids did British fighter patrols meet these formations over the coast, as they have done in the past.

This correspondent was in Dover when the first wave of bombers came over before 8 o'clock. The bombers were engaged by the anti-aircraft batteries, but they flew on without incident. In the afternoon the American correspondents had moved inland to the vicinity of the

Berlin Silent On Ship Deal

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Sept. 3.—German authorized sources displayed extreme caution today in reaction to the United States' transfer of 50 over-age destroyers to Great Britain. They declared it involves "a question of conceivably vast import in relation to which the German attitude cannot be defined before a thoroughgoing study of all aspects of international law concerned."

But completely unofficially and without in any way reflecting the German government's view, some Nazis said they believed the warships were "too late to help Britain"

Murdock Takes Lead Over King In Senate Race

Salt Lake City, Sept. 3 (U.P.).—Representative Abe Murdock, frequent supporter of New Deal legislation, tonight took a 2½-to-1 lead over veteran Senator William H. King as outlying returns appeared in Utah's primary for Democratic Senatorial nomination.

Ballots from 45 up-State precincts gave:

Murdock, 2,589; King, 1,058, and Delbert Draper, commercial science instructor at University of Utah, 289.

Counting of ballots in Salt Lake City's 240 precincts did not begin until 8 p. m. In the city was King's expected strength.

Almazan's Backers Issue Defiant Notice of Revolt

Mexico City, Sept. 3.—In a virtual call to rebellion, the rump "congress" proclaimed Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan President-elect of Mexico tonight and defied the government to prevent him from carrying out "the will of the Mexican people."

Announcement of the proclamation was made by Gen. Emilio Madero, president of the antigovernment party, who said news of the proclamation would be withheld from the nation until tomorrow when a manifesto of "greatest importance" would be released.

This leader and others, both inside and outside of the government, admitted the situation had become more explosive than at any time since the disputed July 7 elections, out of which have come two rival federal congresses and many of the elements of potential trouble.

So seriously did some Americans view developments that they began hurriedly to arrange the evacuation of their families. It was expected that within the next 48 hours a warning would be issued to prospective tourists from the United States to remain outside of Mexico until the danger passed.

One of the chief reasons for the alarm, which has mounted rapidly since Sunday when President Lagardo Cardenas threw the weight of

Leading Papers For Warship Deal

Some Dissent But Most Editors See Benefits for U. S.

By the United Press

The following is a summarized version of editorial comment by American newspapers on President Roosevelt's trade of overage destroyers to Britain in exchange for naval and air bases in the Western Hemisphere:

New York Daily News—There is bound to be a lot of argument over the question whether this virtual act of war against Germany is for weal or woe. . . . We hope it will be for weal, and think there is good reason for hoping so.

Detroit Free Press—It is justifiable to believe that if he (President Roosevelt) had waited for the present Congress to come to any agreement, either for or against lending such aid to England, the war might well be over while they were still arguing it . . . There is no question that the United States should have the air and naval bases provided for in the agreement as points vital to our national defense. . . .

Post-Dispatch Dissents

St. Louis Post-Dispatch—Mr. Roosevelt today committed an act of war.

He also became America's first dictator.

If this secretly negotiated deal goes through, the fat is in the fire and we all may as well get ready for a full-dress participation in the European war.

Atlanta Constitution—The country as a whole will approve it as one of the greatest defense strokes made in behalf of the protection of this country.

Philadelphia Record — It would have been a good arrangement if the President had given England the destroyers and gotten nothing in return . . . in the days to come, this master stroke . . . will be put down in the history books as a great monument to American statesmanship.

"Epochal," the Times Says

New York Times — President Roosevelt is right in describing as "epochal" the agreement announced yesterday between Great Britain and the United States. It is epochal in the sense that it marks the recognition by these two powers of a community of interest in the defense of the North Atlantic world . . . Through the action of their governments they now place at the disposal of one another instruments of which each has special need in the defense of the Atlantic world against aggression. Without going into the disputed question of the President's authority under existing law, it must be said that the present agreement would be even more desirable if it had the formal stamp of Congressional approval on it.

New York Herald Tribune—"The two goals that President Roosevelt has achieved and announced together are in themselves wholly admirable and long overdue. It is greatly to be hoped that regret over his uniting them in one sensational bargain will not blind the country to the vital national importance of the agreement as to bases and the high desirability of the sale of the destroyers. The isolationist minority in Congress and outside of it will be heard, no doubt, in vociferous protest: it ought to be heard, and every argument it may advance deserves consideration . . . but criticism of the manner of the achievement should not cause defeat of the solid gains achieved.

Other editorial comment obtained by the New York Herald Tribune press service:

Los Angeles (Calif.) Times—There is no doubt of the real necessity of the air and naval bases. Whether we have paid too high a price for them, in thus being brought nearer to war, is a question that only time can answer.

"Down Payment on Security"

Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal—We have made at last a down payment on national security. And we haven't had a better bargain since the Indians sold Manhattan Island for $24 in wampum and a demijohn of hard liquor. . . . President Roosevelt acted with firmness and considerable daring in concluding this admirable transaction without consulting the Congress.

Kansas City (Mo.) Star—The transfer to England of 50 over-age destroyers in payment for the lease of essential naval and air bases in British possessions near the United States should prove a very great value to both nations.

New Orleans (La.) Times-Picayune—Our guess is that history will rate this timely trade for "outposts of security," as the President describes them, second only in importance to Jefferson's Louisiana purchase. The American majority has signified its desire to give the British every possible aid 'short of war' and an even greater majority sees the imperative need of the outlying bases for national and for hemisphere defense. Their prompt acquirement on terms easier than expected will be so widely and heartily welcomed, in our judgment, as to render opposition futile.

Public Will Support It

Indianapolis (Ind.) Star—Public sentiment in this country is so overwhelmingly in favor of doing everything "short of war" to aid the British in the present emergency that it will support and be inclined to condone the deal the President made for the lease of naval and air bases in return for 50 of our destroyers.

Cleveland (Ohio) Plain Dealer—The question of method aside, most Americans will agree that the President's securing of these base sites constitutes a major step in national defense. . . . Frankly, we would like it better if some degree of cooperation on the part of Congress had been sought in spite of what the Attorney General says.

Chicago Tribune — President Roosevelt notified Congress yesterday of the agreement between the United States and Great Britain which gives this country leases for naval and air bases in British-American possessions.

The Tribune rejoices to make this announcement, which fulfills a policy advocated by this newspaper since 1922. In spite of much discouragement, the Tribune persisted, month by month and year by year, in calling for these additions to the national defense. It may be found, as we think it will be, that this is the greatest contribution of this newspaper to the country's history since the nomination of Lincoln.

San Francisco Chronical — Any criticism we have for the American-British trade of 50 destroyers for Caribbean Sea and air bases is not for the fact but because it should have been done long ago. The delay in action has been perilous and we hope the destroyers get to the British Channel in time to be of full service. In proscratinating with this necessity the Adminsitration has taken needless risk.

Funds for Bases Ready

Chairman Vinson of the House Naval Affairs Committee, said construction of air bases in British possessions could be started with a $10,000,000 lump-sum appropriation recently made to the Navy for building auxiliary bases for defense of the Panama Canal. He suggested also that the President might use some of the $200,000,000 defense fund over which he has practically unlimited discretion.

Both President Roosevelt and the Navy Department stated there will be no joint occupancy of the bases, and that the United States will have full control of the areas to be granted. Some naval officials believed, however, that naval and air-base facilities now used by the British might be turned over to the United States in additional to sites.

The chief of the board, Admiral Greenslade, is a veteran of 45 years' naval service. A native of Ohio, he commanded a mine-layer in the North Sea in the World War, receiving the Distinguished Service Medal. In recent years he has alternated duty here on the general board with sea posts, including command of the submarine force and the Fleet's battleships.

Gen. Devers, now commander of the Washington brigade, is considered one of the Army's foremost experts on Caribbean defense. He was recently chief of staff of the Panama Canal defenses.

make political speeches I designate them as such."

Announcing the Republican National Committee would ask that he be given free radio time equal to that given Mr. Roosevelt, Willkie said he wanted to use it "to make my political speeches."

Told that Senator Overton (Democrat), Louisiana, had disclaimed Administration inspiration for his Senate-approved proposal to permit the Government to seize certain defense facilities, Willkie asked: "If that is true, why didn't the President say so?"

Willkie, an opponent of the Overton plan, had demanded previously that the Chief Executive state his position regarding the proposal.

The Republican Presidential nominee, squatting on the ground in a semicircle of reporters, was questioned regarding a statement by Democratic Chairman W. J. Flynn that the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee had obtained evidence that the Georgia Power Co. spent $31,000 "on labor spies."

No Testimony Given

(The Georgia company was part of the Commonwealth & Southern System, which Willkie formerly headed.)

Declaring Flynn's statement "will be completely answered by others," Willkie said "nobody in any organization I was ever connected with testified before the La Follette committee."

Willkie asserted some of the Commonwealth & Southern companies had engaged inspectors to check fares and operations on street car lines they controlled. But he added:

"Any statement by Mr. Flynn that implies or infers that Commonwealth & Southern ever employed a labor spy is completely false.

"When Mr. Flynn has to resort to such things as that, he must be very much disturbed about the outcome of the election."

Atlanta, Sept. 3 (AP).—Preston S. Arkwright, president of the Georgia Power Co., denied today that this corporation used "labor spies" as charged by National Democratic Chairman Edward J. Flynn.

Arkwright's statement said in part:

"The statement of Edward J. Flynn, chairman of the National Democratic Committee, that 'Mr. Willkie's Georgia power company spent $31,000 on labor spies from Pinkerton' is absolutely false. Not only is it false, but also the statement 'we have the evidence before the La Follette investigating committee' is absolutely false. There was no such evidence, nor did Mr. Flynn have any evidence or information to this effect. No such evidence can possibly exist because we have not employed any labor spies. And nobody accuses us of it except "Boss" Flynn.

"We do employ operators to check the money receipts on the street cars and these operators are supplied by the Pinkerton Agency, but this has nothing to do with labor or labor unions."

in the Pacific Ocean.

Meanwhile, official Washington expected a stormy reaction from the German government, but authorized quarters in Berlin were extremely reserved, saying they would have to study the legal questions involved. The German Embassy referred all inquiries to Berlin.

President Roosevelt, informing Congress of the transaction, said it was the most important defense step since the Louisiana Purchase.

In territory ranging for more than 3,000 miles along America's frontier, the rights this country acquires are in Newfoundland, Bermuda, the Bahamas, Jamaica, St. Lucia, Trinidad, Antigua and British Guiana.

Rights to bases in Newfoundland and Bermuda "are gifts—generously given and gladly received," President Roosevelt said, while the other bases were acquired in exchange for the destroyers, which Britain needs to maintain mastery of her European waters.

The bold, new American move, aimed at fuller protection of this hemisphere from Canada to far below Culebra Cut, came as National Guardsmen were being mustered for a year's service and Congress was hastening action on the first peacetime conscription measure in the Nation's history.

President Roosevelt's bargain, completed in a half-hour conference in Union Station Sunday afternoon with Secretary Hull, was the first major expansion of the American frontier since the Spanish-American war.

The Chief Executive bulwarked his action by the opinion of Attorney General Jackson, points of which were immediately attacked in Congress, particularly the passages approving the exchange of destroyers.

Aboard his train en route to the Capital President Roosevelt said yesterday that the chief value of the trade with Britain was that the new bases would keep the enemy away from our door.

President Roosevelt's notification message to Congress declared:

"This is not inconsistent in any sense with our status of peace. Still less is it a threat against any nation."

The Chief Executive called his agreement with Britain "an epochal and far-reaching act of preparation for continental defense in the face of grave danger."

The new defense sites, he added, are "essential to the protection of the Panama Canal, Central America, the northern portion of South America, the Antilles, Canada, Mexico and our own Eastern and Gulf seaboards."

Not confining their scope merely to these regions, the President's statement ended:

"Their consequent importance in hemispheric defense is obvious. For these reasons I have taken advantage of the present opportunity to acquire them."

Speedily putting a final touch on the giant real estate deal, Chief of Naval Operations Harold R. Stark certified that the exchange of 50 destroyers for naval and air-base sites" will strengthen rather than impair the total defense of the United States" and that the over-age craft, built during the World War, "are not essential to the defense of the United States." His certification was required by law.

Board Appointed

Acting Secretary of the Navy James V. Forrestal disclosed that eight of the destroyers are at Boston and should be ready by September 6, when they will be taken to Canada by American crews and then turned over to trained British crews. The others will be made ready in like manner "when they are requested," Forrestal said.

Finally, Forrestal appointed a six-man naval board of experts to meet with British experts to decide the exact location of the military emplacements and other details of transferring the base sites. The board left immediately for Bermuda.

Attorney General Jackson's legal opinion made these points:

The transaction does not require Congressional ratification; the President has power to transfer the destroyers upon certification by the Navy that they are not essential for United States defense, and, finally, that transfer of "mosquito boats" now building for the American fleet would violate American statutes.

No transfer of mosquito vessels was included in the arrangement with Great Britain announced yesterday.

"Forbid Him to Risk Any Delay"

Jackson rested his approval of President Roosevelt's single-handed bargain on the Chief Executive's powers as Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy and on his power to conduct foreign relations.

Jackson wrote that the President's military powers place on him "a responsibility to use all constitutional authority which he may possess to provide adequate bases and stations for the utilization of the naval and air weapons of the United States."

"World conditions forbid him to risk any delay that is constitutionally avoidable," the Attorney General held.

Noting that the acquisition of bases from Britain implies no future promise from the United States, Jackson said "it is not necessary for the Senate to ratify an opportunity that entails no obligation."

Finds No Restrictions

Jackson said that "the proposition falls far short in magnitude" of the Louisiana Purchase of 1803, but recalled as precedents Secretary of State Webster's acquisition of Horse Shoe Reef, near Buffalo, from Canada in 1850 in exchange for a promise to keep a lighthouse there; frequent acquisition of sites for embassies and consulates abroad; the President's negotiation of trade agreements since 1933, and the leasing of Guantanamo Bay from Cuba in 1903 for an annual rental of $2,000.

Examining the President's right to exchange the destroyers, Jackson said he found no legal restriction on the President in this matter except those imposed by Congress on June 28, 1940.

This measure required certification that the military material was of no defense use, which was granted by the Navy yesterday.

Reviewing the legislative history of this restriction, Jackson said it was clear to him "that the Congress did not intend to prevent the certification for transfer, exchange, sale or disposition of property merely because it is still used or usable."

Disapproving transfer of the mosquito boats but upholding transfer of the destroyers, Jackson told the President that the distinction was that the World War destroyers were clearly not built with the intention of turning them over to a belligerent government, while this intention was not so clear with regard to the torpedo boats.

1917 Law Cited

Key passage in deciding this fine point of law was a section of a 1917 law providing:

"During a war in which the United States is a neutral nation, it shall be unlawful to send out of the jurisdiction of the United States any vessel, built, armed or equipped as a vessel of war, or converted from a private vessel into a vessel of war, with any intent, or under any agreement or contract, written or oral, that such vessel shall be delivered to a belligerent nation, or to an agent, officer, or citizen of such nation, or with reasonable cause to believe that the said vessel shall or will be employed in the service of any such belligerent nation after its departure from the jurisdiction of the United States."

Criticism of the President's bargain which erupted in Congressional circles that have consistently demurred at each new step in White House foreign policy, centered on this narrow distinction drawn by Jackson.

Isolationist Senators held that if the statute bars transfer of the torpedo ships it also makes the destroyer deal illegal.

Called "Master Stroke"

Senators who generally support the Administration's foreign policies, an apparent majority, greeted the transaction favorably, some hailing it as a "master stroke."

A chance for Congress to register its approval or disapproval was seen in the possibility that President Roosevelt might request an appropriation to start construction of military works on the base sites.

Chairman Vinson (Democrat), Georgia, of the House Naval Affairs Committee, said the Navy already had $10,000,000 for use in construction of auxiliary air bases which might be used in connection with the new program. Vinson also suggested that the President might use for this purpose some of the $200,000,000 defense fund over which Congress has given the Chief Executive wide discretionary authority.

An exchange of letters between Secretary Hull and Lord Lothian was attached to the notifying message the President sent to Congress.

The British Ambassadors' communication explained that the leases would be for 99 years free from all rents and charges other than compensation to the owners of private property for any loss incurred.

For all practical purposes, the leased territory becomes part of the United States.

"Parallel Development"

London, Sept. 3 (AP).—Persons close to the British foreign office said tonight they could make "no comment at this stage" on the British pledge to the United States—announced in Washington—to the effect that the British Navy never would be sunk nor surrendered in the event that waters around the United Kingdom became "untenable."

This assurance from British Ambassador Lothian to Secretary of State Hull, they explained, followed a request by Hull for a clarification of Prime Minister Churchill's declaration some time ago in which he said Britain would never surrender.

Thus it was stated that the assurance was not directly involved in the transfer to Great Britain of 50 over-age U. S. destroyers, but might be considered "a parallel development."

Send Battleships, Glass Says

Lynchburg, Va., Sept. 3 (AP).—Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, said today he approved not only the exchange of over-age American destroyers for British bases, but was "in favor of sending our battleships over too."

A statement made at his home here follows:

"I wish it (the destroyer swap) had been done long ago. And not only do I wish it had been done long ago, but I am in favor of sending our battleships over too. I'd rather fight with England than without her, which we would have to do if the barbarians should beat her in this war."

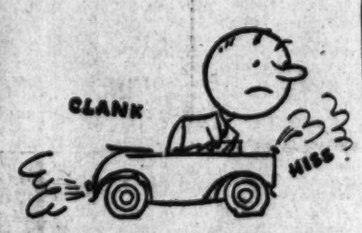
YOU WIN BOTH WAYS!
—coming and going!



A better deal on your OLD CAR!

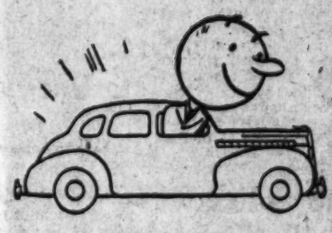
That's the story—and here's why:

We MUST clean out our few remaining brand-now 1940 Packards at once —to make room for the 1941 models, soon to be announced. This means . . .

You Save Money TWO Ways!

ONE: Due to the current good demand for used cars, we can "go the limit" on trade-in allowance for your present car. That car of yours will probably not only take care of the entire down payment on a new 1940 Packard, but may even further reduce the already-low monthly payments!

TWO: We think you can bank on this: 1941 car prices generally will be higher. But there's still time to buy a NEW 1940 Packard at TODAY'S low price and take advantage of the best buys in Packard history!



A NEW PACKARD —before prices go up!

Selection Limited—Don't Delay!

Packard has had a big year—sales up 62% while the industry has gained only 29%! And no wonder! Owners say it's the greatest, most stunning, Packard ever built—brim-full of features that put it way out in front . . . in riding comfort, flashing performance, and economy of operation.

Our supply of the new 1940 Packards won't last long—so drop in today and look them over. Don't pass up what may be your last chance to own a new 1940 Packard at a double saving!

Texts of Roosevelt's Letter And Hull-Lothian Messages

The text of President Roosevelt's message to Congress yesterday, relating to an exchange of United States destroyers for air and naval bases in British possessions in the Western Hemisphere, incorporating notes of Lord Lothian, British Ambassador, and Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, follows:

TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES:

I transmit herewith for the information of the Congress notes exchanged between the British Ambassador at Washington and the Secretary of State on September 2, 1940, under which this Government has acquired the right to lease naval and air bases in Newfoundland and in the islands of Bermuda, the Bahamas, Jamaica, St. Lucia, Trinidad and Antigua, and in British Guiana; also a copy of an opinion of the Attorney General dated August 27, 1940, regarding my authority to consummate this arrangement.

The right to bases in Newfoundland and Bermuda are gifts—generously given and gladly received. The other bases mentioned have been acquired in exchange for 50 of our over-age destroyers.

This is not inconsistent in any sense with our status of peace. Still less is it a threat against any nation. It is an epochal and far-reaching act of preparation for continental defense in the face of grave danger.

Preparation for defense is an inalienable prerogative of a sovereign state. Under present circumstances this exercise of sovereign right is essential to the maintenance of our peace and safety. This is the most important action in the reinforcement of our national defense that has been taken since the Louisiana Purchase. Then as now, considerations of safety from overseas attack were fundamental.

The value to the Western Hemisphere of these outposts of security is beyond calculation. Their need has long been recognized by our country, and especially by those primarily charged with the duty of charting and organizing our own naval and military defense. They are essential to the protection of the Panama Canal, Central America, the Northern portion of South America, The Antilles, Canada, Mexico, and our own Eastern and Gulf seaboards. Their consequent importance in hemispheric defense is obvious. For these reasons I have taken advantage of the present opportunity to acquire them.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

The White House
Sept. 3, 1940.

British Embassy,
Washington, D. C., Sept. 2, 1940.

Sir: I have the honour under instructions from His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs to inform you that in view of the friendly and sympathetic interest of His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom in the national security of the United States and their desire to strengthen the ability of the United States to cooperate effectively with the other nations of the Americas in the defense of the Western Hemisphere, His Majesty's Government will secure the grant to the Government of the United States, freely and without consideration, of the lease for immediate establishment and use of naval and air bases and facilities for entrance thereto and the operation and protection thereof, on the Avalon Peninsula and on the southern coast of Newfoundland and on the east coast and on the Great Bay of Bermuda.

Furthermore, in view of the above and in view of the desire of the United States to acquire additional air and naval bases in the Caribbean and in British Guiana, and without endeavoring to place a monetary or commercial value upon the many tangible and intangible rights and properties involved, His Majesty's Government will make available to the United States for immediate establishment and use naval and air bases and facilities for entrance thereto and the operation and protection thereof, on the eastern side of the Bahamas, the southern coast of Jamaica, the western coast of St. Lucia, the west coast of Trinidad in the Gulf of Paria, in the island of Antigua and in British Guiana within 50 miles of Georgetown, in exchange for naval and military equipment and material which the United States Government will transfer to His Majesty's Government.

All the bases and facilities referred to in the preceding paragraphs will be leased to the United States for a period of 99 years, free from all rent and charges other than such compensation to be mutually agreed on to be paid by the United States in order to compensate the owners of private property for loss by expropriation or damage arising out of the establishment of the bases and facilities in question.

His Majesty's Government, in the leases to be agreed upon, will grant to the United States for the period of the leases all the rights, power and authority within the bases leased, and within the limits of the teritorial waters and air spaces adjacent to or in the vicinity of such bases, necessary to provide access to and defense of such bases, and appropriate provisions for their control.

Without prejudice to the abovementioned rights of the United States authorities and their jurisdiction within the leased areas, the adjustment and reconciliation between the jurisdiction of the authorities of the United States within these areas and the jurisdiction of the authorities of the territories in which these areas are situated, shall be determined by common agreement.

The exact location and bounds of the aforesaid bases, the necessary seaward, coast and antiaircraft defenses, the location of sufficient military garrisons, stores and other necessary auxiliary facilities shall be determined by common agreement.

His Majesty's Government are prepared to designate immediately experts to meet with experts of the United States for these purposes. Should these experts be unable to agree in any particular situation, except in the case of Newfoundland and Bermuda, the matter shall be settled by the Secretary of State of the United States and His Majesty's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

I have the honour to be, with the highest consideration, Sir, Your most obedient, humble servant, LOTHIAN.

The Honourable Cordell Hull, Secretary of State of the United States, Washington, D. C.

Department of State, Washington, September 2, 1940.

Excellency: I have received your note of September 2, 1940, of which the text is as follows:

I am directed by the President to reply to your note as follows:

The Government of the United States appreciates the declarations and the generous action of His Majesty's Government as contained in your communication which are destined to enhance the national security of the United States and greatly to strengthen its ability to cooperate effectively with the other nations of the Americas in the defense of the Western Hemisphere. It therefore gladly accepts the proposals.

The Government of the United States will immediately designate experts to meet with experts designated by His Majesty's Government to determine upon the exact location of the naval and air bases mentioned in your communication under acknowledgment.

In consideration of the declarations above quoted, the Government of the United States will immediately transfer to His Majesty's Government 50 United States Navy destroyers generally referred to as the 1,200-ton type.

Accept, Excellency, the renewed assurances of my highest consideration. CORDELL HULL.

His Excellency the Right Honorable the Marquess of Lothian, C. H., British Ambassador.

Jackson Lists Views On Constitutionality

Declares President Has Power to Act Without Ratification by Senate Because Deal 'Entails No Obligation' in Future

Following is the text of the Attorney General's opinion on the constitutional authority of the President to proceed with negotiations with Great Britain to acquire offshore naval and air bases in exchange for destroyers, without awaiting congressional action:

August 27, 1940.

The President,
The White House.

My Dear Mr. President:

In accordance with your request I have considered your constitutional and statutory authority to proceed by executive agreement with the British government immediately to acquire for the United States certain off-shore naval and air bases in the Atlantic Ocean without awaiting the inevitable delays which would accompany the conclusion of a formal treaty.

The essential characteristics of the proposal are:

(a) The United States to acquire rights for immediate establishment and use of naval and air bases in Newfoundland, Bermuda, the Bahamas, Jamaica, St. Lucia, Trinidad and British Guiana; such rights to endure for a period of 99 years and to include adequate provisions for access to, and defense of such bases and appropriate provisions for their control.

(b) In consideration it is proposed to transfer to Great Britain the title and possession of certain overage ships and obsolete military materials now the property of the United States, and certain other small patrol boats which though nearly completed are already obsolescent.

(c) Upon such transfer all obligation of the United States is discharged. The acquisition consists only of rights, which the United States may exercise or not at its option, and if exercised, may abandon without consent. The privilege of maintaining such bases is subject only to limitations necessary to reconcile United States use with the sovereignty retained by Great Britain. Our Government assumes no responsibility for civil administration of any territory. It makes no promise to erect structures or maintain forces at any point. It undertakes no defense of the possessions of any country. In short, it acquires optional bases which may be developed as Congress appropriates funds therefor, but the United States does not assume any continuing or future obligation, commitment or alliance.

Three Questions Involved

The questions of constitutional and statutory authority, with which alone I am concerned, seem to be these.

First. May such an acquisition be concluded by the President under an executive agreement or must it be negotiated as a treaty subject to ratification by the Senate?

Second. Does authority exist in the President to alienate the title to such ships and obsolescent materials, and if so, on what conditions?

Third. Do the statutes of the United States limit the right to deliver the so-called "mosquito boats" now under construction or the overage destroyers by reason of the belligerent status of Great Britain?

I.

There is, of course, no doubt concerning the authority of the President to negotiate with the British government for the proposed exchange. The only questions that might be raised in connection therewith are (1) whether the arrangement must be put in the form of a treaty and await ratification by the Senate or (2) whether there must be additional legislation by the Congress. Ordinarily (and assuming the absence of enabling legislation) the question whether such an agreement can be concluded under Presidential authority or whether it must await ratification by a two-thirds vote of the United States Senate involves consideration of two powers which the Constitution vests in the President.

Can't Risk Delay

One of these is the power of the Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States, which is conferred upon the President by the Constitution, but is not defined or limited. Happily, there has been little occasion in our history for the interpretation of the powers of the President as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy. I do not find it necessary to rest upon that power alone to sustain the present proposal. But it will hardly be open to controversy that the vesting of such a function in the President also places upon him a responsibility to use all constitutional authority which he may possess to provide adequate bases and stations for the utilization of the naval and air weapons of the United States at their highest efficiency in our defense. It seems equally beyond doubt that present world condition forbid him to risk any delay that is constitutionally avoidable.

The second power to be considered is that control of foreign relations which the Constitution vests in the President as a part of the executive function. The nature and extent of this power has recently been explicitly and authoritatively defined by Mr. Justice Sutherland, writing for the Supreme Court. In 1936, in "United States vs. Curtiss-Wright Export Corporation, et al," 299 U. S. 304, he said:

"It is important to bear in mind that we are here dealing not alone with an authority vested in the President by an exertion of legislative power, but with such an authority plus the very delicate, plenary and exclusive power of the President as the sole organ of the Federal Government in the field of international relations—a power which does not require as a basis for its exercise an act of Congress, but which, of course, like every other governmental power, must be exercised in subordination to the applicable provisions of the Constitution. It is quite apparent that if, in the maintenance of our international relations, embarrassment — perhaps serious embarrassment—is to be avoided and success for our aims achieved, Congressional legislation which is to be made effective through negotiation and inquiry within the international field must often accord to the President a degree of discretion and freedom from statutory restriction which would not be admissible were domestic affairs alone involved. Moreover, he, not Congress, has the better opportunity of knowing the conditions which prevail in foreign countries, and especially is this true in time of war. He has his confidential sources of information. He has his agents in the form of diplomatic consular and other officials. Secrecy in respect of information gathered by them may be highly necessary, and the premature disclosure of it productive of harmful results."

Power Not Unlimited

The President's power over foreign relations while "delicate, plenary and exclusive" is not unlimited. Some negotiations involve commitments as to the future which would carry an obligation to exercise powers vested in the Congress. Such Presidential arrangements are customarily submitted for ratification by a two-thirds vote of the Senate before the future legislative power of the country is committed. However, the acquisitions which you are proposing to accept are without express or implied promises on the part of the United States to be performed in the future. The consideration, which we later discuss, is completed upon transfer of the specified items. The executive agreement obtains an opportunity to establish naval and air bases for the protection of our coastline, but it imposes no obligation upon the Congress to appropriate money to improve the opportunity. It is not necessary for the Senate to ratify an opportunity that entails no obligation.

There are precedents which might be cited, but not all strictly pertinent. The proposition falls far short in magnitude of the acquisition by President Jefferson of the Louisiana Territory from a belligerent during a European war, the Congress later appropriating the consideration and the Senate later ratifying a treaty embodying the agreement.

I am also reminded that in 1850, Secretary of State Daniel Webster acquired Horse Shoe Reef, at the entrance of Buffalo Harbor, upon condition that the United States would engage to erect a lighthouse and maintain a light, but would erect no fortification thereon. This was done without awaiting legislative authority. Subsequently the Congress made appropriations for the lighthouse, which was erected in 1856. Malloy, Treaties and Conventions, Vol. 1, p. 663.

Ample Statutory Authority

It is not believed, however, that it is necessary here to rely exclusively upon your constitutional power. As pointed out hereinafter (in discussing the second question), I think there is also ample statutory authority to support the acquisition of these bases, and the precedents perhaps most nearly in point are the numerous acquisitions of rights in foreign countries for sites of diplomatic and consular establishments—perhaps also the trade agreements recently negotiated under statutory authority and the acquisition in 1903 of the coaling and naval stations and rights in Cuba under the act of March 2, 1901, c. 803, 31 Stat. 895, 898. In the last-mentioned case the agreement was subsequently embodied in a treaty, but it was only one of a number of undertakings, some clearly of a nature to be dealt with ordinarily by treaty, and the statute had required "that by way of further assurance the government of Cuba will embody the foregoing provisions in a permanent treaty with the United States."

The transaction now proposed represents only an exchange with no statutory requirement for the embodiment thereof in any treaty and involving no promises or undertakings by the United States that might raise the question of the propriety of incorporation in a treaty. I therefore advise that acquisition by executive agreement of the rights proposed to be conveyed to the United States by Great Britain will not require ratification by the Senate.

II

The right of the President to dispose of vessels of the Navy and unneeded naval material finds clear recognition in at least two enactments of the Congress and a decision of the Supreme Court—and any who assert that the authority does not exist must assume the burden of establishing that both the Congress and the Supreme Court meant something less than the clear import of seemingly plain language.

Methods Restricted

By section 5 of the act of March 3, 1883, c. 141, 22 Stat. 582, 599-600 (U. S. C., title 34, sec. 492), the Congress placed restrictions upon the methods to be followed by the Secretary of the Navy in disposing of naval vessels which have been found unfit for further use and stricken from the naval registry, but by the last clause of the section recognized and confirmed such a right in the President free from such limitations. It provides:

"But no vessel of the Navy shall hereafter be sold in any other manner than herein provided or for less than such appraised value, unless the President of the United States shall otherwise direct in writing."

In Levinson versus United States, 258 U. S. 198, 201, the Supreme Court said of this statute that "the power of the President to direct a departure from the statute is not confined to a sale for less than the appraised value but extends to the manner of the sale," and that "the word 'unless' qualifies both the requirements of the concluding clause."

So far as concerns this statute, in my opinion it leaves the President as Commander in Chief of the Navy free to make such disposition of naval vessels as he finds necessary in the public interest, and I find nothing that would indicate that the Congress has tried to limit the President's plenary powers to vessels already stricken from the naval registry. The President, of course, would exercise his powers only under the high sense of responsibility which follows his rank as Commander in Chief of his Nation's defense forces.

Right to Make Transfers Clear

Furthermore, I find in no other statute or in the decisions any attempted limitations upon the plenary powers of the President as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy and as the head of the state in its relations with foreign countries to enter into the proposed arrangements for the transfer to the British government of certain overage destroyers and obsolescent military material except the limitations recently imposed by section 14 (a) of the Act of June 28, 1940 (Public No. 671). This section, it will be noted, clearly recognizes the authority to make transfers and seeks only to impose certain restrictions thereon. The section reads as follows:

"Sec. 14. (a) Notwithstanding the provision of any other law, no military or naval weapon, ship, boat, aircraft, munitions, supplies or equipment to which the United States has title, in whole or in part, or which have been contracted for, shall hereafter be transferred, exchanged, sold or otherwise disposed of in any manner whatsoever unless the chief of naval operations in the case of naval material, and the chief of staff of the Army in the case of military material, shall first certify that such material is not essential to the defense of the United States."

Thus to prohibit action by the constitutionally created commander in chief except upon authorization of a statutory officer subordinate in rank is of questionable constitutionality. However, since the statute requires cerification only of matters as to which you would wish, irrespective of the statute, to be satisfied and as the legislative history of the section indicates that no arbitrary restriction is intended, it seems unnecessary to raise the question of constitutionality which such a provision would otherwise invite.

Stricken From Navy Register

I am informed that the destroyers involved here are the survivors of a fleet of over 100 built at about the same time and under the same design. During the year 1930, 58 of these were decommissioned with a view toward scrapping and a corresponding number were recommissioned as replacements. Usable material and equipment from the 58 vessels removed from the service were transferred to the recommissioned vessels to recondition and modernize them and other usable material and equipment were removed and the vessels stripped. They were then stricken from the Navy register and 50 of them were sold as scrap for prices ranging from $5,260 to $6,800 per vessel, and the remaining eight were used for such purposes as target vessels, experimental construction tests and temporary barracks. The surviving destroyers now under consideration have been reconditioned and are in service, but all of them overage, most of them by several years.

In construing this statute in its application to such a situation it is important to note that this subsection as originally proposed in the Senate bill provided that the appropriate staff officer shall first certify that "such material is not essential to and cannot be used in the defense of the United States." Senator Barkley and others objected to the subsection as so worded on the ground that it would prevent the release and exchange of surplus or used planes and other supplies for sale to the British and that it would consequently nullify the provisions of the bill (see section 1 of the act of July 2, 1940, H. R. 9850, Public No. 703) which the Senate had passed several days earlier for that very purpose. Although Senator Walsh stated that he did not think the proposed subsection had that effect, he agreed to strike out the words "and cannot be used." Senator Barkley observed that he thought the modified language provided "a much more elastic term." Senator Walsh further stated that he would bear in mind in conference the views of Senator Barkley and others, and that he had "no desire or purpose to go beyond the present law, but to have some certificate filed as to whether the property is surplus or not." (Cong. Rec., June 21, 1940, pp. 13370-13371.)

Ships Not Essential

In view of this legislative history it is clear that the Congress did not intend to prevent the certification for transfer, exchange, sale or disposition of property merely because it is still used or usable or of possible value for future use. The statute does not contemplate mere transactions in scrap, yet exchange or sale except as scrap would hardly be possible if confined to material whose usefulness is entirely gone. It need only be certified as not essential, and "essential," usually the equivalent of vital or indispensable, falls far short of "used" or "usable."

Moreover, as has been indicated, the congressional authorization is not merely of a sale, which might imply only a cash transaction. It also authorizes equipment to be "transferred," "exchanged" or "otherwise disposed of;" and in connection with material of this kind for which there is no open market, value is never absolute but only relative—and chiefly related to what may be had in exchange or replacement.

In view of the character of the transactions contemplated, as well as the legislative history, the conclusion is inescapable that the Congress has not sought by section 14(a) to impose an arbitrary limitation upon the judgment of the highest staff officers as to whether a transfer, exchange or other disposition of specific items would impair our essential defenses. Specific items must be weighed in relation to our total defense position before and after an exchange or disposition. Any other construction would be a virtual prohibition of any sale, exchange or disposition of material or spplies so long as they were capable of use, however ineffective, and such a prohibition obviously was not, and was not intended to be, written into the law.

It is my opinion that in proceeding under section 14(a) appropriate staff officers may and should consider remaining useful life, strategic importance, obsolesence and all other factors affecting defense vale, not only with respect to what the Government of the United States gives up in any exchange or transfer, but also with respect to what the Government receives. In this situation good business sense is good legal sense.

Naval Chief Should Concur

I, therefore, advise that the appropriate staff officers may and should, certify under section 14(a) that ships and material involved in a sale or exchange are not essential to the defense of the United States if in their judgment the consummation of the transaction does not impair or weaken the total defense of the United States, and certainly so where the consummation of the arrangement will strengthen the total defensive position of the Nation.

With specific reference to the proposed agreement with the government of Great Britain for the acquisition of naval and air bases, it is my opinion that the chief of naval operations may, and should, certify under section 14 (a) that the destroyers involved are not essential to the defense of the United States if in his judgment the exchange of such destroyers for such naval and air bases will strengthen rather than impair the total defense of the United States.

I have previously indicated that in my opinion there is statutory authority for the acquisition of the naval and air bases in exchange for the vessels and material. The question was not more fully treated at that point because dependent upon the statutes above discussed and which required consideration in this section of the opinion. It is to be borne in mind that these statutes clearly recognize and deal with the authority to make dispositions by sale, transfer, exchange or otherwise; that they do not impose any limitations concerning individuals, corporations or governments to which such dispositions may be made, and that they do not specify or limit in any manner the consideration which may enter into an exchange. There is no reason whatever for holding that sales may not be made to or exchanges made with a foreign government or that in such a case a treaty is contemplated. This is emphasized when we consider that the transactions in some cases may be quite unimportant, perhaps only dispositions of scrap, and that a domestic buyer (unless restrained by some authorized contract or embargo) would be quite free to dispose of his purchase as he pleased. Furthermore, section 14 (a) of the act of June 28, 1940, supra, was enacted by the Congress in full contemplation of transfers for ultimate delivery to foreign belligerent nations. Possibly it may be said that the authority for exchange of naval vessels and material presupposes the acquisition of something of value to the Navy or, at least, to the national defense. Certainly I can imply no narrower limitation when the law is wholly silent in this respect. Assuming that there is, however, at least the limitation which I have mentioned, it is fully met in the acquisition of rights to maintain needed bases. And if, as I hold, the statute law authorizes the exchange of vessels and material for other vessels and material or, equally, for the right to establish bases, it is an inescappable corollary that the statute law also authorizes the acquisition of the ships or material or bases which form the consideration for the exchange.

III

Whether the statutes of the United States prevent the dispatch to Great Britain, a belligerent power, of the so-called "mosquito boats" now under construction or the over-age destroyers depends upon the interpretation to be placed on section 3 of title V of the Act of June 15, 1917, c. 30, 40 Stat. 217, 222. This section reads:

"During a war in which the United States is a neutral nation, it shall be unlawful to send out of the jurisdiction of the United States any vessel, built, armed, or equipped as a vessel of war, or converted from a private vessel into a vessel of war, with any intent or under any agreement or contract, written or oral, that such vessel shall be delivered to a belligeret nation, or to an agent, officer, or citizen of such nation, or with reasonable cause to believe that the said vessel shall or will be employed in the service of any such belligerent nation after its departure from the jurisdiction of the United States."

Inapplicable to These Destroyers

This section must be read in the light of section 2 of the same act and the rules of international law which the Congress states that it was its intention to implement. (H. Rep. No. 30, 65th Congress, 1st session, p. 9.) So read, it is clear that it is inapplicable to vessels, like the over-age destroyers, which were not built, armed, equipped as, or converted into, vessels of war with the intent that they should enter the service of a belligerent. If the section were not so construed, it would render meaningless section 2 of the act which authorizes the President to detain any armed vessel until he is satisfied that it will not engage in hostile operations before it reaches a neutral or belligerent port. The two sections are intelligible and reconcilable only if read in light of the traditional rules of international law. These are clearly stated by Oppenheim in his work on international law, Fifth Edition, Vol. 2, sec. 334, pp. 874-876:

"Whereas a neutral is in no wise obliged by his duty of impartiality to prevent his subjects from selling armed vessels to the belligerents, such armed vessels being merely contraband of war, a neutral is bound to employ the means at his disposal to prevent his subjects from building, fitting out, or arming, to the order of either belligerent, vessels intended to be used as men-of-war, and to prevent the departure from his jurisdiction of any vessel which, by order of either belligerent, has been adapted to warlike use. The difference between selling armed vessels to belligerents and building them to order is usually defined in the following way:

"An armed ship, being contraband of war is in no wise different from any other kind of contraband, provided that she is not manned in a neutral port, so that she can commit hostilities at once after having reached the open sea. A subject of a neutral who builds an armed ship, or arms a merchantman, not to the order of a belligerent, but intending to sell her to a belligerent, does not different from a manufacturer of arms who intends to sell them to a belligerent. There is nothing to prevent a neutral from allowing his subjects to sell armed vessels, and to deliver them to belligerents, either in a neutral port or in a belligerent port . . .

Distinction Is Hair-Splitting

"On the other hand, if a subject of a neutral builds armed ships to the order of a belligerent, he prepares the means of naval operations, since the ships, on sailing outside the neutral territorial waters and taking in a crew and ammunition, can at once commit hostilities. Thus, through the carrying out of the order of the belligerent, the neutral territory has been made the base of naval operations, and as the duty of impartiality includes an obligation to prevent either belligerent from making neutral territory the base of military or naval operations, a neutral violates his neutrality by not preventing his subjects from carrying out an order of a belligerent for the building and fitting out of men-of-war. This distinction, although, of course, logically correct, is hair-splitting. But as, according to the present law, neutral states need not prevent their subjects from supplying arms and ammunition to belligerents, it will probably continue to be drawn."

Viewed in the light of the above, I am of the opinion that this statute does prohibit the release and transfer to the British government of the so-called "mosquito boats" now under construction for the United States Navy. If these boats were released to the British government it would be legally impossible for that government to take them out of this country after their completion, since to the extent of such completion at least they would have been built, armed, or equipped with the intent, or with reasonable cause to believe, that they would enter the service of a belligerent after being sent out of the jurisdiction of the United States.

Need Not Be Ratified

This will not be true, however, with respect to the over-age destroyers, since they were clearly not built, armed, or equipped with any such intent or with reasonable cause to believe that they would ever enter the service of a belligerent.

In this connection it has been noted that during the war between Russia and Japan in 1904 and 1905, the German government permitted the sale to Russia of torpedo boats and also of ocean liners belonging to its auxiliary navy. See Wheaton's International Law, 6th ed. (Keith), Vol. 2, p. 977.

IV

Accordingly, you are respectfully advised:

(a) That the proposed arrangement may be concluded as an executive agreement, effective without awaiting ratification.

(b) That there is presidential power to transfer title and possession of the proposed considerations upon certification by appropriate staff officers.

(c) That the dispatch of the so-called "mosquito boats" would constitute a violation of the statute law of the United States, but with that exception there is no legal obstacle to the consummation of the transaction, in accordance, of course, with the applicable provisions of the Neutrality Act as to delivery.

Respectfully submitted,
ROBERT H. JACKSON,
Attorney General.

50 Destroyers 'Good Warships' Despite 'Age,' Navy Men Aver

Completed Between 1918 and 1922 at Cost Of $2,000,000 Each; Eight, in Boston, Will Be Ready for British Transfer Friday

The 50 destroyers to be transferred to the British in exchange for naval and air bases were described yesterday by the Navy as "good warships" despite their age.

All of the craft are "over-age" under the 16-year limit of the former naval limitation treaties, having been completed at a cost of about $2,000,000 each between 1918 and 1922. While not the equal of modern destroyers, the 1,200-ton vessels should be of great value to Great Britain in that they can release newer ships from convoy duty for direct combat service.

Eight of the destroyers are now at Boston being prepared for transfer to the British, a Navy announcement stated. They should be ready by Friday. "Others will be made ready when requested," it was added.

All on East Coast

The Navy would not disclose the whereabouts of the other 42 craft. All are on the Atlantic Coast, it was said, and some have been in operation with the neutrality patrol. No vessels will be withdrawn from the Pacific to take the places of the neutrality patrol craft it was stated.

The Navy announcement said the ships will be "in an operating condition" when transferred, which means, they said, they will be equipped for instant action, with guns and ammunition aboard. They are to be taken to Canadian ports by their present crews, where trained British crews will take them to Europe.

Guns Similar

No difficulty should be found in using British shells and torpedoes aboard the craft, as, like English destroyers, they carry 4-inch guns and 21-inch torpedo tubes. Each of the American 1,200-ton destroyers carry four of the 4-inch guns, one 3-inch antiaircraft gun and 12 torpedo tubes. They have a speed of from 32 to 35 knots, are 314 feet in length and carry a crew of 140.

The United States has 123 of the over-age destroyers. Of the 83 to be kept, 46 have been or are being converted to special types, such as mine-layers, transports, antiaircraft ships. The main destroyer force is made up of 78 new ships, all laid down since 1933. Fifty-seven others are under construction.

Contract Bridge

Sam Fry jr. recently posed a neat question to his master solvers on whether or not to bid a slam. How would you handle the problem? Here is the bidding and the cards:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 NT	Dble.
2 ♣	Dble.	Pass	3 ♣
Pass	3 ♡	Pass	5 ♡
Pass	?

You, East, hold:

♠ 10 9
♡ 8 6 5 4
◇ A 9 2
♣ Q J 9 3

What do you bid?

Answer

"Although you have bid twice," explains Sam, "you have really shown no offensive strength whatsoever to your partner. You did show that you believed you could defeat a club contract, but your club holding, from the bidding, obviously doesn't interest your partner who should be void. Your three-heart bid was a forced response—you were compelled to show your best suit over West's cue bid.

"West's jump to five hearts indicates there are only two losers in his hand. Consequently, knowing partner is void or short in clubs, it is inconceivable that your diamond ace, plus your doubleton 10 9 of spades, should not be able to take care of one or possibly both of your partner's losers. You must bid six hearts. As a matter of fact, six diamonds might be an even better bid. This would show your partner the ace of diamonds, and if North had bid an out-and-out psychic, it is not too fantastic to assume that partner may be able to bid a grand slam. Six hearts or six diamonds is acceptable."

U. S. Pushes Out Its Sea and Air Frontier 1,000 Miles East in Deal for Bases

Will Give Navy Wider Area For Operation

Newfoundland, Guiana Sites to Reduce Peril Of Aircraft Carriers

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

As a result of the momentous Anglo-American deal announced yesterday, the United States pushes out its sea and air frontier 1,000 miles to the east.

The eight naval and air bases which the United States will establish on British territory from Newfoundland to Guiana, will give this country a much enlarged area in which to operate either offensively or defensively against an enemy.

The bases will make it possible, naval men say, for American planes and blimps to patrol an area 1,000 miles farther away from our coast line than is now possible, and thus make it difficult for enemy aircraft carriers, say, to reach a point wher bombers could take off for United States industrial centers with any hope of getting back.

1,000 Miles North, Too

The base at Newfoundland will extend the American patrol area about 1,000 miles northward.

The bases to be established in the Caribbean and at British Guiana will add to the defenses of the Panama Canal and also make it easier for the United States to go to the rescue of countries in South America should they be endangered.

Many defense experts are hoping that the United States will be able to enter an agreement with Brazil whereby this country could use Brazilian airports and harbors such as Rio de Janeiro, Pernambuco, Belem and the Island of St. Paul. The hump of Brazil is approximately 1,500 miles from Sierra Leone, a British West African colony.

Less concern is felt by military and naval men about the western coast of South America. This is because of the geography of the Pacific, with its great distances and the remoteness of any great power. Nevertheless, the experts would feel better if the United States had permission to use the Galapagos and the Cocos Islands.

2,000 Miles From Ireland

Newfoundland, the northernmost of the British bases to be used by the United States, is an airline distance of approximately 2,700 miles to the southernmost base at British Guiana, the National Geographic Society said in a bulletin yesterday.

"Newfoundland's famous Botwood airfield, used at one time by the Pan-American transatlantic clippers, and recently by American-built warplanes flown to England, lies about 2,000 miles west and slightly south from the coast of Ireland," the bulletin said. "It is 950 miles southwest of the southern tip of Greenland.

"The defense base at Bermuda, next to the south from Newfoundland, is within 1,000 miles or less of every important port on the Atlantic coast of North America, both in the United States and Canada. It lies about 1,800 miles from the Azores.

"The Bahama Islands group, roughly 700 miles southwest of Bermuda, over which the Duke of Windsor now presides, consists in all of more than 3,000 islands, islets, cays and rocks strewn over some 630 miles of ocean between Florida and Hispaniola (the island of Haiti and the Dominican Republic). The most historic is San Salvador (Watling Island), where Columbus landed in 1492.

Jamaica Vital Site

"Jamaica, 500 miles south of the Bahamas, and on the southern side of Cuba, is one of the vital base locations because of its nearness to the Panama Canal which lies about 550 miles to the south.

"Trinidad, close to the shore of Venezuela, serves as an 'abutment' for the arch of the Windward and Leeward Islands which enclose the Caribbean on the east.

"St. Lucia, one of the Windward Islands only 200 miles north of the Island of Trinidad, has an excellent harbor. . . . This island is about 1,150 miles east of the Panama Canal and faces Dakar, the westernmost point of Africa, about 2,600 miles to the east.

"The southernmost of the defense bases will be located in British Guiana, Britain's only territory on the mainland of South America. It will give the United States a base some 1,450 miles east of the Panama Canal and about equidistant from the Canal and the hub port of the South Atlantic, Natal projecting on the 'shoulder' of Brazil . . . The British took this territory from the Dutch in 1803."

It is expected that the United States Navy will make use of non-rigid airships, or blimps, at some of the new bases. Congress, in the two-ocean Navy bill, authorized 48 of these blimps.

Commander Charles E. Rosendahl, attached to the office of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, made a speech here at the Aviation Forum in May in which he said that the blimps could perform a valuable task in antisubmarine and antimine work. Their ability to travel slowly and fly low, he said, gave them an advantage over planes.

Eden Warns of Invasion

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 3.—War Secretary Anthony Eden, in a war anniversary message to the nation today, said "it would be most foolish to suppose that, because autumn approaches, the threat of invasion is already passed."

Addressing the National Defense Public Interest Committee at a luncheon, Eden continued:

"The contrary is the fact. There is no shred of evidence to show that Hitler has abandoned his declared intention to seek to subdue this country by invasion."

The secretary observed, however, that, with the Battle of Britain still beating "about our ears," August was "for us in many respects the best month of this fighting year."

Then he sounded the warning to Britons not to be less alert.

"At any moment," he declared, "fighting may begin on a large scale in the Midddle East," where both the British and Italians have large forces.

He emphasized the strides Britain has made in armaments, but added:

"There is no weapon in its armory of which the army does not ask for more.

"There is plenty of evidence to cause us to be especially watchful during these next few weeks.

"Vigilance is as compelling a duty today as it has been at any time in these last three months. To watch and ward is our instruction, not as troops that hold passively a defensive line, but as an army waiting to spring should the foe come within our grasp.

"In some respects today our position is the most enviable of any in our history. There are times when it is good to stand alone, especially when you know that you are not going to stand like that forever, and we know that."

Eden noted that "the R. A. F., by its splendid gallantry, strikes the prelude for victory," but added, "It's the army that must deal the final blow."

Opponents Call Ship Trade Act of War

Roosevelt's description of the naval vessels as "overage," asserted that the ships could not be obsolete if they are now in service in the United States Navy and are considered valuable additions to the British navy.

"We sent the British some 'obsolete' guns some time ago, now we are sending them 'obsolete' destroyers,' he said, "and next it will be some 'obsolete' soldiers."

Additional comment from members of the House and Senate follows:

Chairman Ashurst (Democrat), of Arizona, of the Senate Judiciary Committee—"There is no question that the President has the legal right to effect such a transfer. It is a splendid thing, and my only regret is that it wasn't done sooner."

Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota—"Dictatorial."

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, member of the Senate Military Affairs Committee—"I think the President has been wise."

Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, also a member of the Military Committee—"The agreement looks to the defense of America both in giving aid to England and establishment of these bases so badly needed over here."

Majority Leader Rayburn (Democrat), of Texas—"I think it is a great thing for the United States. It gives us bases that are vitally essential to national defense."

Chairman Bloom (Democrat), of New York, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee—"We need what we are getting a great deal more than we need the destroyers."

Chairman May (Democrat), of Kentucky, of the House Military Affairs Committee—"Very gratifying."

Representative Fish (Republican), of New York—"Hitler would be perfectly within the law in declaring war on us."

Representative Shafer (Republican), of Michigan—"There is no longer any need for Congress.

Representative Miller (Republican), of Connecticut—"It's an act of war."

The National Council for Prevention of War last night denounced the President's action as indicating "contempt for Congress and national and international law."

"The greavest threat to American democracy," the council declared, "is the President's impatience with democratic processes as revealed afresh in this arbitrary leasing of bases and transfer of our destroyers to Great Britain."

Challenging Attorney General Jackson's opinion, the council pointed out that The Law Journal, in an editorial August 7, described the destroyer transfer as a violation of Federal statute.

and that, at this stage, 50 destroyers were not sufficient to swing the balance of power to the British.

President Roosevelt's announcement caused no surprise, however.

[A dispatch by International News Service said that the deal would be studied by competent German quarters, but that it was reliably believed that Germany would not raise a storm over the deal.—Editor's note.]

Italian Action Unlikely

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Sept. 3.—The news that President Roosevelt is turning over 50 destroyers to Britain arrived too late for newspaper or for authoritative comment, but it takes little imagination to figure out what the Italian reaction will be to this move. The very fact that it will be of great help to Britain and hence prolong the war is enough to earn for it both anger and bitterness in Italy.

The whole action is so clearly contrary to Italian hopes and desires that there will surely be a fierce view taken of the situation—without, of course, any formal action, in view of the fact that it has nothing directly to do with Italy.

ments in the light of their significance to the empire.

That agreement in principle had been reached on the air and naval bases was made known here two weeks ago, but the British had waited anxiously for the news of the destroyers—especially so since Churchill told Parliament a fortnight back that Britain hoped America would see fit to send these "timely reinforcements" to bridge the gap between the British peacetime flotillas of 1939 and the wartime flotillas they expect to have by 1941.

Officials said it was no secret that Britain needed the destroyers—"for convoys, dealing with submarines and keeping open sea channels between the United Kingdom and the two Americas." This need has become all the more pressing in the face of a formally proclaimed total blockade of British waters by Germany's air and sea forces.

The Germans have sunk at least 30 of Britain's 185 destroyers and others have been damaged. There have been some replacements from new construction, but the number is a secret. However, American naval sources said the 50 over-age ships would give the United Kingdom in the neighborhood of 200 destroyers.

Before the war Germany had 22 destroyers; Italy, 61.

Officially the whole arrangement was described here as "a practical method of contributing to each other's defense requirements." It shows, a spokesman said, how "democracies can insure through negotiations their own and common interests."

The results, it was stated, will be threefold:

1. The destroyers are a "timely reinforcement" to the British navy in maintaining control of the Atlantic;

2. The 99-year defense base leases from the South American mainland to Newfoundland are "a contribution to the security of the United States," a thing which the British recognize is "bound up" with the future of world civilization; and

3. There will be a material strengthening of common defenses in the Western Hemisphere.

The destroyers will come to Britain manned by British crews, and with British names, naval sources said.

The air-naval bases, although remaining under British sovereignty, will lie under the flag of the leaseholder, the Stars and Stripes.

Celanese Increases Stock Dividend

New York, Sept. 3 (AP).—Directors of the Celanese Corporation of America today declared a cash dividend of 25 cents a share on the common stock and a stock dividend of one share of common for every 30 shares held. The previous payment was 50 cents in cash in July and a stock dividend of one share of common for every 40 shares held.

The current cash dividend is payable October 15 to stock of record September 17 and the stock dividend is payable December 10 to stock of record October 11.

Regular quarterly dividends were declared on the company's two deferred issues.

ANSWERING A CHALLENGE

—a second attempt to stifle free enterprise and free trade

AT 10 A. M., Thursday, September 5th, a public hearing will be held by the Alcohol Beverage Control Board in the District Building on a number of proposed revisions to the existing liquor laws in Washington . . . revisions of direct concern to the general public. Many of them, if enacted, would vitally affect the business of legitimate liquor stores.

One of these proposed changes forbids the use of prices in any alcoholic beverage advertisement.

How would this affect our customers?

It would mean, for example, that Clark's Liquors would be denied the right of telling YOU about the savings which our efficient and large scale operation enables us to offer. It would mean that the average person, seeking the lowest available price on any brand of liquor, would be forced to go on a hunting expedition all over town.

It would allow any merchant to quote any price in the store. And the net result would be AN UPPING OF PRICES TO THE CONSUMER!

For years our customers have patronized our privately labeled brands which are comparable in quality to nationally advertised brands . . . but lower in price! The proposed revision would make it unlawful for CLARK'S to advertise these thrifty prices!

This move to eliminate PRICE advertising is an attempt to force nationally advertised brands on the buying public and to stifle the competition of legitimate dealers, such as CLARK'S, who advertise their own brands.

Another of the proposals to be heard at Thursday's hearing, would call for the enactment of a fair trade regulation which would PEG PRICES. In other words . . . PRICE FIXING!

What would be the result?

Retail liquor prices would rise and it would become illegal for a legitimate business like CLARK'S to sell any brand for less than any competitor.

Is this fair to YOU and to US?

Is this the American System of free enterprise, of free trade?

Such a move has been stanchly opposed during the past two Congressional sessions and the Federal Trade Commission previously cited those parties who have been guilty of such attempts at price-fixing.

The success of CLARK'S LIQUORS can be traced to the policy of presenting the finest merchandise at the lowest possible prices. We believe that every fair-minded person believes in this way of doing business whether it be a department store, a millinery store or a liquor store. Therefore, we hope that our customers will join us in vigorously opposing this attempt to stifle the very life blood of our business, and any business, for that matter . . . and that is fair and free COMPETITION!

This is your fight, too! Won't you drop in and sign our petition against the proposed revisions?

The Right Direction

The House Military Affairs Committee has taken a realistic view of the "draft-industry" dispute. It proposes to give the Administration power to commandeer products and to operate industrial plants temporarily, if that should be necessary to national defense. In contrast to the action of the Senate, however, it would deny authority to the President to take permanent possession of the Nation's industries.

Chairman Vinson of the House Naval Affairs Committee has introduced a somewhat similar amendment said to be favored by the Navy Department. In both cases the reasoning behind the Senate's "draft-industry" amendment is repudiated.

Representative J. Joseph Smith's amendment, which was approved in the Military Affairs Committee by a margin of only one vote, goes back to the policy of the 1916 Defense Act. It would permit the Army and Navy to demand that their orders be filled by any industrial plant in preference to orders from any other source. The Government could take over and operate any plant belonging to a company refusing to obey commandeering orders. In that event, however, the Government would pay a "fair and just" rental for the plant instead of taking permanent possession of it, as contemplated under the Senate bill.

Certainly this amendment gives the Army and Navy all the power they may conceivably need to carry out the defense program effectively. There is no excuse whatever for authorizing a general socialization of industry on the flimsy assumption that it is essential to national defense.

In one respect the Smith amendment seems less desirable than the present law. It would permit coercion of industry in the interests of national defense at any time while the conscription measure is operative if the President should see fit to use that weapon. The present law becomes effective only in time of war or when war is imminent.

There is nothing to prevent the Administration from invoking the Act of 1916 at present if it should seem desirable to do so. The decision as to whether the international situation is sufficiently grave to warrant such a step is left to the President.

Congress may find it desirable to broaden the limits of the discretion thus given to the Chief Executive. Yet the general principle of restricting the exercise of extraordinary powers to times of emergency is sound. Congress ought not to abandon that principle merely to put a political sugar-coating on the military-training bill.

Simplifying The Issue

There has been a great deal of confusion in the recent debate as to the relative merits of voluntary enlistments and conscription in the building of an army. On the one hand, we are told that the voluntary method has failed. On the other, opponents of the Burke-Wadsworth bill contend that the mobilization of men without compulsion has never been given a chance.

This is an interesting subject, but it has little place in discussion of the bill now before the House of Representatives. If this issue had been raised in 1935, Congress could have debated it thoroughly and reached a decision as to which is the better way of raising an army. It would have been free to select the system without danger of making a calamitous mistake.

Over a period of years the Army could doubtless be enlarged to any reasonable strength by making enlistment sufficiently attractive. Given time, the only other difficult question would be whether the country could afford to pay for the inducements which would be necessary to enlist 1,200,000 men into the Army and Navy for appropriate training.

It must be obvious to anyone, however, that the issue now comes before the House in a very different form. The period in which the slow voluntary-recruiting method could has been used has long since passed. The question now is simply whether or not substantial enlargement of our armed forces is essential to our national security. And Congress seems already to have decided that question in the affirmative by large majority votes on numerous bills.

When votes on the military training bill are cast in the House it should be clearly understood that the issue is meeting or failing to meet the present emergency. The type of army we should ultimately have may well be left for future debate and future decision when world conditions are less chaotic than they are at present.

Bases For Destroyers

In return for 50 over-age destroyers which Great Britain sorely needs at this time, the United States has secured the right to establish a chain of naval and air bases in British colonial areas in North America.

The transaction is rightly described by President Roosevelt as an "epochal and far-reaching act of preparation for continental defense in the face of great danger." Mr. Roosevelt regards it as "the most important action in the reinforcement of our national defense that has been taken since the Louisiana purchase." He seems to forget the Panama Canal. But that does not minimize the significance of the step that has been taken.

The magnitude of the international emergency confronting this Nation and this hemisphere requires no elaboration at this time. It can be gauged by the vast and unprecedented sums which Congress has appropriated for the rapid building up of our armed forces. It is implicit in the circumstance that the United States is about to embark on a program of compulsory military service. It is the driving force behind increasing demands for speed and yet more speed in developing our armament industries.

Not since the days of Jefferson, Madison and Monroe has the United States faced greater peril outside our own borders. Now as during the period of the Napoleonic Wars and the Holy Alliance the situation calls for bold and courageous action. It is to President Roosevelt's credit that he has seen fit to take such action. Attorney General Jackson's opinion is not likely to be accepted as the final word on the technical legality of the transaction, but the results will doubtless win the approval of the great majority of Americans.

The desirability of the naval and air bases which the United States is now in a position to build on British soil in this hemisphere is beyond dispute. The prospective sites extend all the way from Newfoundland to British Guiana. When developed they will serve as an additional protective barrier for the Panama Canal. They will be of incalculable value in the defense of the entire Western Hemisphere.

A ring of protective bases in the Atlantic will make the invasion of North America by a European aggressor more difficult and far more costly than would otherwise be the case. Through their possession the range and effectiveness of the United States fleet and air force will very greatly be increased. That fact is of particular importance to the Nation at a time when the contemplated additions to the Navy are still largely in the blue-print stage.

The transfer to Great Britain of 50 over-age destroyers is a small price to pay for the advantages we gain from this transaction. Nor can it be forgotten that, to the extent that these destroyers enable Great Britain to continue the war and thus possibly avert a Nazi victory, their transfer serves our national interest. Looking at the transaction in its entirety, our defenses, as well as those of Great Britain, have been very substantially strengthened.

There is the risk, of course, that Hitler may regard the transfer of the obsolescent destroyers to Great Britain as a hostile act by the United States. But as long as Great Britain remains in the field that risk is small.

On the other hand, if Great Britain goes down, the peril to the United States and the entire Western Hemisphere will enormously increase. But even in that event this country now has the solemn and twice-repeated assurances of Premier Churchill that the "British fleet would in no event be surrendered or sunk but would be sent overseas for the defense of other parts of the Empire."

Great emergencies call for courageous action. In the present emergency the two great English-speaking democracies, one fighting for its very existence, the other girding its loins for the defense of a hemisphere, have shown that they possess the requisite vigor, foresight and determination to act boldly and promptly.

The Good Neighbor

In other times and in other circumstances such a person as Lillian Wald might, at her death, have been canonized by popular acclamation. At any rate, Miss Wald had in common with many saints of old, a great humility, a boundless energy for well doing, a singular personal charm, an abiding love and profound understanding of the poor, and a righteous anger against oppression.

She deliberately renounced a life of wealth and ease to live and work in the most degraded section of New York's lower East Side. Some one who knew her at that time said of her: "She is either crazy or a great genius."

But it is probable that her neighbors of the East Side understood her better than that. They soon accorded to her an affection that was little short of veneration. Her least wish, whether expressed or anticipated, had the force of a command. At any hour she could pass unafraid and secure through the toughest streets of the tough Manhattan of the 1890's.

Perhaps part of her secret lay in the fact that she was no respecter of persons, or, to put it more accurately, a respecter of all persons. Throughout her 40 years of residence in the Henry Street Settlement she never refused herself at any hour to any person, high or low, wise or simple, who wished to see her for any reason or for no reason at all. And when she felt the need of advice, as she often did, she frequently went to the humblest and least prepossessing of her friends and neighbors.

Miss Wald was primarily a nurse, and her greatest contributions to social work are in the field of nursing. It was she who conceived and set into operation the first instructive visiting nurse service. She helped to organize the first public school nursing system in the world. But the miseries and evils that she witnessed in her nursing work led her into broader and broader fields of reform. She became a crusader for the rights of childhood, and it was she more than any other who inspired the creation of the Federal Children's Bureau. She fought sweatshops, slums and child labor with relentless energy and with increasing success.

Indeed, it would be as impossible to estimate the extent of her achievement as to estimate the number of her friends. It is said that no one, famous or humble, whose path ever crossed hers has ever forgotten her. And in our day there are few persons whose passage from this earth has been so widely and so deeply mourned.

After 27 Days

It was on August 8 that the first great German mass air raids on England took place.

Those raids marked the end of an unexpectedly long period of inactivity by the Nazis, following their lightning victories over Holland, Belgium and France. But they were not, as many anticipated they would be, the immediate prelude to an invasion of the British Isles. Each passing week has made such an invasion appear more remote. The time has not yet arrived, however, when it can be ruled out altogether.

What is even more surprising is that, given Germany's great numerical superiority in the air, the raids on England have not been unrelenting. Nor have they been carried out with increasing momentum. Days of intense German aerial activity over Britain, with hundreds of Nazi bombing and fighting planes engaged, have been followed by inactive periods of varying duration.

It is possible that the strategy which the Nazis have employed in their air war on Britain has been entirely according to plan. Possibly Hitler has been seeking to wear out Britain's air force and weaken her industrial capacity to the point where a concentrated attack by an overwhelming force would produce the desired coup de grace.

It is at least as arguable, however, that the nature and extent of British resistance have been responsible for the prolongation of the Battle of Britain. In any event, a Nazi victory is by no means as certain as it threatened to be last June or even in August.

There is no way of knowing what damage the countless German raids on British centers have caused. It is reasonable to assume that this damage has been considerable. But it does not appear to have been sufficient to weaken British resistance. The fact that the Royal Air Force has carried out almost daily raids on German and Italian cities, including such widely scattered points as Berlin, Munich and Milan, points to the opposite conclusion. And it may be that these raids have played a part in preventing Germany from using its luftwaffe and its maximum effectiveness.

Available evidence from London and Berlin, the chief targets of enemy attacks, suggests that both sides are improving their air defenses. Of the two capitals London appears to be the better protected, although this circumstance is offset by the nearness of German bases, whereas the British raids on Berlin have to be carried out under the handicap of distance.

In the defense of London the once despised balloon barrage is proving its value. Equally valuable are the antiaircraft guns which, during recent days, have been taking their toll of enemy raiders. But the principal weapon against the bombing plane remains the fighter plane.

In the air struggle over Britain, R. A. F. fighters frequently drive off the raiders before they get to London. When, despite their efforts, the enemy manages to break through the outer ring of defenses, the fighters inflict considerable damage on the invading air armada.

The Nazi aim to "soften" Great Britain and put her completely at the mercy of the German luftwaffe appears to be still far from achievement.

The people of this country are sharply divided into two classes now: The ignorant, illogical, prejudiced and emotional rabble—and those who are going to vote the same ticket you will vote.

Mr. Wallace's Speech

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Henry Wallace's acceptance speech has been read into the record. Full of lofty aims and boasts of past achievement for the New Deal, it descended into politics a few times. Its Heil Roosevelt quality was noticeably stuffy. Likewise the assumption that the New Deal could do—and did do—no wrong.

Mr. Wallace's only regret seems to be that the New Dealers did not have more of the taxpayers' dollars to squander for their country.

John Nance Garner was, we believe, dismissed without so much as a single mention. The deposed Vice President opposed the majesty of the New Deal and its infallible policies on several occasions, it may be recalled. The conclusion is obvious.

The impression left by this speech is that if a Roosevelt-Wallace ticket wins in November, the doling will be merry—leaving the country in a mess that would make the present seem solvency, and necessitate a fourth term to straighten out!

Over its story of the speech The Post head reads: "Third Term to Meet Hitler, Urges Wallace."

Didn't you slip up. Even Hitler won't last out a third term. What you really meant was: "Third Term to Match Hitler, Urges Wallace."

WALTER BAHNSEN.
Washington, Sept. 1.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Secretary Wallace presents rather a sinister desperate attempt to put the American voter on the spot by offering only two choices, as between Hitlerism a dictatorship, and Rooseveltism a semidictatorship.

We the people don't have to choose between any "lesser of two evils." This is our one great opportunity to vote for a far better choice, namely democracy, by voting for Wendell Willkie the champion of democracy.

Auto Inspection

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The automobile inspection service of the District government is fundamentally a good thing. However, after personal experience with it, and on the basis of reports from many friends, I wonder whether it is not being abused by the officials of this service.

Is it properly a prerogative of this inspection service to condemn a vehicle because of dents in fenders and similar defects which have no bearing upon the problem of traffic hazards? For instance, if headlights are slightly out of line a car is rejected. One experience I had, and which several of my friends also have had, is to have the lights adjusted at a reliable garage and then immediately have the inspector reject the car again. This meant a third inspection, with the loss of considerable time, to say nothing of the expense involved.

It would appear almost as if the inspectors were working to procure more business for service garages. Undoubtedly some of the business thus provoked is justifiable, but much of it would appear to be superfluous.

When one considers all of the "wrecks" that are being driven about our streets, apparently "O. K.'d" by the inspectors for owners who obviously are not able to have repairs made, and then has his own car rejected because of a dent in his fender, it would seem that there is something wrong somewhere.

SUFFERING CITIZEN.
Washington, Sept. 3.

Eminent Domain

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Lippmann writing "on the power to commandeer for defense" refers to the power of eminent domain which by the common law of England, adopted here by our courts, permits the Federal Government or the States to acquire private property by condemnation proceedings.

In every case on the subject which can be found in our law reports (or in the English law reports for that matter) the justification for the seizure of private property is based on a design decided upon as an irrevocable fact. That is, the right has never been claimed to condemn private property for a speculative purpose. The Government condemns a plot of land on which the building of a postoffice is authorized by law and goes ahead to build it. It does not condemn a plot of land upon the mere speculation that it may want to build a postoffice there some day.

Now this Nation is engaged only in preparing for a reasonable defense against eventualities not in an actual defense. War is not an accomplished fact. Commandeering private property during a war is one thing, condemning it in peacetime is another. Even under a dictatorship the two ideas are not necessarily confused; the difference in the two is ignored through the doctrine of total domain, which Mr. Lippmann comes close to subscribing to.

The private industries needed for war purposes, so far as they exist and can be seized by anybody today, are in actual operation. If war comes they are right here ready to be commandeered. On the contrary, an army of a million or so of men is a new industry. It does not exist at all, but can only be developed by the power of a Government to call its citizens to arms for training, requiring a year or longer.

The sons of the wealthy and of the poor are equally subject to the call. In addition, the holders of all tangible wealth, the owners of industries, remain liable to the commandeering process as soon as the drafted men come actually into the dangers of a war which was merely hypothetical at the time Mr. Lippmann was writing his article. ARTHUR RICHMOND.
Washington, Sept. 1.

At Taxpayers' Expense

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If printing of the Congressional Record costs the taxpayers $50 a page, I think the practice of inserting purely political material should be stopped at once.

Why Senator Meade, of New York, should add $960 to our already overburdened taxes by inserting in the Record the newspaper editorials about Jim Farley is beyond me, as we all read the daily papers.

Then the Walter Lippmann article in Tuesday's Post inserted by Congressman Boland, of Pennsylvania, was strictly political, and cost the taxpayers $40. If this practice is not curbed, it appears as though a large part of the expense of our 1940 Presidential campaign will be paid for by the taxpayer without his consent. At this time, the most critical in the history of our country, the interest of Congress should lie in making American democracy strong. Willful waste brings woeful want, and it is the innocent who will suffer. A TAXPAYER.
Washington, Sept. 3.

Newspapers And Legislators

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a regular reader of your editorials and the work of your columnists, I am struck with the great superiority of their intelligence and courage over that of the Administration and our Representatives in Congress. This same observation applies to other responsible newspapers.

The journalists of the country have not been afraid to interpret present-day facts as they exist. Administration and Congressional leaders have not faced the facts. Whether they lack the perception to do so, or whether they are afraid because it might lessen the number of ballots cast for them, is beside the point. The only thing that matters is that they are not facing them with resolution and resourcefulness.

Our responsible editors and columnists know that the totalitarian powers exist and that they are ambitious. They know that nothing we can do can prevent them from being powerful and ambitious. They know that no amount of talk can offer the slightest resistance to that power and ambition. And they have done splendid work in putting these facts before their readers day after day. But they themselves cannot act.

They can only point out the actions required if we are to develop the capacity to defend ourselves. The only men who have the legal power to act are those men who hold high elective office in our Federal Government.

In the opinion of this reader, our Government officials, commencing with the President and running right down, have shown an inclination to state facts very small in comparison with that of our newspapers. The same facts exist for them both. The intelligent American reads those facts skillfully and courageously presented in his daily paper.

He does not read about those same facts being skillfully and courageously faced by Cabinet officers and Congressmen. Instead, he is today reading about a repetition in this country of the Blum days in France and the Chamberlain days in England. There was some excuse for Blum and Chamberlain, for the power and ruthlessness of the German military forces was then still unguessed. A politician with one eye on the facts and the other on the ballot box, is not the man to back up a soldier.

The Uncle Sam of the cartoons is a shrewd, vigorous, keen-eyed man of experience. The Uncle Sam presented to us by Congress is a voluble, short-winded man, his pockets stuffed with money, clambering unsteadily to his feet and blinking at three lithe, muscular barbarians who are eyeing him speculatively. He guesses that he will have to buy ten billion dollars worth of guns. But at the very suggestion that he himself learn to shoot, he timorously recoils. Universal military service is undemocratic, he mumbles.

It is our editors and columnists who are doing vigorously the work that must come before fighting, the work of getting the facts and bringing home the realization that we must be ready to fight if we want security. Their jobs mean as much to them as a seat in the Senate means to a Senator. And the continuance of their jobs depends on the circulation of their papers, the willingness of voters to read what they write.

The thinking American newspaper reader is forced to the conclusion that American newspapermen are far ahead of American politicians in genuine patriotism. The latter may be better orators. But the former are the ones who are facing the facts.

Mountain Movie

MAROONED one late summer day in a remote village of the Maryland mountains, I turned, after having exhausted observation of its week-end drunks and slot machines, to a slightly more reassuring manifestation of culture — its movie house.

Quite a large place, apparently new, it was featuring a horse opera at what was proudly proclaimed a "cozy matinee."

Entering from the burning glare of the street was like dropping from noon to midnight; there were no ushers, so I employed the technique usual in such circumstances: groped my way down an aisle, tentatively feeling with hand and knee to discover if a vacant chair were within reach.

The house had a queer feeling.

One sensed the vibrations that emanated from any tense group of people, yet there were no evidences of occupancy; no half-defined, as it were, phosphorescent serrations of the darkness to be interpreted as human heads.

A series of very low-keyed sequences persisted on the screen; I kept on pawing and kneeing in the darkness and finally entered a row of seats.

There was apparently no one in the first, second or third chairs. Thinking all were empty, I decided to sit down.

Immediately there was a horrible sense of yielding flesh beneath me, followed by a slight moan.

Up I leapt in panic and moved on to the next seat, only to have the appalling experience repeated, this time accentuated with a shriek in the treble clef.

A bright flash from the screen revealed the mystery.

I had been sitting on babies!

The whole place was reeking with them. Many, such as the unfortunates I had nearly juggernauted, were scarcely out of the crawling stage.

A large portion were too small to be seen above the backs of the seats, and the remainder were boys and girls in their early teens. I guessed not more than half a dozen adults, if that, were there.

The film, a Western of the very wild type, was full of hair-raising adventures; blood flew, evil triumphed (for a time), unnecessarily exaggerated he-man fights abounded.

Love, meantime, had sprouted on the range, and despite the fact that it was under the influence of Mars and Saturn for quite a while it finally emerged in the full and beneficent light of Venus.

I had not seen such a thing for years and years, and the relief from the customary pretty-boy and pretty-girl, to say nothing of angrogynous types, was great. It was honestly acted by a group of entire strangers (to me), and the photography was very good.

I could not, however, escape psychological and sociological overtones.

What sort of parents are they who empty cradles to fill movie seats?

What is the effect of this terrific excitement on adolescents and pre-adolescents?

Can it be that at their early age they, too, are pathetic escapists from a humdrum life?

Are there no chores for them Saturdays around their farm and village homes?

Do they prefer celluloid versions of ultra-rocky horses and jackasses to the indigenous variety in the flesh; the phantom of cowboy escapades to their own real ones; pictured landscape to the great beauty of their native environment?

I fear that the answer to some of these questions is about the same as Gypsy Rose Lee's, when at the close of her strip-tease act in "Gay Paree," at the New York World's Fair, she archly asks her audience if it has the idea she is thinking about sex and gives her own reply. Its gist is "Of course."

The thought that this "cozy matinee" epitomized conditions all over the country was rather terrifying. It was intensified, when having emerged into the healthful and quite normal light of day, I noticed in a nearby window a vast array of magazines whose vulgarity and obscenity made the mere notion of censorship a moth-eaten joke.

A particularly obnoxious drunk reeled into me at this minute and started to uncork his opinion about the war. Not being particularly interested, I hurried to the station to wait for a train that seemed centuries overdue.

It took quite a number of deep breaths of the expensively advertised pure mountain air, a lot of looks at distant peaks, equally blessed by billboard exploitation, to dispel the effect of unwholesomeness, more, a definite sense of deep-seated and sinister evil, created by those few Saturday afternoon hours in a Maryland village's downtown section.

Property Versus Human Life

THE ISSUE created by the fight against the Overton-Russell amendment to the conscription bill is as clear and fundamental as any which has been before Congress in a generation, if not longer. Some, at least, of the President's friends were astonished by his failure to respond instantly to Wendell Willkie's condemnation of the amendment and challenge him to declare his position on it.

In the belief that the safety of the Nation requires it, Congress is voting to conscript men for the armed services. The men called will have no recourse. They must serve one year, at least, for small pay, regardless of their desires, regardless of their convenience and regardless of the financial losses which they may suffer through giving up other jobs. They may be called upon to risk their lives. Congress is also appropriating vast sums to provide the equipment deemed necessary to the security of the Nation. If the potential danger to the Nation is sufficient to justify the spending of many billions of dollars and, above all, the conscription of man power, it is surely sufficient to warrant legislation to prevent the erection of our defenses from being frustrated or delayed by noncooperative owners or managers of property.

The Overton-Russell amendment would give the Government the power to take over immediately any factory or other facility necessary to the national defense for the use of which it found itself unable to make suitable arrangements by other means. The compensation to be paid to the property owner would be fixed later by the courts in a condemnation proceeding. According to Mr. Willkie and others who have joined in the onslaught, this is undemocratic, un-American and a step toward dictatorship. But it is democratic and American, according to Mr. Willkie, to compel men to give a year of their lives to the armed services for small pay, and perhaps, even to lay down their lives.

THIS IS THE TALLEST pinnacle on which any man could propose to place property. It lifts property above not only personal liberties but human life itself. It puts property above even the highest of all collective duties: the preservation of the Nation on which property rights depend for their existence. The Nazis, the Fascists and the Communists have never practiced or propounded a thesis so deeply insulting to the dignity of the human being.

The Overton-Russell amendment is less stringent than the power to commandeer property voted by Congress in 1916, more than a year before we entered the World War. Under the 1916 law the Secretary of War fixed the compensation for the property. The Navy recently was voted similar authority—although the House turned around and voted to repeal it, for reasons which remain inexplicable. During World War I, the War Industries Board had the power to commandeer, and, because it had it, never had to use it. All the war plans for the United States since World War I have included the power to commandeer property. By declaring an "emergency" the President could invoke the commandeering powers which are already on the books.

MOREOVER, the Federal Government can always condemn property by going through the usual court procedure. This is often a long process. The Overton-Russell amendment was designed merely to give the Government control of property at the beginning of the court proceedings, instead of at the end of them. The compensation to be paid by the Government would be fixed by the court later. This amendment does not impose upon property sacrifices comparable to those which the conscription bill imposes on young men. Under the present national defense plans, business owners will be rewarded by generous profits.

An overwhelming majority of those whose cooperation is most important are already giving it, and doubtless will continue to give it. But there may be instances in which business firms would prefer to continue producing for foreign governments or for private concerns because they can make even higher profits than by producing for the United States Government. A few such cases already have come to light. In them the power to commandeer becomes essential—although if it has it, the Government may never have to use it.

The Overton-Russell amendment could be improved. But the main issue is clear cut and inescapable. If Congress is unwilling to permit property to be conscripted, as a last resort, how can it even consider the conscription of human beings as a first resort?

Culpable Neglect

THE COOPERATIVE attitude of some of the high leaders of the American Federation of Labor in the prewar emergency may deserve some praise, but the fact still remains, because the A. F. of L. had done nothing to cure the situation, that this huge body of unions is infested with crooks who persecute and rob the rank-and-file workers, sell them out to the bosses and use union charters for purposes of extortion. Just as the Democratic or Social-Democratic Party is a cover and front for the heinous Jersey and Chicago gangs in the national politics of the country, so is the A. F. of L. a stall for a lot of powerful and brutal exploiters of labor, including criminals with prison records.

Thus far only one crook has been thrown out by the national body, and that one a small-time gorilla operating a federated union, and even this expulsion was not made voluntarily but reluctantly and under the compulsion of publicity.

ANOTHER CRIMINAL resigned from the presidency of one of William Green's international unions, but here again publicity, heartily resented by the A. F. of L., was the compelling force. Green, far from moving against this crook, had publicly indorsed him as a man of good character. In the shakeup another labor gangster of the Chicago Capone mob was stepped up from the third vice presidency to the first.

Less than three months ago Green publicly approved the leadership of George Browne, the gangsters' stooge, president of the powerful amusement labor racket, at the same national convention in which Browne had the effrontery to laud the character of two vicious Chicago criminals whom he had appointed to positions of great power over the dues-paying members. Browne sits in the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, representing there not labor with a capital L but the gangster underworld of Chicago which put him in his job.

There is another union president who was, in effect, convicted in a civil action of diverting $100,000 of the pension funds of his members and ordered to make restitution. Still another president was a bootlegger who served time for the amiable offense and still owes $550 of a fine imposed in connection with his sentence.

THE TREASURER of one international union is shown to be a renegade policeman who betrayed his trust by conspiring with bootleggers, pleaded guilty in the Federal court and neglected to pay a fine of $1,000, which is still against his name on the books. Another international treasurer served a prison term for stealing from his own union.

Down in the lower grades of union leadership the rottenness is even worse, and, far from attempting to delouse the component unions of the A. F. of L. and protect the rank and file from persecution by ruthless men, the big leaders, even the honest or nongrafting officials, have resented revelations of the foul condition which their complacent and lazy indifference permitted to develop. Green's guilt, in fact, has been active rather than passive, for he shielded crooks by raising the cry of "labor baiting" when it was the criminals who were persecuting labor. In three flagrant cases he gave the prestige of his official position to indorsements of racketeers.

THE NATIONAL leaders of the A. F. of L. had come to believe that their organization was sacrosanct and that just a telephone call conveying a threat of boycott would suffice to silence revelations of the results of their own culpable neglect. Suddenly challenged with facts, Green lost his temper and his head and put himself in the position of shielding enemies of labor within the labor movement.

The A. F. of L. is no cleaner today than it was a year ago, and propaganda journals published by labor racketeers to deceive their members and counterattack the facts are not deceiving the members at all. Thousands of desperate individual workers know from personal suffering that the A. F. of L. is a front for crooks and exploiters and want to be rescued.

The national emergency will not be permitted to cancel out all this corruption of the past or to strengthen the position of union crooks who live high on the toil and suffering of the little people.

Glamorous Past

THE CARIBBEAN, says W. Adolphe Roberts, Jamaica-born author of "The Caribbean" (Bobbs-Merrill, $3.50), is America's "sea of destiny"—and the headlines in the newspapers seem to bear him out. But what concerns Mr. Roberts is the region's colorful past; his book is a tapestry of Caribbean history.

Properly speaking, the Caribbean begins at the Yucatan Channel, where Cuba and Mexico almost meet, and is the basin of water between the West Indian islands and the mainland of South and Central America. But its waters—and its hurricanes—spill over freely into the Gulf of Mexico, so that the republics of Texas and the Confederacy were virtually Caribbean states, and if Panama and Puerto Rico are integral parts of the United States, we are a Caribbean republic today. If the Panama Canal is, as the experts tell us, the keystone of our national safety, then the Caribbean is indeed a part of our destiny; a book like Roberts' is as timely as the draft law.

Time was when the Caribbean was more a part of our national consciousness than California or the Great Plains, and that time includes a period when we were not yet aware that we had a national destiny. Col. Israel Putnam commanded 3,000 North Americans at the storming of Morro Castle in Havana Harbor in 1762; George Washington's half-brother, Laurence, had commanded a regiment at the siege of Cartagena, in what is now Colombia, in 1741. Jamaica did not revolt with our revolutionaries, but she understood them and memorialized the crown in our behalf. Barbados refused to care for North American prisoners sent to that island. Until after the Civil War most North American statesmen had little doubt that all the islands some day would fall into our lap. In fact, Mr. Roberts might have included in his book some mention of President Monroe's ingenious theory that the Straits of Florida, between Key West and Cuba, constituted the proper mouth of the Mississippi River, and Secretary Seward's convenient geological thesis that Cuba was formed of sand washed to sea by the same river and therefore belonged to us.

A PECULIARLY gentle race of Indians, the Arawaks, inhabited most of the West Indies when Columbus began the bloody cycle which Mr. Roberts records. The race died out. Mr. Roberts, pondering why the Arawaks disappeared completely while other Indian races survived, concludes that it was because they had so gentle a religion. "If they had had ferocious gods from whose worship they could have been converted, had built temples which could have been torn down and the Cross substituted," he believes, the Spaniards would have respected them, and the race, like the Mayas and the Aztecs, would have survived. It may be dubious history, but it is a curious reflection in this moment of history, marked by new conquests comparable to those of the conquistadores' day.

The Arawaks died, and the Spaniards imported black slaves from Africa, as did the Dutch and the Danes, the French and the British, who soon began interfering with this Spanish island empire—and that was another fateful step. For, as Mr. Roberts insists, sometimes with less than the tact of the new era of the good neighbor, the Caribbean is a brown-skinned sea today. Haiti is a Negro republic; the Dominican Republic he calls mulatto; Cuba has its infusion of African blood, and the lesser islands are far more solidly black. Mr. Roberts notes a curious fact, however: No former Spanish possession, except the Dominican Republic, which early had an overflow of population from the French half of its island, is dominated numerically by Negros. Virtually all the island settlements of other peoples are.

Even in the Spanish settlements, fears of a Negro uprising were expressed as early as 1568. The French always lived in the presence of such fears—and, indeed, lost Haiti in the first of the great Latin insurrections. The British tried by law to require that the Barbados sugar plantations maintain a minimum of 3 per cent whites—in vain. But the British attitude toward people of mixed blood, and the muddled elements of democracy in their ever-evolving colonial system, saved them from the worst forms of revolution. The British abolished slavery in 1838; but virtual slavery persisted, and in 1865 Jamaica saw bloody riots—punished by the execution of more than 400 colored Jamaicans—which Mr. Roberts recognizes as a rehearsal for a "drama of self-determination," most of which is yet to be written. It would be well for Americans who today talk glibly of transfers of sovereignty to recognize that the Caribbean islands have problems of their own as well as reflections of European problems.

BALBOA rather than Columbus is Mr. Robert's hero of the early days. He dwells fondly on the faint memory of Anacaona, the Arawak princess, of Balboa's Indian wife, the daughter of Careta, and of Cortes' Malinche—Indian women who left a mark on the better side of Spanish administration. He records the founding of the fortress cities, still keys to international strategy. He retells the melodramatic stories of Sir John Hawkins, and of Sir Henry Morgan, the able buccanneer who became Governor of Jamaica. He recalls the Scots' investment of $1,000,000 in a settlement in Panama; they lost it all, but cannily persuaded England to recoup their losses, with 5 per cent interest, as part of the act of union in 1707. And he does not neglect the economic backgrounds of Caribbean history.

The Spaniards—as Mr. Forester's novel, "To the Indies," recently reminded us—sought gold, even in the islands, and neglected the richer possibilities of sugar. For a century the islands were valuable because they guarded the route of the gold fleet from South America; then the rise of the sugar plantations gave the islands a day of magnificence. "Rich as a West Indian sugar planter" was a phrase used by Kings of England who felt themselves comparatively poor. Beet sugar ended that fabulous era; bananas, in later years, have given the Caribbean a new role in world commerce, lending the swampy east coat of the Central American republics a new importance and creating new and more pleasant patterns in the epic of empire.

Today, again, the islands assume vast importance because they guard the approaches to Panama. An understanding of their sometimes glamorous, sometimes sordid, past, such as Mr. Roberts' scrapbook of Caribbean history offers, has fresh value.

The Once Over

Billy Rose, The Artist

Billy Rose has gone in for collecting old masters. The man who rose from a lightning stenographer to a master showman has started his own art gallery. This leaves him still one up on the Shuberts and other rivals.

Billy began his career as a boy wonder with the typewriting machine. He could make a typewriter sing. And if it had occurred to him, he could have made it swim.

He discovered that there were no royalties from business letters and that stenographers, good or bad, never got their names in electric lights. His songs clicked, whereupon he threw away his typewriter and began pounding a piano instead.

He had then dabbled successfully in ink and ivory but was yet to develop any interest in oils.

Presently our hero became a producer of musical revues. His interest in pictures was intense, provided they were his own photographs.

Next Mr. Rose took over the Hippodrome and caused a sensation with his production of "Jumbo," which made him more money but still left him without any urge to know more about Michelangelo. And he still thought Rubens was a restaurant.

Billy then became a Texas colonel and blossomed out as a master outdoor showman. He denies that his interest in art began with a fall off a horse.

When the World's Fair opened, Billy Rose's Aquacade was one of its outstanding hits. Billy's wife, Eleanor Holm, was the star of the show and nobody suspected that Billy was bathing among the old masters.

But around the art galleries the fifteenth century queens and sixteenth century gentlemen in armor were looking down from their frames and murmuring "That Aquacade man is here again!"

Billy used the Australian crawl stroke in making his art selections. And whenever he was in doubt he had Eleanor dive into the world of ancient oils and come up with her best opinion.

Among his first paintings is a portrait of Elizabeth of Bourbon, Queen of Spain, by Rubens. Elizabeth would be no great shakes on a diving board, but she is adequate on a canvas.

The Rose hacienda is also graced by a portrait by Ambrosius Holbein and of a nobleman by Titian. The Titian nobleman seems to stare at Billy and say, "Fancy meeting you here!"

The show world is quite perplexed. When a man goes in for old masters he is generally through with new enterprises. But there is always the chance Billy will corner the art world and put it on Broadway at a $4.40 top.

He announces that his collection will go to the public upon his death. Come on Buddy De Sylvia, George White and Lee Shubert; it's your move.

Back to Simple Stamps!

Big Jim Farley is through as Postmaster General and has the best wishes of millions of Americans in his new job. But this department hopes his successor will do something about getting back to a neat but not gaudy line of postage stamps. Under Jim, stamps were designed in so many shapes and sizes that threes look like specials, ones look like threes and twos look like food stamps. The situation is chaotic and this correspondent calls for a return to the days when you attached a stamp to an envelope and not the envelope to the stamp.

It seems to Elmer Twitchell that those 50,000 planes are being held up in 40,000 ways by 30,000 speeches, 20,000 mistakes and ever so many thousand Congressmen.

Hitler is said to be sending his planes over London by night to break down the British by depriving them of sleep. But on those nights when, after a week of raids, no Nazi planes appear by night at all, the strain may be even greater. We can imagine thousands of Londoners, after six nights of raids, unable to get a wink on the seventh, a raidless night, exclaiming, "What's the matter? Why don't they come? This suspense is terrible!"

The Destroyer Deal

By Barnet Nover

A Double Blow For Defense

WHEN THOMAS Jefferson took advantage of Napoleon's impovishment in 1803 to buy Louisiana from France he was denounced by some as a man faithless both to his principles and to the Constitution he had sworn to carry out. As one historian points out:

"This advocate of strict economy had spent on his own executive authority an amount equal to almost three-fourths of the debt which Hamilton had assumed for the States with the sanction of Congress. This champion of the letter of the Constitution had exercised the power of acquiring foreign territory and promising foreigners admission to the citizenship of the United States, for which no clause could be found among the 'enumerated powers.' This opponent of the extension of the 'general Government' had stretched its power far beyond any point the Federalists reached, and laid the foundation, in the creation of an immense national territory in the West, for that definitive triumph of the Nation over the States which his 'countrymen' of the second generation fought so desperately to avert."

Yet the wisdom of Jefferson's action has never been questioned by succeeding generations of Americans. It was, every one now recognizes, one of the soundest acts of practical statesmanship ever carried out by an American Chief Executive.

FUTURE GENERATIONS may similarly regard President Roosevelt's deal with Great Britain whereby this Nation acquires a string of potential naval and air bases extending all the way from Newfoundland to British Guiana. And a very large number of his contemporaries will not hesitate to applaud him.

It was a courageous and statesmanlike act. At one bold stroke the Chief Executive has strengthened Britain's defenses at a point where she is vulnerable while strengthening our own at a point where we are vulnerable. He has enabled Great Britain to tide over her present shortage of a type of craft particularly needed for the defense of the British Isles against invasion and for the convoy of supplies without which the British could not continue the struggle. At the same time the exchange makes possible a considerable and vital increase in the range and effectiveness of the American fleet, provides additional security for the Panama Canal and makes possible a better and more effective organization of continental defense against invasion from Europe.

THESE GAINS were made possible by President Roosevelt's readiness to pay the required price. Some will argue, of course, that the price is too high. It is being said, for instance, that while the acquisition of the bases is all to the good the transfer of the destroyers is an "act of war."

That requires definition. Poland indulged in no act of war but was attacked, overrun and saw its sovereignty completely obliterated. Denmark, Norway, Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxembourg, could not by any stretch of the imagination be said to have given Hitler any offense. They were punctilious in the exercise of their neutrality; they leaned backwards to mollify the Third Reich. We know what happened to them.

EVERY ONE of those nations was attacked when Hitler believed there were advantages to be derived from attacking them. And we can take it as an unchanging aspect of Nazi policy that this will continue to take place as long as the Nazi system lasts.

The question whether Germany will attack this country or some other country in this hemisphere will depend, first, on whether she has the capacity successfully to carry out such an act of aggression and, secondly, on whether there is anything to be gained thereby. But since we can assume that there is a good deal in the New World which Hitler would like to possess, the question really boils down to whether Germany is strong or weak and, by the same token, whether the United States and its partners in this hemisphere are strong or weak.

If we are weak nothing will save us, neither prayers nor good intentions, nor Hitler's past promises. If we are strong, too strong for the Third Reich to cope with, nothing else will matter.

THE UNITED STATES is today engaged in an unparalleled peacetime effort to build up its defenses. Whether we shall succeed in making ourselves so strong that no aggressor will dare attack us will not depend on us alone, however. For it takes time to carry out the Army, Navy and air force expansion plans that the Administration and Congress and the American people have approved. If we are vouchsafed that time all will be well with us. If we are not, there is no certainty that our fate will not be that of France.

In helping the British by transferring 50 old-age destroyers to them we are buying time for ourselves. These destroyers would be of little value to us if Britain were overrun and we were left alone to face the menace of a triumphant Third Reich. They can have very real value if they strengthen the British capacity to resist.

In the meantime, the acquisition of the naval bases will enable us to plan for the worst. There is thus a double advantage in the deal. It means the strengthening of the last remaining European bastion in the way of Hitler's bid for world domination and the strengthening, at the same time, of the ramparts at home.

French Commercial Counselor Here Resigns in Protest

Gabreau-Dombasle Refuses to Work Under Domination of Germany; Told to Return to Vichy Regime

Maurice Gabreau-Dombasle, commercial counselor of the French Embassy, has resigned his post in protest against Nazi domination of France.

In a statement to the Associated Press last night in New York, Gabreau-Dombasle, who has served in diplomatic posts for 32 years, revealed the Vichy government has directed him to return to France by "quickest possible" means. The order, he added, was the first word he had received from his government since France's surrender in June.

"I have sent my resignation," he declared, "pointing out that I had remained at my post since the armistice simply because I had never received a single word from the Vichy administration and had been left free to defend here French interests, especially those of our colonies, without any possible German pressure. I added that I would never accept any task under German control."

The diplomat's action comes within a few days of the arrival in Washington of the new French Ambassador, Gaston Henri-Haye. Embassy officials stated last night that the present Ambassador, Count Rene de Saint-Quentin, was expected to leave Washington by the end of this week. They added that Gabreau-Dombasle had been "recalled" several days ago, but that they had received no word of his resignation.

The new Ambassador, it was said, would arrive about the time of his predecessor's departure.

D. C. Red Cross Sent 263 Cases Of Supplies Abroad

The District Chapter of the American Red Cross announced that during the first year of the European war 263 large shipping cases containing garments and surgical dressings were sent abroad to aid in war relief.

More than 5,000 volunteers working nearly 300,000 hours produced 414,433 surgical dressings of 22 different types, many of them requiring much sewing.

The volunteers, working individually or in one of 300 groups, produced the bandages and 18,656 items of baby clothing.

The chapter has accepted a quota to knit more than 75,000 garments in a year.

Steel Patent Suit Settled

Pittsburgh, Sept. 3 (AP).—The Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation announced tonight the settlement with the Cold Metal Process Co. of the patent litigation pending in the Federal courts of the Third Circuit at Philadelphia, involving the Steckel patents for equipment and processes for rolling in the cold reduction of steel products.

The company stated that Carnegie-Illinois and other subsidiaries of the United States Steel Corporation are licensed to operate under the patents under royalties set up in the agreement, details of which were not made public.

The agreement does provide, however, the company stated, that equally favorable terms and royalties will be available to other steel companies.

New Zoning Code Extends Park Tax Montgomery Area

New zoning regulations for Montgomery County, recommended by the Montgomery County Civic Federation, will be ready for distribution within a few days to county organizations, it was announced yesterday.

The new code will not legalize nonconforming uses and will require that property for which rezoning is to be asked will bear a placard announcing the rezoning application.

The code will embrace a larger area than present regulations and will bring within the purview of the 7-cent park and planning tax a much larger area of the county. Addition of the larger area was provided in a law enacted at the 1939 session of the General Assembly.

Henry L. West, Journalist, Dies; Once District Commissioner

Began His Career As Reporter in Days Of Longhand Copy

Henry Litchfield West, former District Commissioner and for years one of Washington's best known newspapermen, died here yesterday.

Death came to the 81-year-old author and journalist, who rose from a $6-a-week reporter to high executive positions, at 4:30 a. m. at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Orville B. Drown, 5505 Worthington drive, West Haven, Md.

He had been in ill health for several months, and death was attributed to a heart ailment.

Funeral to Be Private

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Thursday at All Souls' Memorial Episcopal Church, Cathedral and Connecticut avenues. Burial, in Oak Hill Cemetery, will be private.

Mr. West spent most of his life as a reporter, city editor, managing editor and more recently golf editor of The Washington Post, but his varied career took him also to the Washington Herald as part owner and business manager and to the District Building as a Commissioner under Theodore Roosevelt and Taft.

A native of Staten Island, N. Y., Mr. West came to Washington as a child when his father, Robert A. West, became an editor and political writer of Forney's Chronicle, one of Washington's leading daily newspapers of the period.

On his father's death, he left school to support his mother, taking a job on the Georgetown Chronicle and subsequently writing Georgetown items for the Evening Star and the Washington National Union. He obtained most of his education at a night school known as Linthicum Institute, in Georgetown.

Wins a Raise

When the National Union was absorbed by The Post, young West was made Georgetown reporter for The Post, at $6 a week. Raised to $7 when he turned in an exclusive item, he was graduated subsequently to police reporter. With few or no typewriters in existence, he did his writing in longhand.

The young journalist's rise was rapid, and in 1878 he became The Post's second city editor, succeeding Col. Frederick A. Aiken. Subsequently he rose to managing editor and afterward served as political writer and Congressional correspondent, where he came to know most of the notables of the day.

It was then that he gained the admiration of Theodore Roosevelt, who appointed him to the District Board of Commissioners in 1902. Reappointed by President Taft, he served until 1910, when he resigned to become part owner and business manager of the Herald.

As a tribute to his services as Commissioner, his name appears on the Connecticut avenue viaduct, built during his administration, and on his resignation citizens presented him with a $1,000 solid silver dining service.

Mr. West left Washington in 1915 for New York, where he was executive secretary of the National Security League for six years and editor of the Bookman Magazine for a short period.

In 1922 he returned to Washington and his old newspaper, The Post, which he served until 1933 as golf editor. Poems on golf, which frequently headed his columns, and his coverage of most of the country's tournaments, gained him a wide reputation in the sports world. He was the first president of the National Golf Writers Association.

Edited D. C. Who's Who

Since leaving The Post, Mr. West had spent much of his time on Liberian affairs, but served also as public relations director of the U. S. Constitution Sesquicentennial Commission, from 1935 to 1938, and as editor-in-chief of "Who's Who in the Nations Capital" in 1938.

Mr. West was one of the founders of the present National Press Club and was the first president and an honorary life member of the Columbia Country Club. A member of the Gridiron Club for the past 50 years, he served as its president in 1900, and as chairman of its music committee wrote many of the skits in which public figures of the Nation were lampooned at Gridiron dinners.

While a District Commissioner, Mr. West was also in charge of Forum Magazine's department of American politics.

Then and at other times he contributed numerous articles and wrote several books. Among his best known writings are "Federal Power—Its Growth and Necessity," "A Catechism of the Constitution of the United States," "The Liberian Crisis," and an anthology called "Lyrics of the Links."

In 1882 Mr. West married Miss Mary Hope White, of Newark, N. J., who survives. He also leaves two daughters, Mrs. Drown, Mrs. Morgan Stinemetz, of Cincinnati, a son, Vernon E. West, of Washington, and a sister, Mrs. E. J. Enthoffer, of Asheville, N. C.

R. A. F. Hero Who Downed 50 Nazis 'Fails to Return'

Dickie Lee, Only 22, Whose Exploits Became Legendary, Listed Missing; 'Too Good to Crash,' Comrades Say Either Dear or Prisoner

By Drew Middleton.
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 3.—The casualty list said simply:

"Missing—Lee, flying officer, R. H. A., D. S. O., D. F. C., 33208 . . ."

His name was Dickie Lee, a blond, smiling kid of 22 who looked like a collar ad and flew like the devil.

The son of a World War airman, Dickie was a flight lieutenant and the hero of a hundred news stories telegraphed by American correspondents who met him at the airfield near Lille, in France last fall. Until now they couldn't use his name because of censorship.

When he flew out to fight the Germans and didn't come back, Britain's Royal Air Force lost one of its most brilliant pilots.

In less than a year he had become something of a legend.

Feats Legendary

The King awarded him the Distinguished Service Order and the Distinguished Flying Cross in June after he had shot down close to 50 Nazi planes.

But that was only part of the Lee story. A good-natured youth, he liked to sing "Frankie and Johnnie" and "Casey Jones," and other rollicking songs. He was twice captured, and twice escaped.

Once he got away by disguising himself as a French peasant and slipping through the German lines. The second time, as he put it, he just walked away "while there was a hell of a strafe going on."

Another time he was coming back to England on leave. Midway over the English Channel he met two German Heinkels on patrol. Jackie shot them both down.

Trained Like a Pugilist

He could do almost anything with a plane. He trained like a prize-fighter, watched his weight like an actress and knew only one love—aviation.

The last time I talked to him he reported "plenty of fun and games" with Germans in battle over England.

At the airport where he was based they say merely now, "Dickie's gone." But they add hopefully, "Hell, he's too good to crash. If he wasn't killed he'll be captured and no prison camp can hold him."

Almazanistas Issue Vitrual Revolt Call

his government on the side of Gen. Almazan's administration-sponsored opponent, Gen. Manuel Avila Camacho, at the opening session of the "official" Mexican Congress, was the "call to battle" issued in New York last night by Gen. Almazan, who is supposed to be "vacationing" in the United States.

The oppositionist leader's statement, which attacked the President without quarter for attempting to "impose" a man who was "never elected by the people," reiterated Gen. Almazan's claim on the presidency as the "man of the people," and served notice that there would be an imminent reckoning.

His words were regarded by the conservative press in Mexico City as "too hot to print." Four of the largest newspapers voluntarily censored the statement. The labor newspaper, Popular, only publication in the capital to print it, did so under headlines that spoke for themselves: "From Wall Street, Almazan conspires against his fatherland."

But despite the lack of a press, news of the general's statement traveled like the wind through the city and caused the jitters wherever it passed. Two spokesmen for the antigovernment party said it was "premature," and this added to the growing belief that the oppositionists were preparing a showdown in which arms would doubtlessly play an important part.

Claims Most of Army

It was reported reliably that preparations already had been completed for a revolutionary junta of Almazanists in the United States before the end of this week. Reports indicated that the meeting would be held either at San Antonio or Eagle Pass, Tex.

Gen. Almazan is expected to preside at the junta and decide upon the tactics of his campaign, which probably will be initiated in his northern stronghold at Monterey or Chihuahua.

Gen. Almazan, who is expected to return to his homeland before giving the word to revolt, is understood to be in daily contact by cable with officers of the Mexican army, upon whose support the success of the movement probably hangs. His civilian supports claim the backing of 60 to 75 per cent of the officers and enlisted men.

Strasser's Brother Arrives to Seek Haven for Refugee

New York, Sept. 3.—Reportedly here to teach at an undisclosed college and to seek refuge for his brother, a political foe of Fuehrer Hitler, Paul Strasser, a Benedictine monk, arrived today aboard the Dixie Clipper of Pan American Airways.

Through an interpreter, he told reporters:

"I can't say anything. The American press has created a bad situation for my brother by revealing his location no w in Portugal. The Gestapo has been chasing my brother ever since we got to Portugal. We would like nothing to be said about my arrival or about my brother. Everything written hurts my brother and myself."

The brother referred to is Otto Strasser, one-time Nazi party member who broke with Hitler in 1933 and has been a nexile from the Third Reich since that time. A book by the exiled Otto, "Hitler and I," which purports to tell the story of Hitler's rise to power as an intimate saw it, was recently published in this country. Gregor Strasser, another brother, was liquidated in the blood bath of June 30, 1934.

Man Indicted In War College Theft in '28

F. L. Norton Accused Of Stealing $1,000 Camera Equipment

Fred L. Norton, 40, was indicted in District Court yesterday on a charge of stealing $1,000 worth of photographic equipment from the Army War College here 12 years ago.

Norton failed to return to his post at the War College following three days leave in July, 1928. Shortly afterward the equipment was discovered to be missing, according to the testimony of Army officers.

Norton was apprehended, officers said, after the equipment had been traced to a New York City pawnshop.

In another indictment yesterday, Richard W. Tillman, 35, colored, substitute clerk in the City Post-substitute clerk in the City Postoffice, was accused of delaying mails.

Postoffice officials testified that Tillman was discovered with three "test letters" containing money in the compartment of his auto.

Others indicted were:

Allen S. Rouse, 31, colored, housebreaking; Albert L. Valentine, 19; Elmer Buckner, 38, colored; Herman Walker, 29, colored; Jonathan D. Berry, 26, colored; Warren H. Tyler, 19, colored, housebreaking and larceny.

Raymond Jones, 30, colored; Robert Stone, 30, colored, and Charles Dancey, unauthorized use of auto; Sylvester S. Miller, 31, colored; Willis Tolver; Jesse Henry, 47, colored; Maggie Henry, 35, colored; John Hodland, 40, colored; Howard P. Lewis, 28; Ellsworth P. Taylor, 24, colored; Langford Garlington, 30, colored, robbery.

Garlington; Donald Scott, 25, colored; Clyde Scott, 24, colored, assault with a dangerous weapon; Thelma B. Snyder, 28, colored, grand larceny; William F. Coachman and Wilson Baylor, robbery.

Latin America To Hail Deal, Says Brazilian

American acquisition of naval and air bases from Great Britain will receive enthusiastic approval in Latin America, a high Brazilian government official said last night.

Fernando Gama Rodriguez, Brazil's air traffic chief, arriving in Washington to study the safety regulations of the Civil Aeronautics Board, said that his country would do everything possible to aid the establishment of new air bases to defend the hemisphere.

"We must all stick together to defend ourselves," he said. "The defense program of the United States is our defense program, we Brazilians believe."

Urges U. S. Economic Aid

The tall, slender administrator, who was educated at the University of Pennsylvania, made a plea for the assistance of the United States in keeping Brazil free of German economic domination.

The German government, by subsidizing exports to Brazil, achieved a "very strong" economic position in that country before the outbreak of the war, he said, adding:

"Our country, though larger in area than the United States, is very poor comparatively. We had to buy from the Germans, because they sold very cheaply, and while we would have preferred to have bought American goods, we could not afford to do so."

At present, however, with German supplies cut off by the British blockade, "the tendency is all toward the United States," he reported.

"We need very badly the help of you Americans," he said, adding that only increased economic and technical aid from the United States could prevent Brazil from being drawn into Germany's economic orbit once more should Britain be defeated.

Trade Now Booming

"Today," he said, "commerce between the United States and Brazil, to our satisfaction, is booming. In Rio de Janeiro, you can buy everything from neckties to automobiles made in the United States."

Interviewed at the Carlton Hotel, Rodrigues said that he hopes to set up air traffic safety procedures in Brazil modeled after those of the Civil Aeronautics Board.

"The Lovettsville disaster," he said, "means nothing when compared with the amazing record of the preceding 17 months, which saw no fatal accidents in commercial aviation in the United States. By adopting your methods, we hope to be able to do as well in Brazil."

Kaiser's Grandson Reported Prisoner In Canadian Camp

New York, Sept. 3 (AP).—The New York Daily News says Prince Frederick of Prussia, 28, grandson of former Kaiser Wilhelm, has been in a concentration camp in Canada for a month.

The Daily News said that Prince Frederick, kept by illness from leaving London for Germany before war began, had been saved from arrest almost a year by the influence of his distant relative, Queen Mother Mary of England.

Handsome and personable, the Prince was widely popular in Mayfair society. His name was once linked with that of Countess Barbara Haugwitz-Reventlow, but he denied there was any romance between them.

Announcement of his internment was made in London last month. It was indicated then that he had been sent to the Isle of Man in the Irish Sea.

Italians Charged With Attacking U. S. Missionaries

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 3 (AP).—The Rev. Kenneth Oglesby, Brooklyn, N. Y., missionary wounded in an Italian air raid August 23 when Dr. and Mrs. Robert Grieve, of Spokane, Wash., were killed, said tonight the attack followed the refusal of the missionaries to cross into Ethiopia and present their passports to Italian military authorities.

In an account forwarded here from the raided mission post at Doro in the Upper Nile province, the survivors also said Mrs. Grieve had been expecting a child, and gave that as one of the reasons the Italian demand was refused.

Oglesby's wife also was wounded in the attack.

British Bomb Berlin Despite Heavy Fire

Big Part of Two Formations Driven Off, Germans Say

By Percival Knauth.
Copyright by New York Times

Berlin (Wednesday), Sept. 4.—Attacking in the south, west and north of Berlin, shortly after midnight tonight, Royal Air Force fliers met with what is probably the heaviest barrage of antiaircraft artillery the Reich's capital has yet sent up in its defense.

Only two planes, according to the German reports, succeeded in penetrating the wall of fire thrown up around the capital—two planes out of two squadrons.

The British formation, it is reported here, was broken up between Magdeburg and Wittenberg long before it ever reached Berlin.

No bombs were dropped on or in the immediate vicinity of the capital, according to German quarters.

Several British machines were shot down on the way here, it is claimed, some of them exploding in midair when antiaircraft shells struck a vital spot.

Observers in the city saw and heard only the heavy antiaircraft fire in the south, west and north of the city. The clear skies clouded over soon after the alarm sounded but the bright flashes of guns lit up the sky while the empty streets echoed and reechoed with the heavy booming of guns. They appeared to confirm the general belief that over the week-end the antiaircraft defenses of the capital have been greatly strengthened.

It is reliably reported that the British bombed various "industrial objectives" in Germany during the night. They did not, however, attack the Ruhr district, it is stated. The bulk of their forces, German quarters state, was concentrated on the Berlin area. The heaviest fighting took place over Magdeburg.

It was near that city, according to German reports, that night pursuit planes and antiaircraft fire broke up the British formation and forced most of the planes to turn back. Some of them made a wide detour and pressed on to Berlin, flying toward the capital from the north instead of their usual starting point in the west. But German quarters maintain that the British suffered heavy losses and that the attack on Berlin had once again failed of its full effect.

Which "industrial centers" suffered from bombings tonight cannot be ascertained but they are believed to be in central rather than western and southwestern Germany.

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Wednesday), Sept. 4.—The British, trying to mislead the night-long attacks of the German air force set great fires in open places, authorized German spokesmen charged today in describing the unremitting aerial assaults on England which ushered in the second year of the war.

Implying that the ruse failed, the Germans said the fires started by Tuesday's titanic bombardments led the overnight raiders to their objectives without the aid of maps.

Bombs of the heaviest caliber were dropped on southern England through the night, the sources declared.

Meanwhile, from early Tuesday morning until dawn, German planes charged across the narrow Channel waters, engaging Britain's Royal Air Force in battles all along the coast and then driving on to attack air and naval bases.

Pilots back from Monday night raids on eight British harbors described smoke pouring from the southeastern port of Bristol and darkening the skies to 6,500 feet. The damage at three other ports and bases, Swansea and Cardiff in Wales, and Portsmouth on the south coast, was said to be hardly less.

The high command said fires resulted from other night attacks on Liverpool, Plymouth, Portland and Poole.

Airfields Blasted

In the series of heavy raids Monday, the high command said, barracks and hangars were partly destroyed at several airfields on the road to London which the air force is trying to blast open.

At least 54 British planes were destroyed before noon, reports from the raiding squadrons said, 15 before they could rise to do battle. Twelve German planes failed to return.

Hornchurch, Gravesend, Eastchurch and Detling were fields mentioned by the communique.

Birmingham, Coventry and Filton were named as aircraft and industrial centers bombed in central England.

In Monday's battles, the communique said, 93 British planes were lost, while German planes missing totaled 23.

Artist Must Pay Tax on $150,000 Gifts

Nicholas Roerich, artist and museum director, who in 1935 authored an ill-fated international treaty guaranteeing preservation of art works in time of war, was told by the United States Court of Appeals yesterday that he must pay income taxes on nearly $150,000 received by him during a five-year Asiatic expedition.

A Russian, Roerich contended that $73,000 and $74,271.78 received in 1926 and 1927 were to defray expenses of an Asiatic expedition which began in 1923 and ended in 1928. The amounts were given him as a nonresident alien for work outside the United States, he maintained, and as such were tax exempt.

The Court of Appeals upheld the opinion of the United States Board of Tax Appeals in the case in which the board found Roerich liable for taxation. The court further stated that the artist's failure to file a tax return for 1934 was due to fraud with intent to evade tax.

The decision was written by Associate Justice Henry W. Edgerton and concurred in by Chief Justice L. Lawrence Groner and Associate Justice Fred M. Vinson.

Roerich came to the United States in 1920. With friends he formed three organizations in New York devoted to instruction, exhibition and sale in the field of art. He has painted in many sections of the world.

BOOMPSA IN LOTUS. Would you like to laugh until the tears come into your eyes? Then hurry up to see the Lotus' new "Cocoanut Grove Revue" and the customers dancing the "Boompsa-Daisy" with the chorus lasses. Some of the conscripted dancers don't seem to know what the "B. D." is all about and balk like mules when it comes to the "boompsa." Others give too much "boompsa." It's the most riotously funny stunt seen on a Washington night club floor in a couple of years. Gay, too, is the balance of the show. There are "Mr. America" (special treat for the leddy guests); Eileen Morrow, an exquisite dancer who looks like Margaret Sullivan; Kay Karroll, cowgirl yodeler with Betty Boop eyes and ways; flashing duel and parasol dances by the Tom Ball Girls.

Songs from Eddie Dowling's new show, "The Little Dog Laughed," are being played by Dick Koons' band in the Mayflower Lounge. They are "Easy Does It," "Of the People Stomp," "I Have a Song" and "I Want Romance." Maurice Kafka, who's pretty good at picking hit tunes before they become hit tunes, selected the numbers when he saw the Dowling show at Atlantic City.

PARODIES AND LYRICS. Mayfair's "Housey" Garner is parading parodies on "Wishing," "My Blue Heaven" and the "Hawaiian War Chant." They're all hilarious but "Mousey's" idea of a Hawaiian warrior rolls the patrons right out of their chairs . . . "Jivin' Jack Schaefter is the author of the cyclonic new verses to "Man Who Comes Around" that he's singing at the Casino Royal. But he gets those new verses to "Yes, Yes, Yes" from his sepia bootblack who gets around considerably in Washington's Harlem.

SUCCESSFUL RAINBOW INNOVATION. The new 5 to 7 o'clock cocktail dance session in the Rainbow Room is becoming more popular every day. Milton Davis swings into his 7 to 8:30 p. m. novachord concert immediately afterward when folks are through dancing and ready for dinner and softened music.

NOTES ON A PAPER NAPKIN. Max Lowe, the Shoreham's amusement impresario, has trained his smart dachshunds, Puppchen and Waldie, so well that maybe they'll be understudies for Woolford's Dachshunds when the act arrives in town . . . Henri Loussant, New York vocal teacher, flies to Washington once a week to give a lesson to Jim Fitzpatrick of Paul Kain's Glen Echo orchestra . . . Bill Levy, of the Neptune Room, is spending his spare time devising a cocktail in honor of Washington's Redskins. He's going to call it the "Redskin Special" . . . Eileen George, of the Anchor Room, has been entertaining her sister, Dorothy Detton, of Baltimore, who's also a fine contralto singer. They made a point of dropping by the King Cole Room to see their schooldays playmate, Arthur Todd . . . Hi Hat's Marianne Lee recently made a flying trip to her home in Irvington, N. J. Her new boy friend went along to visit Marianne's parents. Well! Well!

Most curvaceous (there's a word for you), singers around town are Bonnie Fleming, of Del Rio, and Yvonne Logan, of Maryland Gardens. Both have Mae West figgers, but Yvonne is dark and sings a la Sophie Tucker, while Bonnie's a blonde and sweetens up her songs in the Kate Smith manner.

NEW BAVARIAN FLASHES. Mr. and Mrs. Tommy (the Cork) Corcoran enjoying luncheon . . . Senator David I. Walsh dining solo, apparently appreciating the Heintze Brothers double piano . . . Proprietors Conrad Siebold and Fritz Miller looking a bit lonely because their wives are now off on the first tropical cruise of the new luxury liner, S. S. America, due to visit the most enchanting spots in Cuba, Haiti, St. Thomas and Puerto Rico.

COSMIC DECORATIONS. The Carlton's new Cosmos Room is being decorated in cosmic fashion. The murals depict the planets, the Milky Way, the signs of the zodiac and the great constellations. My stars!

LUXURY IN LOGS. Old fashioned log construction is in great favor for new fashioned road spots. There's the Rustic Cabin, a dude log cabin, if there ever was one. The logs are varnished! The whole effect is so bright and cheerful that great-grandma would have called it "my dream log cabin" . . . River Bend is another handsome example of the log-house road spot. The log effect appears in both interior and exterior walls and there's a giant fireplace with authentic antique cooking utensils . . . The Gay Nineties, built of logs with the bark left on, has an especially picturesque entrance while soft candle lighting carries out the rustic theme. But there's nothing rustic about Al Oddone's strictly 1940 dance music.

Manager Richard Butler, of Hotel 2400 Sixteenth Street, is going over plans for a record-breaking "formal fall opening" of the Lounge Riviera. It will take place during the latter part of September.

SUPER-SANDWICHES. There are sandwiches and sandwiches. But you'll never find a more palate tickling one than the Harrington Tavern's combination of anchovy and egg . . . The Virginia ham and chicken sandwiches at Dick's Grill are also items for epicures.

MADRILLON'S TRIO LIRICO say they were "Charlie McCarthys for Charlie McCarthy." They provided music and atmosphere for several McCarthy and Bergen movie shorts.

Reports of Soviet, Axis Tension Grow

Hungarians Said To Fear Actual War With Russia

By Eugen Kovacs.

Copyright by New York Times

Bucharest, Sept. 3.—Despite denials, there are reliable signs that Russian-German relations have become worse. German circles here make no secret that Germany and Italy are ready to face Russia, if Russia attempts to go farther into the Balkans.

Agitators in Soviet Ukrania, sent there by the Germans, are busy, and it is evident that Russia occupied northern Bukovina in order to eliminate the center of the Ukranian irredenta directed against the Soviets and supported by Germany.

On the other hand the Russians are aware that the Axis guarantee given to Rumania is directed exclusively against them. They point out that Germany and Italy have granted a guarantee at the moment when Rumania had an open conflict with Russia through not giving a satisfactory answer to Russian protests concerning the frontier incidents.

Copyright by New York Times

Budapest, Sept. 3.—Hungarian Foreign Minister Count Csaky is reported to have told the foreign affairs committee of the chamber of deputies today that "Hungary may have to prepare for a blood sacrifice in the near future."

Many persons believe that the foreign minister was not referring to the likelihood of bloodshed in Transylvania but to the possibility that war between the Axis and Russia may break out soon.

Hungary—now possessing a long Carpathian frontier—would have to defend it with her fellow members of the dormant anti-comintern pact. Budapest is convinced that the danger of a Ruso-German conflict is nearer than ever.

Turks Agree

Coast Raiders Unchallenged

British first line fighter airports.

At about 1:10 p. m. 18 bombers crossed the coast, flying just below a layer of clouds at 10,000 feet. They were accompanied by about 50 fighters which buzzed around, high above them, moving out from formation to the southwest and the northeast, obviously looking for British fighter patrols.

All Escaped Ground Fire

Coastal antiaircraft batteries immediately opened fire. They filled the sky with shrapnel in the vicinity of the German squadron, but the bombers moved on through the barrage without the loss of a single plane.

In a few minutes they were over the correspondents' heads, about 20 miles inland. Again antiaircraft batteries took a crack at them, but they flew over with their squadron intact, and disappeared into the London patrol area before the London fighters finally intercepted them.

The Germans recently claimed that they had knocked the Manston airport out of action and they have made similar claims about the Hawkinge and Lymphe airports which, like Manston, are located near the Channel.

These German claims are exaggerated. In the past two days this correspondent has been allowed to go over all three of these airports. It is true that some of the buildings at all three airports have been smashed, but the fields have been repaired and they are being used whenever Royal Air Force officials consider it wise.

At the same time it must be admitted that the Germans are at a great advantage in operating against these fields. They send their fast fighters over with a few light shrapnel bombs early in the morning when the sun is at their backs. These fast fighters swoop down out of the sun, drop bombs, and make off. While the damage can be repaired within a day, the Germans do not seem to mind coming over.

No Handicap to R. A. F.

R. A. F. officers explained today that it was no handicap to operate against German bombers from bases in the London area. Since the airports in the London area are only about 50 miles from the Channel, they say, British fighters can climb up to attack just as well from there as from Manston, Lympone or Hawkinge.

There was some evidence to support this theory today, for shortly after a German bomber formation went into the London patrol area, it came back with its formation broken up and with Hurricanes and Spitfires in pursuit.

While the constant use of front-line airports may not be essential for the defense of London their loss might be exceedingly important when and if the Germans try to land on the Kentish coast.

It has long been admitted that if the British fighting planes have any weakness it is that they use up a lot of gasoline and can only travel at topspeed for about 50 minutes. If during an invasion they had to take off from the London area to fight German bombers covering a landing they certainly would be handicapped.

Though it is evident from the battle being fought here that the Germans definitely have not cleared a way yet for an invasion, one is impressed down here by the lack of shipping in the English Channel.

No Ships Seen

Warships still are safely based at Portsmouth, and small armed trawlers keep guard, but that is all one sees. In a trip from Dover to Falmouth and back again along the coast, this correspondent saw very few merchant ships of any description, and though an occasional convoy still runs the gantlet around the Kentish coast and up the Thames, almost all merchant shipping is steering clear of the south and southeast coasts.

In peacetime the Channel between Dover and Calair looks like the Narrows at the entrance of New York harbor, but this morning there were only a few small ships inside the breakwater.

The people down here, however, and especially the officers and men in the services, are growing confident about the prospect of winning the war. The men in the air force act and talk like members of a winning team, and their only complaint is that the Germans have not yet attempted a landing.

Ringleader Shot Down

Nine of the 36 convicts who shot their way to freedom yesterday from the Cummins Prison Farm in Arkansas were recaptured during the night-and-day-long search through two States. Four deaths were counted.

Frank Conley, 34, one of the ringleaders in the massed escape, was shot down by posse bullets on the levee of the Ouachita River here at noon today, only 50 yards from the spot where Frank Gartman, a possemen, was killed last midnight.

The fleeing convicts killed a guard in their break for freedom. The body of an unidentified convict was washed ashore in the Arkansas River near the prison farm today.

Two of the desperadoes were taken in a gun battle near Texarkana, far from the prison farm, six others were caught without bloodshed, and one was found shot and wounded in a cabin in Arkansas. Twenty-five still were at large, most of them believed hiding near the prison farm.

Nazis Reported Preparing to Use 'Secret Weapon'

Berlin (Wednesday), Sept. 4 (U.P.).—Authorized quarters close to the German high command today said Nazi warplanes, by destroying R. A. F. bases, are bringing near the hour when Adolf Hitler's never-used "secret weapon" will be employed against the British Isles for a knockout blow.

Repeating the threat made by Hitler a year ago, these quarters declared that the conquest of Britain would be assisted by "means of attack totally new—a truly secret weapon."

The source turned back further questions, stating:

"It is a means of attack unknown to all previous warfare—that is all I can say."

Montgomery Sets Public Hearings On Rezoning Pleas

The Montgomery County commissioners yesterday set dates for public hearings on petitions for rezoning of the front of 2,439 feet of the Congressional Airport at Halpine, Md., to a depth of 300 feet from residential to commercial and for a similar petition for property on the other side of Rockville pike owned by Mrs. Philander Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Jackson W. Wisner, Wesley I. Sauter and Anna P. Field.

Hearings on the petitions will be held October 8 at Rockville Courthouse at 2 p. m., following advertisement in county papers. The Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission has recommended disapproval of the applications.

The commissioners also set a hearing for rezoning on property owned by L. E. Beach and others on the west side of the Washington-Olney road at Norbeck from acreage to commercial.

Iron Guard Foiled in Plot to Kill Carol; 3 Shots Are Fired Into Palace

been disclosed authoritatively that the Germans intended to line Rumania's Soviet frontier, along Southern Bucovina, with panzer divisions not later than September 15.

At the time the Nazis, along with Italy, ordered Rumania to yield to Hungary, they guaranteed this country's shrunken frontiers.

Some informed Rumanians said, too, they feared that Rumanian troops returning from Transylvania might turn their arms over to the peasants, a vast number of which already have organized corps to resist the cession.

In northern Transylvania, men died in armed clashes between Rumanians and members of the Hungarian minority, and there was a prospect of even graver outbreaks. Defying orders from Bucharest to yield, Rumanians fought for possession of communications, railway stations and military barracks.

In Cluj, the Transylvanian capital, shouting thousands filled the streets carrying placards proclaiming:

"We will fight!"

Here in the capital, crowds demonstrated in protest against the Transylvanian cession.

The King himself was reported by qualified persons to have lost 33 pounds in the continuous official nightmare that began when Russia marched into Bessarabia and Northern Bucovina last July 1, taking those areas by ultimatum.

Ever since the Vienna conference of last week, during which the agents of Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini decided that Rumania must yield again, this time to Hungary, extraordinary precautions had been taken to guard the King from assault.

The attempt upon King Carol's life occurred within sight of hundreds.

Inside the palace, at the time of the attack, the tired monarch's council of ministers was reported holding another in an almost endless series of meetings.

Many shots were fired in the palace grounds here before the attackers were overcome and hustled away by soldiers in the car in which they had arrived at the palace.

Wreck Switchboards

Several men entered the telephone exchange and wrecked some of the switchboards with hatchets. Most local lines were put out of order. The radio station went off the air after a group of men in uniform burst in and tried to destroy the equipment.

All were arrested.

The fact that a coup had been attempted was acknowledged in an official communique, but the effort to kill King Carol was minimized.

"A young man at the same time fired a series of shots from a revolver in front of the palace in a demonstrative way," was the only reference to the palace shooting.

The various groups made no secret that they were Iron Guardists. In the palace grounds they threw out hundreds of manifestos signed by Horia Sima, the Iron Guard leader who recently resigned from the cabinet.

Demand Abdication

These leaflets called for immediate abdication of Carol and for Prince Mihai to be proclaimed king in his stead.

(Prince Mihai—Michael in English—will be 19 in October. He ruled as King from May 10, 1929, to June 7, 1930, while his father, the present King, was in self-exile in Paris.)

Another circular, signed "Iron Guard," said:

"The nation demands capital punishment for those to blame for Rumania's present troubles.

"We demand an extraordinary tribunal to judge those who brought the country to disaster . . . They are selling out the country. It is treachery . . . Those to blame are still in the government and are persecuting the Iron Guard, the only political force which can cope with this difficult moment."

Hungary Expects Bloodshed

Copyright by New York Times

Budapest, Hungary, Sept. 3.—According to information available here the situation in Rumania is becoming increasingly alarming. Since the news of the attempted assassination of King Carol was received, all telephonic communication with Bucharest has been cut off.

It is apparent that the state of northern Transylvania is now chaotic. More than likely considerable blood will be shed when the Hungarian troops begin formal entry of that portion of the province which was awarded to Budapest by the Vienna arbitrators.

Some sources believe that should the Rumanian troubles worsen during the next 24 hours, the Hungarian army might march in more rapidly than scheduled. As presently arranged, the troops will cross the frontier Thursday morning.

Italy Claims 4 British Warships Damaged by 'Pixilated' Bombers

2 Running Fights Near Malta Base Reported by Rome

By the Associated Press

Rome, Sept. 3.—Italian fliers attacking British naval units with small, "pixiliated" dive-bombers were reported today to have damaged a battleship, an aircraft carrier, a cruiser and a destroyer in two running fights near Malta in the central Mediterranean.

Squadrons of "Picchiatelli"—little divers or "flying fools"—developed expressly to harass British shipping, also downed four challenging British planes which took off from the aircraft carrier, the high command announced. Three Italian planes were lost.

Romans said the word "Picchiatelli" first entered the Italian language as a translatoin for "pixilated," as used in an American movie, "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," to designate a person slightly crazy.

The first British naval unit was sighted leaving Valletta Harbor, Malta, early yesterday morning, and the second group was engaged in the afternoon about 30 miles southeast of the island.

Setfani, the official news agency, said one battleship, struck by two heavy bombs, turned away and abandoned formation while other bombs badly daamged the aircraft carrier.

British ships put up a hot anti-aircraft barrage, bringing down at least one Fascist plane. Its crew bailed out and when a Fascist Red Cross seaplane sought to rescue the pilots it was machine-gunned repeatedly by British pursuit planes, Setfani reported.

Italian pilots meanwhile reported large-scale British naval operations throughout the Mediterranean area from Gibraltar in the west to Cyprus in the east.

Three British bombers were reported downed and two others were believed to have crashed in a continuation of raids on northern Italy. The daily communique said 2 persons were killed and 15 injured at Genoa.

British Fall Back

Copyright by New York Times

London, Sept. 3.—The withdrawal from Buna, 50 miles south of the Kenya frontier, was announced by the British today, confirming previous Italian claims.

Buna was the advance point to which the British retired when the Italians, driving south from Ethiopia, created a bulge which took in the evacuated Moyale. Buna is only an advanced post. The main British base is at Wajir, on to which the British, presumably have retired.

The British might stand at Wajir which has an unlimited supply of water, and where trails meet from the north, the east and the south.

Meanwhile, the British are awaiting the principal Italian attack which is expected to come from Libya and to be directed against Egypt, or else from Ethiopia, against Sudan.

R. A. F. Repeats Raid

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 3.—Flying over the fiercely burning fire started by their previous day's bombing of Assab, Eritrea, Royal Air Force bombers yesterday dropped more bombs on the target area, including naval jetties and warehouses. The speed of the attack made it impossible to observe the results.

In the Buna area in Kenya, south of Moyale, South African air force planes discovered Italian troops and sent small bombs among the concentration's truck convoys. Rhodesian squadrons reconnoitered this area where the Italians have been active for several days.

Italian bombers, escorted by fighters, attempted to raid Malta today. It was said that their bombs caused no damage.

Tokyo Reported Seeking Haiphang

nese insisted on immediate use of Haiphong, main port on the Gulf of Tonkin, as a military base—and the right, as well, to move Japanese troops over the French-owned Yunnan Railroad to the Chinese border.

China's foreign minister, Wang Chung-Hui, already has declared that Chinese forces will invade Indo-China if the Japanese send troops there."

Although Reuter (British) dispatches from Saigon, French Indo-China, said the Japanese army ultimatum had been rejected, Hanoi informants asserted the Petain-appointed governor-general, Vice Admiral Jean Decoux, had decided to try to delay a decision and seek further instructions from Vichy.

(Vichy has acknowledged there is a revolt against the present French government in Indo-China.)

Chinese officials in Hongkong said the Chinese Ambassador to France had warned the Chungking government last week that Vichy was liable to accede.

The Japanese presumably would transport their troops by sea to Haiphong, whence the Yunnan Railway runs 220 miles to the Chinese border and from there 200 miles farther to Kunming, capital of Yunnan Province and nerve center of China's internal and international land and air communications.

An advance by this route would enable the Japanese to flank strong Chinese armies and formidable mountain barriers which for ten months have frustrated their thrusts toward China's back door.

(Domei, the Japanse news agency, reported an agreement already had been effected to permit Japanese commercial planes to land at Hanoi on the Japanese Japan-Formosa-Thailand line.)

Doctor Calls Ghost A Home Wrecker

Los Angeles, Sept. 3 (AP).—A Hollywood doctor testified in the trial of his divorce suit today that he was "in the throes of agony" when he believed his wife to be in love with a spirit, named Sho Sha.

"After Sho Sha told her through a trumpet at a seance that he was her soul mate," Dr. William Boyce, an eye specialist, testified, "her whole attitude toward me changed. It was as though she was in love with another man." Sho Sha came into their lives in 1936, he said.

Tahiti Decides To Stay at War Beside Britain

5,564 Votes Cast For Gen. De Gaulle, Only 18 for Petain

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 3.—The headquarters of Gen. Charles DeGaulle, leader of dissident French forces, announced tonight that the Southern Pacific isle of Tahiti had decided to continue in the war on the side of Britain.

DeGaulle declared other French islands in Oceania are expected to follow Tahiti's decision.

The Tahiti governor was said to have been repudiated by the population and the council of three appointed to administer the islands.

Vote Is 5,251 to 18

(Tahiti, about 2,000 miles south of Hawaii and about 2,200 miles northeast of New Zealand, is the largest of the French Society Islands in the Pacific Ocean. Its area is about 600 square miles. Its population in 1936 was 19,029 inhabitants.)

Papeete, Tahiti, Sept. 3 (AP).—A plebiscite held on Tahiti and other French islands in Oceania resulted in 5,251 votes being cast for Gen. De Gaulle, and 18 votes for Marshal Petain, of the French government at Vichy, France. The results were announced today.

Petain Asks Colonial Support

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, Sept. 3.—In a radio broadcast to the French Empire today Marshal Petain asked for support for the mother country.

Petain's message follows the action of the government in changing the governors of Indo-China, Cameroon and Chad where, the British government claims, there have been native movements of revolt against the Vichy government.

Today another decree was published, removing Ange Bayardelle as governor of New Caledonia and appointing Paul Nouvel de la Fleche as his successor. The government here maintains that discords there and in other colonies have been exaggerated, and will be easy to suppress since they have only involved a few officials and have not touched the native populations.

Recent financial orders, authorizing government purchases of supplies in the colonies and reimbursement for stocks that have been laid in, are expected to have a powerful effect in stimulating Empire loyalty.

"Message of Truth"

"This is the first time since the armistice," said the marshal in his broadcast, "that the voice of France has been heard by the entire empire. I wanted this first message to the populations overseas, their governors, their French colonial citizens and those under French protection to be a message from the chief of state.

"It is a message of truth and confidence. That is why I tell you frankly that France has lost the war. Three-fifths of her territory has been occupied. She is making ready to endure hardships this winter and must be prepared to face the most difficult tasks. But her unity, forged by 1,000 years of sacrifices, remains intact. It must not now be broken.

"Our first duty is to obey and our second is to aid the government in its task without stint and without seeking selfish benefits. The empire will respond to the nation's appeal by answering 'present.'"

British Repel Nazis in Three Raids on London

logne to Calais, appeared to be the most severe of the war as they passed the three-hour mark early Wednesday morning. The drone of British planes was almost incessant as they passed over the coast in relays.)

London's first alarm of the day, at 10:22 a. m., (4:22 a. m. E. S. T.) came soon after a large force of bombers and scores of Nazi fighters roared over the coast toward the capital. There were hundreds of planes in the formation.

British fighters immediately rose to the battle.

After an hour, the Germans jettisoned their bombs and turned back with the British in pursuit.

Soon the Britons returned, several doing their "victory roll" to indicate further triumphs over the Nazis.

The Germans—observers said 300 planes—quickly returned to the fray with another huge assault, this time over the Thames Estuary. The second alarm in London sounded at 2:50 p. m. (8:50 a. m., E. S. T.,) but again the battle was fought out before it reached the city's environs.

Sirens sounded for the third time in the London area at 11:35 p. m. (5:35 p. m., E. S. T.,) but the all clear sounded within 20 minutes.

An air ministry communique meanwhile said:

Further reports of Monday's action's confirm that eight more enemy aircraft were shot down yesterday (Monday) by antiaircraft fire. This brings the total enemy aircraft destroyed yesterday to 55, of which 12 were shot down by antiaircraft fire.

"Final reports of yesterday's actions show that 20 of our aircraft were lost, 10 of the pilots being safe."

Power Works Bombed

London, Sept. 3.—Extending the air offensive to new objectives in Italy and Germany, Royal Air Force bombers early today and last night struck their first blow at Italy's greatest asset and potential liability—her electric power stations—by bombing the large electricity works in Genoa.

Valuable as had been the raids on airplane factories at Turin and Milan, it has been suggested that they probably do not do more than temporarily halt the output. Even if the Fiat works at Lingotto, near Turin, were blasted, the underground factory nearby at Moncalieri could take up and continue production.

But if Italy's major hydroelectric and thermoelectric stations, scattered mainly over the northern portion of the peninsula, were hit hard, there would be a good chance, it is held, of disrupting Milan's great electrically operated industrial network and of paralyzing the electric railways.

Italy is the principal European electric power producing country, and the third in the world, after the United States and Canada. In the area regularly visited by the R. A. F. there are 809 power stations out of Italy's total 1,198, and these are mostly linked with each other to form the backbone of the nation's supply.

Indictments Near For French Chiefs

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Vichy, Sept. 3.—It was announced today, on the anniversary of France's entry into the war, that the investigation by the supreme court at Riom to fix the respensobilities for the French defeat had reached such an advanced stage that indictments can be expected within a few days.

Judging by the attacks of the state-controlled press, it is probable that former Premieres Edouard Daladier, Paul Reynaud and Leon Blum will figure as defendants in the trial, as well as Gen. Maurice Gamelin, former commander in chief of the Allied armies.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Band Musician's Best Girl Is Vexed by His Week-End Fishing Trips, Which Leave Her With Nothing to Do

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been going regularly with a certain man for nearly two months. He seems quite devoted and comes to see me every chance he gets—during the week—which averages about twice a week. He is a musician and works at night. But my problem has to do with the way he spends his week-ends. Invariably, he goes fishing with some of the boys in the band.

He seems to think I'm foolish for objecting, but it is exasperating. Isn't there some tactful means I can use to persuade him that I want his company over the week-end, as well as during the week? I have thought of making other dates for Saturday nights, but I don't want to make him angry. The way I feel, I don't want to cause a complete break-up over the issue.

He is grand in every other respect and we get along beautifully, as our interests are much the same. At first, I couldn't have asked for a nicer beau; but that was before he started these week-end fishing trips. At the risk of sounding silly, I feel I must ask your disinterested advice. If it were a case of another girl, I would know what to do—but fishing is something I just can't cope with. MELISSA.

Complaint Gives Rise To Many Thoughts

DEAR MELISSA: Your complaint gives rise to many thoughts. Firstly, it seems to me the man is to be complimented, rather than reproached, for that drive-toward-normalcy which prompts him to want to go fishing of week-ends, and get away from the nervously exhausting spectacle of futile, frivolous commercially regimented "night life"—to which he is professionally subjected most of his waking, working hours. I should think he might be a far less attractive person than he is, because less healthy both physically and nervously, if he circled back on his workaday tracks in his off-duty hours.

Secondly, your unwarranted presumption in wanting to take over the man's life and reduce him to the status of accessory to your convenience or pleasure—and this on the basis of a little sentimental interest he has shown you—gives one to think he has more to deplore about your behavior, than you have to bewail about his.

Your feeling of injury suggests that you are the "gimme" type of sweetheart; that you are instinctively more intent on serving yourself in a romantic relationship, than you are in contributing to the other person's sense of well being. And this might mean that you are—and have been—getting just about as much of the man's attention and company as you deserve; or as much as he can afford to give you, without penalizing himself unduly.

Thirdly—and now I speak from the "advisory" angle—the way to "cope" with his fishing trips is to offer them no resistance. Instead, send him gladly on his way (because you know he likes fishing and because the getaway is so good for him) and welcome him happily back with a warmly cheerful interest in all the yarns the week-end begets—about the fish he caught and the bigger ones that got away.

The magnetic quality of this kind of attitude—which symbolizes that "understanding mind" which Man is always looking for (and too seldom finds), in Woman—is better calculated to make him want to remain in town with you, than any self-concerned arguments you might put to him in artfully wheedling vein.

It's too bad that you are so egocentric you must pretend an attitude that properly should spring from the heart. But by going through the motions, the nobler feeling may come after. If you were genuinely in sympathy with the man's need of and preference for fisherman's week-ends, I believe that fuller companionship you desire would blossom almost effortlessly.

How so? Why, because in addition to being captivated by the happy sense of freedom-linked-with-understanding that he would find in the relationship, he would be piqued by the challenging implication of your independent ability (and cheerful intention), to console yourself thoroughly in his absences. And this, if he cared for you at all, should compel him irresistibly to stick around over the week-ends, lest some other chap get the inside track. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

(Soliloquy of a Returned Vacationist.)

Thank Heaven, that's over!

No more dressing on trains—having a porter trying to take down or put up my bed before I am ready; trying to put on a girdle, doubled up like a jumping jack in my berth; trying to find all the little odds and ends I dumped in the hammock; trying to emerge gracefully, overnight case in hand, from behind the green curtains without colliding with the projected rear end of the fat man across the aisle; lugging clothes and toiletries to the dressing room and competing with coldly staring women for mirror space; undergoing the shock of seeing my own dingy, travel-worn reflection in the harsh light that streams in on the lurching mirror.

No more living out of a suitcase—pawing through the contents in a frantic search for the mascara brush and bedtime pills I forgot to put in; finding that the belt to my most important dress has been left behind; taking out "wrinkle proof" garments to find them in a thousand creases; finding the mouth wash bottle has leaked over my best chiffon dress; taking along light dresses and finding the weather suddenly rainy or cold; taking along "fallish" ones and finding the mercury soaring toward 100 degrees; finding my permanent sagging and remembering I left my electric curling iron behind; carrying along my cocktail dress and never unpacking it; having to borrow an evening dress for an unexpected invitation; returning home and going through the drab ordeal of getting every little thing back into its accustomed niche.

No more hotel life—trying to get information from sleek bored robots at the desk; being appraised suspiciously in my comings and goings by lady floor managers; having bellboys knocking on my doors at unexpected moments; looking at pictures of Dutch windmills and stags at bay; having the depressing sense of being somebody else as I enter my strange, impersonal, faintly musty room; having to pay tribute to somebody every time I stick my head out the door.

No more experimental eating—trying to study the righthand side of the menu to the accompanying lurches of the train diner; trying to find places in strange towns that are "interesting" and landing in dirty holes in the wall; ordering sandwiches at barbecue stands on motor drives and regretting it afterward; landing in American plan hotels where breakfast is not served after 8:30; heroically downing at hostess's tables all the things I don't like and all the foods that give me hay fever, nervous indigestion, high blood pressure, flat feet and bad dreams.

No more being on dress parade—looking and acting my brightest and best to show what a wonderful time I am having trying to be clever and scintilating to pay for my bed and board; putting up my best front to face old friends or meet new acquaintances; being excited and exclamatory over every view, hill, monument, old house, antique, garden, canning factory or municipal auditorium; being ready at any time of the day or night for a game of bridge, tennis, golf, pingpong or leapfrog.

No more being a stranger in a strange land—getting mixed up on which is north or south; having a strange beauty operator do my hair leaving a funny little horn at the side; having a strange manicurist gouge my finger nails; getting panicky at the remembrance that my favorite doctor, dentist, lawyer, preacher, grocer, druggist and department store are far, far away; getting confused reading strange newspapers because of their odd headlines; missing the routine of life that anchors me to reality, and having the sense of being a lost soul who belongs nowhere.

Yes, there's no place like home and if I'm ever fool enough again to leave—well, anyway if I SHOULD decide to run down to Florida this winter I'll do a lot of things differently.

Autumn Reds

SUMMER REDS in make-up yield to the brown and yellow reds of autumn. Ranging in tone from deep wine and purple to soft flame reds, the new cosmetic shades harmonize with the browns, blues, beiges and American Indian colors of fall fashions. Each cosmetic manufacturer has designed a variety of these new colors, thereby giving a wide choice from which to select.

One firm's contribution to the color spectrum is "Firelight" make-up, which includes cream rouge, nail polish and lipstick. A deep red color with pigments of red, blue and brown, "Firelight" blends and accents the whole family of browns from light, clear golden browns, rust and earth-red browns, pinky cocoa browns to deep, true browns. This new make-up is being shown this week at a local store in conjunction with matching accessories and blending fall fashions.

In keeping with the style trend toward exaggeration — immense bags, huge pockets, extravagant hats—is a new "big shot" lipstick that towers above its smaller running mates. Smart as gargantuan accessory, it has decorative importance in its gold column case topped with the insignia of its maker. In reds you can have this in almost any shade you desire.

Home Nursing Self-Taught

EACH SEASON as it rolls around has its special problems for the "home nurse."

But, whatever the emergency or illness, you tackle it competently when you have right nursing information.

Should there be a "collapse" on a scorching day, look for signs of heat prostration. If the patient is covered with cold perspiration, has an anxious look and breathes rapidly, send for the doctor. Meantime, put the patient to bed and apply external heat to his feet. If the pulse grows weak, give a stimulant.

And that bane of every summer outing—poison ivy—what to do for it? First wash the afflicted part thoroughly with soap and water, then apply zinc oxide ointment. Repeat daily.

Arithmetic Best Guard Against Overeating

Count Your Calories To Keep Fat Down; Formula Is Simple

By Ida Jean Kain

IF THERE was an invention which would ring a bell as you started to eat the calorie that would turn into fat, you would blush and leave the table!

From olden times, the search has been going on for just such a device. According to legend, an ancient, weight-conscious king had a scale built into his banquet throne to tell him when to stop eatin.

But if you are willing to calculate your calories, you can tell almost exactly the point at which you must stop eating in order to reduce, and beyond which you will either hold your own or begin to put on weight.

Know Your Calories

The method takes a little mental exercise in arithmetic, but it is very simple. First, you must know approximately how many calories you require. This number is determined by two factors: your normal weight and your activity. Scientific computations show that we use from 12 to 20 calories per pound of normal body weight.

The average person engaged in work that affords light exercise will use approximately 16 calories per pound. If you come in this category, multiply the number of pounds you should normally weigh by 16. The result is the total number of calories that can be taken in food during the day without changing your weight.

For purposes of reducing, it is better to figure your calorie requirement on the basis of normal weight.

Suppose that normal weight for you is 125 pounds. Then 125 multiplied by 16 equals 2,000 calories. That is your maintenance calorie allowance. But if you are to reduce, you must take fewer calories than you actually require. In that way an energy deficit is created which forces you to draw on stored fat. It is perfectly safe to decrease your calories by one-third or even slightly more.

What You Can Have

In popular diets, from 500 to 1,000 calories are omitted from the daily menus. If normally you require 2,000 calories per day, you can reduce on 1,000 to 1,500 calories. The average maintenance diet for women is 2,200 calories and the average reducing diet is 1,200 calories.

On a reducing diet of 1,000 to 1,200 calories a day, you can have from 200 to 250 calories for breakfast, from 350 to 400 calories for lunch, and from 450 to 550 calories for dinner. If you overeat at one meal, you must eat less at the next or you will not be able to reduce that day! Every day that your three meals are restricted to your reducing allowance you are losing approximately one-fourth pound of weight. The loss may not show up each day on the scales but it will be apparent in the weekly loss.

Tomorrow's article tells you exactly what to have in the 1,000 calorie daily diet.

After coming to Washington, where she worked in the press section of NYA until her marriage, she helped organize the local branch of the Descendants of the American Revolution, who, in her words, "believe in paying more than lip service to the democratic ideals of our forefathers."

She met her husband through the Descendants. He is active in their legislative work and is fighting to have the poll tax abolished in Federal elections while she campaigns for District suffrage. She feels both issues are as important today as women's suffrage was in her Aunt Susan's time.

Feeling runs high in a Fourteenth street beauty parlor whose proprietor is violently pro-British. A reader who went to the shop recently for a shampoo reports that she was about to duck under the drier when she heard a new customer, ignorant of that phase of the international situation, say clearly "After all, I don't think the British have showed up very well lately." The noise of the drier drowned out the rest of her comments but could not conceal the sound of a scuffle which ensued almost immediately. She emerged hastily from the drier in time to see the proprietor ejecting the erstwhile customer bodily, her uncombed hair flying wildly. "Never let me see you in here again," the enraged shopkeeper shouted down the street after her.

French Envoy Busy These Days Making Round of Farewell Parties

By Hope Ridings Miller.

FAREWELL PARTIES for the retiring French Ambassador, Count de Saint Quentin, will be very much in order for the next few days. The popular diplomat whose successor, Gaston Henri-Haye, is scheduled to leave Lisbon by Clipper Friday, has a host of friends here who have been clamoring to entertain him; but I understand he has accepted few invitations. Only those, in fact, from close friends or officials.

Yesterday afternoon, he stopped in for a cup of tea with Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, and last night, he was guest of honor at a very much off-the-record dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, at Dumbarton Oaks, their Georgetown home. The Ambassador plans to return to France briefly before going to Brazil to assume duties as his country's envoy there.

Departing diplomats, as well as those coming to town for a brief stay, usually appear sooner or later in Mrs. Hull's attractive Carlton apartment for a cup of tea and, if they are lucky, a chat with Secretary Hull.

The next social event Mrs. Hull is planning is a luncheon tomorrow at which the Secretary will be host in honor of Dr. Luis Anderson, former Minister of foreign affairs of Costa Rica. Dr. Anderson was his country's delegate to the Havana conference. He came to this country shortly afterward and has been at the Mayflower for several days.

Minister Harriman Star of Evening

Hardly in town long enough to get her bags unpacked, Washington's own "Daisy"—Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, United States Minister to Norway, if you must be formal about it—stepped out to a very informal and unofficial dinner last night. Furthermore, she kept a company of 16 entertained for several hours with first-hand accounts of her experiences in the war zone.

The party, given by two of Minister Harriman's closest friends, Mrs. Max Stern and Miss Maxine Davis, took place at the Stern home on Chain Bridge road, Miss Davis' attractive Georgetown house, which was the scene of a dinner for Minister Harriman on her visit here in 1938, is being redecorated.

Among those in the company were Mr. and Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, Hugh Cumming, jr., of the State Department; Defense Commissioner and Mrs. Leon Henderson, Mr. and Mrs. Marquis W. Childs, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Lowell Mellett, and Dr. and Mrs. Ford K. Brown, of Annapolis, the latter of whom is widely known as Leslie Ford, the author.

Stapletons Off To Hawaii

Day before yesterday they flipped a coin to decide whether to spend the next few weeks at Hot Springs, Va., or in Hawaii. Heads won. So today, Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton and her daughter, Stellita, will be off to the West Coast and will sail from there September 12 on the Lurline.

Their island address will be the Royal Hawaiian Hotel, and just how long they will stay depends on the charm of the beach at Waikiki and all those other attractions that have made Honolulu the show place of the Pacific.

Come November, however, the Stapletons expect to be back in Washington, and Stellita will resume her work with the Red Cross. In June and July, when most of her playmates were making their annual exodus to beach and mountain resorts, Stellita stayed in town, toiling hours on end as chairman of speakers for the Red Cross. Not until August 1, when her job was taken over by a professional for the three months during roll call, did she leave on her vacation. Then she went to Camp Percy, N. H., to visit her cousin, Mrs. George Hamilton.

Shortly after she returned from there, Stellita and her mother decided to flip that coin. And now, Hawaii—here they come!

New French Aides To Arrive Here In Near Future

Several new arrivals at the French Embassy are expected with the coming of the Petain government's Ambassador, Gaston Henri-Haye.

Col. Bertrand-Vigne, who has just been named assistant Military Attache, will take the Clipper on Friday at Lisbon with his chief. The colonel was an infantry instructor with the United States Army in California during the World War.

Aviation Capt. Charles Brousse, now assigned to the United States newspaper correspondents at Vichy, will leave October 5 to become press attache at the embassy here. His wife is an American and he owns the newspaper L'Independant, published at Pernignan.

Mrs. Amos Beaty Is Visitor Here

Mrs. Amos L. Beaty, who was a resident of Washington in the early days of the New Deal, has arrived here from White Sulphur for a brief stay at the Mayflower. Her late husband, Judge Beaty, was chairman of the board of planning and coordination for the NRA.

Accompanying Mrs. Beaty to Washington was Mrs. C. G. Wyckoff, publisher of the Magazine of Wall Street. Mrs. Wyckoff and Mrs. Beaty will return to their homes in New York in a few days.

LIEUT. AND MRS. FRANCIS GOVERN

Shrine of the Most Holy Sacrament Scene Of Candlelight Ceremony; Couple to Live At Carlisle Barracks After Honeymoon

Miss Patricia Wehr, daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Arthur John Wehr, was married yesterday morning at a candlelight ceremony in the Shrine of the Most Holy Sacrament to Lieut. Francis Whitton Govern, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Govern, of Washington.

The bride wore a pale ivory French silk wool dress with a panel of cut work satin extending down the front from a V-shaped neckline. A full length veil was caught into a coronet of plaited satin and French silk. Her bouquet was of gardenias and lily of the valley.

The maid of honor, Miss Mary Ellen Degnan, and the bridesmaids, Miss Alice Pilmer Ahalt, and Miss Alice Gwendolyn Pagan, were dressed alike in soldier blue taffeta fashioned with full skirts and sweetheart necklines, and set off with little royal blue velvet jackets. Their heads were tipped with blue feathered birds and they carried bouquets of yellow roses.

Mrs. Wehr's dress was of American Beauty lame with a draped bodice and short sleeves. With this she wore a large black picture hat and a corsage of white orchids.

Mrs. Govern, mother of the bridegroom, was gowned in a floor length black crepe dress with white embroidered revers. A large black hat and a corsage of sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley completed her ensemble.

The bride was given away by her father, Lieut. Col. Wehr. Lieut. John R. Jannaron served as best man. The ushers were Lieut. John B. Davenport, Lieut. Eugene M. Martin, Lieut. Kenneth Hadsen and Lieut. William B. William. After the ceremony Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Wehr received at a wedding breakfast at the Army-Navy Club.

Lieut. Govern and his bride left after the breakfast for a short wedding trip. They will motor through the East before going to Carlisle Barracks, Carlisle, Pa., where they will make their home.

Bolivian Aide To Arrive Soon

The newly appointed Military Attache of the Bolivian legation, Lieut. Col. Oscar Moscoso, will arrive in this country next Monday on the Santa Lucia. Senora de Moscoso is accompanying him and on the same boat is Senora de Chopitea, wife of the First Secretary of the legation.

The Bolivian tin king, Simon Patino, was in Washington quietly for a few days and is expected here again this week to confer with defense officials. Mr. Patino, who is nearly 80, controls 55 per cent of Bolivian tin production. He was for many years Bolivian Ambassador to France, and his daughter in law, Senora Antonio de Patino, has been on international "best dressed" lists for the past few years.

Mrs. J. P. Shearer To Fete Students

Mrs. J. P. Shearer and her daughter, Miss Mary Byrd Shearer, will be hostesses today at a buffet luncheon for a group of Washington girls who are students at the Randolph Macon's Woman's College. Mrs. Shearer, an alumna of Randolph Macon's Woman's College, will be assisted at the luncheon by Mrs. Warren Fager, Mrs. Edward Sheffey and Mrs. A. S. Gardiner, jr., who are also graduates of the college.

The school colors, black and yellow, will be featured in the decorations of the Shearer's Wesley Heights home, with the yellow sunflower, the school flower, keynoting the floral arrangements.

Miss Caroline Browne and Miss Martha Lilly who are to enter Randolph Macon's Woman's College this fall will have the opportunity of becoming acquainted with some of their future schoolmates. Those they will meet are Miss Lathrop Beale, Miss Carol Christy, Miss Martha Jane Dickinson, Miss Mary Dyer, Miss Betty Flather, Miss Ethel Huffman, Miss Birney Strong, Miss Rossman Taylor, Miss Patricia Taylor, Miss Hildegarde von Boetticher, Miss Anne Keebler, Miss Barbara Richards, Miss Evelyn Talley, Miss Kay Edgerton, Miss Marjorie Derbey, Miss Rook Johnstone and Miss Lucia Kelso.

Southampton Fetes Given

The summer season at Southampton reached its climax over Labor Day, with half a dozen large parties given by the colony. From now on members will trickle back to their homes.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, of Washington, entertained on Monday at the Southampton Beach Club for Lawrence Smith Butler and his guests, Mrs. George O. Rockwood and Princess Diana R. Eristavi, who spent the holiday at the Irving. Mrs. Haywood D. Newbold and William Cushman, of this city, were guests of honor at another luncheon held at the Beach Club by Mr. and Mrs. Jerome V. Detmer.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Balcom entertained a group of the refugee international set. Their guests included Mme. Elsa Schiaparelli and Mme. De Wardener, of Paris; Count Haugwitz-Reventlow and John Barrett.

Wyatt Sisters Return to D. C. After House Party

The Misses Jane and Laurabelle Wyatt, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wyatt, returned yesterday from Virginia, where they were hostesses at a Labor Day house party. The party left Thursday for Hemlock Lodge, Syria, Va., and returned to Washington last night. Horseback riding, swimming, tennis, picnicking and country dances were among the diversions enjoyed by the group and Mrs. Wyatt, who acted as chaperon.

D. C. Pair Ends Mexican Trip

Mrs. William A. Morgan and Mrs. J. Fred Essary returned yesterday afternoon from a three-week trip to Mexico. They sailed from New York to Vera Cruz early in August and went directly to Mexico City.

During their visit they made a number of side trips to such well-publicized show places as Taxco, Xochimilco and Cuernevaca.

Eugenia Coleman Back in October From Hawaii Visit

Miss Eugenia Coleman, who has been in Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, this summer, will return to Washington in October. She made her debut last May at a tea given at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Gravatt Coleman, and her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Evans Mauldin. A graduate of the National Cathedral School, she has been elected editor of the Alumnae Magazine and also will study music this winter.

Miss Coleman has been visiting Capt. and Mrs. C. J. Holeman at Pearl Harbor. En route back to Washington she will stop in San Diego for a week or two with Commander and Mrs. Louis H. Roddis.

Cancels Social Plans

Miss Margaret Jane Harley, sister of Joseph F. Harley 3d, who was injured Saturday in a taxicab accident, will be confined to her home for the next week or ten days, and has canceled all social engagements.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The Commandant of the Marine Corps and Mrs Thomas Holcomb have returned after several weeks in the West and a brief stop in New York. They made the whole trip by plane.

Mrs. A. A. Berle, who has been summering at Stockbridge, Mass., is expected to return shortly to the Capital.

Mme. Lombard, wife of the French Military Attache, will return on Saturday from Atlantic City, where she has been vacationing.

James Clement Dunn, political adviser to the State Department, is in Washington again after a vacation on the Massachusetts North Shore. Mrs. Dunn is expected here the end of the week.

The Federal Power Commissioner and Mrs. Basil Manly have returned from a two weeks' visit with their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Walter O. Briggs, jr., of Bloomfield, Mich.

Mrs. George Barnett will return today from Narragansett, R. I., where she visited Mrs. Irving Hall Chase at her summer home.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Prater are at Nutley, N. J., visiting Mrs. Prater's sister, Mrs. John E. Parney.

Miss Patricia Few, who came from Atlanta to live here about a year ago, will leave today to visit relatives in Gloucester, Mass. She will be widely entertained during her stay there.

Mrs. J. Butler Wright and Miss Mary Wright are expected back on Friday after a vacation in the North.

Mrs. Abram Claude will return tomorrow from Essex, Conn., where she has been visiting her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Willets, jr.

Mrs. Perry Heath, who has been at Blue Ridge Summit, Pa., entertained at tea there yesterday afternoon.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

CLEARING SKIKES brought a number of Washingtonians to Rehoboth for Labor Day, among them Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja. The Hurjas were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Marquis James at their cottage on the dunes. Mrs. Hurja, though protecting her very fair skin from too much sun, spent every possible moment on the beach. Mr. Hurja, however, had his own idea about the ocean—to keep away from it—and devoted himself to golf.

MRS. HURJA

Mr. and Mrs. James entertained at dinner and at a cocktail party for the Hurjas during their stay. Among the Washingtonians who welcomed them were Capt. and Mrs. J. P. Jackson and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Berliner.

The Jacksons were, at one point, all packed to leave Rehoboth but the appearance of the sun coaxed them to stay on after Labor Day. The Berliners, on the other hand have just arrived, after a month spent in Maine, to take possession of their cottage on Park avenue. The cottage during their absence was rented to the Raymond Clappers.

Judge and Mrs. Edgar Goodrich were hosts at a cocktail party during the holiday at their attractive house in Henlopen Acres and a number of other members of the Washington colony entertained at the Rehoboth-Indian Beach Club. Among them were the Robert Flemings, Mr. and Mrs. John Lewis Smith, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Ferrandou and Mr. and Mrs. M. G. de Quevedo.

The Beach Club seems always to invent amusing pastimes for the summer colony, a recent one being the Cinderella Ball. The leading lady of the occasion was chosen in approved Cinderella style. Mrs. Kline Weir, of Pittsburgh, was the owner of the dainty, size-four foot that fitted the magic slipper.

Tomorrow night the Club will be the scene of a ball for the benefit of the Red Cross. Special features will be exhibition dances by Bob Driscoll, of Washington, and his partner, Janie Stimson, and quips by Royce Powell who will act as master of ceremonies. Mr. Powell is billed in large letters as, "Washington Humorist," which shouldn't daunt him in the least.

MRS. McCENEY WERLICH and her son, Bob, have left Rehoboth en route for Mexico, determined to face the threat of mulitple presidents during their trip through that charming land. Upon their return, Bob will enter the Hill School at Pottstown, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. Turner Catledge have returned to Washington in order to enter their children in school. The Catledges spent the entire summer at Rehoboth, having opened their cottage in June. Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Richardson, who shared the cottage with them, are staying on a little longer.

A gay house-party of ten young people took over one of the cottages belonging to the Corner Cupboard recently. Bill and Frank Sterrett, of Washington, and their cousin, Johnnie Dent, who never miss an opportunity to enjoy the beach, were members of the party. Also at the Corner Cupboard were Boris Timchenko and Lee O'Brien, jr., of Washington.

Pretty Patricia Morris, who was one of the most popular debutantes of season before last, has just completed a month of work at Children's Island off Marblehead, Mass. On this island a selected number of college girls—Patricia is at Vassar—help to care for crippled children from New England hospitals.

The applicants wishing to undertake this charitable nursing exceed the number of girls required, and each year a very careful selection is made. Nancy Glover is another Washington debutante who has devoted vacation months to this splendid cause.

Andrew Wylie is a captain in the Marine Corps and is on duty in Washington. Andrew has been one of the latest of Washington's late stay-uppers but now he dutifully leaves every gathering at an early hour in order to be on the job at crack of dawn.

Jean Westfall, Dr. Anderson Are Married

Quiet Ceremony Is Performed At Walter Reed Chapel

At a quiet ceremony yesterday at 1 o'clock, Miss Jean Elizabeth Westfall, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Chester C. Westfall, of Hyattsville, Md., was married to Dr. William H. Anderson, of the Department of Agriculture. The wedding took place at Walter Reed Memorial Chapel, the Rev. John C. Neville officiating.

The bride, who dispensed with attendants, wore a street length blue dress with a high crowned black velvet hat and a corsage of red roses.

Immediately after the ceremony the couple left on a honeymoon, following which they will live in Hyattsville. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. M. T. Anderson, of Hyannis, Mass.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

MISS SALLY GOODHUE, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marion Goodhue, of Baltimore, is visiting her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel S. Roszel, at their home near Front Royal, Va. A debutante of the season, Miss Goodhue is having a gay time in the hunt country. She will make her formal bow to society at the Bachelor's Cotillion in December. Her mother is the former Miss Sarah Roszel, an excellent rider and fox hunter.

Back in Virginia for a visit is Miss Francesca Villa, of Newport, R. I., who was graduated from Foxcroft in June. Miss Villa is attending the house party given by Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Gilpin. Other guests are Miss Diana Gambrill, of Far Hills, N. J.; Miss Eleanor Russell, of Princeton, N. J.; John Kinder, Michael Irving and Charles Whitehouse, of New York. All the young people will attend the dance to be given by Mr. and Mrs. William Bell Watkins and Mr. and Mrs. William Bell Watkins, jr., in honor of Miss Virginia Watkins on Friday evening at the North Wales Club.

Speaking of debut parties, hunt country society is still talking about the gay fete Miss Charlotte Haxall Noland gave last Saturday in honor of her niece, Miss Katherine Powell Noland Smith, of Baltimore.

The gymnasium of Foxcroft was the scene of the party. Walls of the enormous hall were covered with freshly cut corn stalks and bales of hay and straw, covered with brightly colored pillows and blankets edged the dance floor and were used as seats.

JAPANESE LANTERNS were used to light the building, and on one side tables and chairs were arranged for guests who wanted to watch the dancing while they ate.

Abar was set up at one end of the hall, and at the other a continuous buffet supper was served.

Guests had been asked to wear farm clothes, so they turned out in colorful variety of gingham frocks, overalls and straw hats. A colored orchestra from Baltimore played for the party. Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Law Rogers Smith, of Baltimore, parents of the debutante, assisted Miss Smith and Miss Noland. Miss Smith, who is having a house party at Foxcroft, has as her house guests Miss Walton Hutchins, Miss Jane Nicholson, Donald Peek, Douglas Mitchell, Ned Thomas, George Penniman, Frank Murnaham and Rodney Brooks, all of Baltimore; also her sister, Miss Charlotte Haxall Noland Smith and her fiance, Ross Ranson Williams, of New York, to whom her engagement was announced at the dance.

Miss Peggy Belt, of Baltimore, who will be presented to society at a large dance this month, recently arrived to visit her aunt, Mrs. Hill Beverley. Other recent visitors to Virginia included Miss Cynthia Burrage, of Boston, who came to see Mrs. Amory Perkins, and Miss Lucy Clagett, and Hall and Fendell Clagett, who were guests of the Misses Joanna and Edith Huntington.

Eleanor Peirce Becomes Bride At Cathedral

Drexel A. Sprecher Weds Madeira Graduate; Couple to Live Here

The Bethlehem Chapel of the Washington Cathedral yesterday afternoon was the scene of the wedding of Miss Eleanor Rust Peirce, daughter of Mrs. Wentworth Willis Peirce, of Washington, to Drexel Andreas Sprecher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Sprecher, of Independence, Wis. Canon William N. Bradner officiated at the 5 o'clock ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Wentworth Peirce, and wore a fall ensemble of green and brown orchids.

Sister of Bride Is Matron of Honor

Mrs. Frank Cummings Cook, jr., the former Miss Elizabeth Rose Peirce, sister of the bride, was the matron of honor. She wore a fall ensemble of gray with a corsage of brown orchids. The other attendant was Mrs. E. Jerome Howell, the former Miss Mary Stuart Birdsall. Her ensemble was of wine shade and her corsage also was of brown orchids.

Edward Wheeler, son of Senator Burton Wheeler, of Montana, was the best man and the ushers were Frank Cummings Cook, jr., and Elbert Jerome Howell.

Following the ceremony there was a small reception for the families and the bridal party at the home of the bride's mother at 2301 Connecticut avenue. After a six-week honeymoon trip to Mexico the couple will make their home in Washington.

Bride Attended Bryn Mawr College

The bride was graduated from Miss Madeira's School and attended Bryn Mawr College. She was presented to society here in 1931. Mr. Sprecher was graduated from the University of Wisconsin and the Harvard Law School, and did graduate research work at the London School of Economics at the University of London.

Among the out-of-town guests were the bridegroom's parents; Mr. and Mrs. William Ashby Jones, Dr. and Mrs. Daniel M. Shewbrooks, of Philadelphia, and the Rev. and Mrs. Henry Bedinger Lee of Baltimore.

Miss Ethel Nelson, Bride-Elect, to Be Honored Tonight

Miss Ethel Mary Nelson, whose marriage to John Leachman Palmer will take place on Saturday, will be guest of honor at a party to be given this evening by Miss Betty Hartung and Miss Mary Fulgham at the latter's home, 1925 Kearney street.

This event will be one in a number on the bride-elect's calendar. Among those who have recently entertained for her are Miss Helen Palmer, sister of the prospective bridegroom; Miss Grace Boland and Miss Janice Hale.

Miss Nelson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar H. Nelson, of 4025 New Hampshire avenue. Her fiance's parents are Mr. and Mrs. John W. Palmer, jr., of Arlington, Va. Petworth Methodist Church, at 4 p. m., will be the scene of the ceremony.

Miss Kahn Selects Sept. 12 for Nuptial

Miss Maxine Kahn has selected September 12 as the date of her wedding to Raymond Gerber. The ceremony will take place at 4 o'clock in the west ballroom of the Shoreham, with a small reception following.

The prospective bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marx E. Kahn.

Mrs. Tucker and Mrs. Beales to Be in Charge Of Federation's British Aid Party

GUESTS at the benefit garden party for British war relief, being sponsored by the District Federation of Women's Clubs Friday afternoon at the British Embassy, will be greeted by Lord Lothian, British Ambassador, who expects to be able to attend. The entire proceeds of the affair, which is open to the general public, will go to the British War Relief Society, Inc.

The coordinating committee of the federation, organized last spring to assist in aid to the Allies, gave its first benefit at the Women's City Club, where $283.70 was made and presented to the American Red Cross. With Great Britain now standing alone in defense of freedom and democracy, the clubwomen decided that proceeds of the second affair should go directly to British war relief agencies.

Underwood & Underwood
HAZEL BROWN PIERS

The garden party is expected to be one of the largest fetes ever given by the federation. Mrs. John T. Lucker and Mrs. LeVerne Beales are cochairmen of the committee in charge and Mrs. Hazel Brown Piers, chairman of music for the District federation is chairman of arrangements for the program.

There will be music throughout the hours of the party, provided alternately by several different groups, and the Marion Chace dancers also will be presented. The music will be by a string trio, including Josephine Cole Allen, violinist, a member of the faculty of Arlington Hall; Benjamin Levenson, cellist, and Thomas Reynolds, pianist. Wilfred Smith, Welsh-American tenor, who is popular with Capital audiences, will also sing and the Metropolitan Police Boys Club Band, the Elks Club Band and the Fort Stevens Post Drum and Bugle Corps will play.

Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the District federation, who is chairman of patronesses for the fete, will head the list of District federation officers attending. Mrs. Beales, the cochairman with Mrs. Lucker, is first vice president. Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, president of the general federation, will not be able to attend as she will be out of the city, but Miss Vella A. Winner, editor of "The Clubwoman GFWC," will be there, representing the headquarters staff. Mrs. Charles P. Keyser is chairman of reservations.

All of the clubwomen are hoping for fair weather Friday, but, should it rain, the party will be postponed until Saturday. The hours are 4 to 7.

TO NEW ENGLAND — Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, will leave tonight for Keene, N. H., to be the guest over the week-end of Mrs. LaFell Dickinson, second vice president, at her home there. Next week she will address a luncheon of the Hampden County Women's Club, in Northampton, Mass., celebrating the fifteenth anniversary of its affiliation with the federation. September 10 and 11 she will attend the meeting of the New Hampshire State Federation at Bretton Woods, and September 12 and 13 the meeting of the Vermont State Federation in Rutland.

Julius Singers On Honeymoon Trip to Shore

Following their honeymoon trip to Atlantic City, Mr. and Mrs. Julius Singer will make their home at 960 Randolph street here.

The former Miss Frances Betman, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Hyman Betman, and Mr. Singer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kopple Singer, were married on Sunday, August 18, at the Adas Israel Synagogue, with Rabbi Solomon H. Metz officiating.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a royal blue crepe dress, with a jacket trimmed in velvet, navy accessories and a white orchid corsage. Maid of honor was her cousin, Miss Frances Goldman, who wore green crepe with black accessories and a red rose corsage. Best man was David Singer, brother of the bridegroom, and the other attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Blendman, grandparents of the bride.

Following the ceremony there was a reception at the synagogue. Assisting were Mrs. Joseph Muchnick, Mrs. Harold Fainberg, Mrs. Sol Goldman and Mrs. J. O. Barezofsky.

Mrs. Charles J. Kappler has just returned to Washington from a summer of continuous traveling with members of her family. The first of her trips was to New York for the fair and then to Atlantic City for a few weeks of rest after seeing the World of Tomorrow. On the trip she was joined by Mr. Kappler.

Mrs. Kappler will remain in Washington for a few days before leaving for Virginia.

Vincent Vermillion And Bride to Live At Alexandria

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Vermillion, who were married August 11, will make their home at 321 East Custis street, Alexandria. The bride is the former Miss Lorraine Kremer, daughter of Mrs. Omar Kremer, of Alexandria, and the late Henry J. Kremer, and Mr. Vermillion is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Vermillion, of Mount Ida, Va.

The couple were married in St. Rita's Catholic Church, the Rev. Thomas J. Finnigan officiating. The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Robert Gustave Kremer, wore white net and lace over satin, with a long veil held by a pearl coronet. She carried white roses and maiden-hair fern.

Mrs. Robert Mancini, of Washington, sister of the bride, was matron of honor, wearing blue net over taffetta trimmed with pink velvet bowknots, a matching hat and carrying pink roses. Mrs. Thomas Jones, another sister, and Mrs. Rita Jarboe were bridesmaids, dressed in pink marquisette over taffeta, with matching hats. Their flowers were pink roses.

Harvey Vermillion was best man and the ushers were Russell Nuckols and Joseph Tull. A reception at the Kremer home followed.

Betrothal Told Of Virginia Girl

Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Turman, sr., of Aldie, Va., announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Alice, to William Hudson Carper, of Fredericksburg, Va., son of Mr. and Mrs. James Eldridge Carper, of Salem.

The bride-elect was graduated from Mary Washington College, where she is now dietitian.

Mr. Carper received his degree from Roanoke College and then a degree in civil engineering from Virginia Polytechnic Institute. He is a member of Sig Chi and Tau Beta Pi fraternities and is now city engineer of Fredericksburg.

Louise Morano Engaged to Wed Lieut. W. W. Hiehle

Mr. and Mrs. Peter A. Morano, of Staten Island, N. Y., announce the engagement of their daughter, Louise, to Lieut. Wilbur Warren Hiehle, of the Army Medical Corps.

Lieut. Hiehle, son of Mrs. Grace Fay Hiehle, of this city and the late Capt. Ernest T. Hiehle, is now on duty as transport surgeon on the Army transport, Hunter Liggett.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Miss Madeline Cotter To Return From N. Y.

Miss Madeline Cotter will return tonight from a stay of several days in New York, where she did a little trousseau shopping.

Miss Cotter's marriage to John Lewis Smith will take place sometime in October. The bride-to-be is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cotter, of Rockville.

Senate Group Hears Attacks On Profits Tax

Modification Drive Forecast as Hearings Open in Committee

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

A battery of witnesses attacked specific features of the pending excess-profits tax bill yesterday as the Senate Finance Committee opened brief hearings on the House-approved measure.

Representatives of the Treasury and of the Defense Advisory Commission will be heard by the Senate Committee today.

Indications multiplied that a serious effort would be made by some committee members to modify the bill—especially in regard to "hardship cases" and to the "penalty" on corporations choosing the average-earning method of computing their excess profits.

Under the bill the taxpaying company could calculate its excess profits either on the average earnings for the last four years or on the relation of earnings to invested capital. If it chose the former method it would have to pay a 25 per cent normal income tax (compared to the present tax of 20.9 per cent) and then the excess-profits rates on top of that.

George Hits Rates

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, said yesterday, however, that he hoped to modify this "penalty." Under his scheme the taxpaying corporation would pay either the 25 per cent normal tax and no excess-profits levy or the old 20.9 per cent normal tax plus an excess-profits levy, whichever was the greater. In this way a minimum 25 per cent levy would be assured, the Senator explained, but the "penalty" of 4.9 per cent and the excess-profits rates would not be imposed together.

Senator George added that some method of appealing "hardship cases" would have to be devised. He characterized the House bill as "a tax on blindness and on what some of our social-minded theorists regard as excessive earnings, whether those earnings are abnormal, normal or subnormal."

The Georgian further suggested that corporations be permitted to file consolidated returns under Treasury Department rules.

Walter A. Cooper, of the American Institute of Accountants, offered the Senate committee 18 proposed changes in the pending bill, some of which were also advanced by other witnesses.

Asks Simplification

Declaring that the measure was "a complicated and involved law, the like of which has never been seen before," Cooper urged separation of its tax and amortization provisions. The amortization section of the bill (permitting taxpayers to deduct from taxable income for each of the next five years 20 per cent of the cost of new plants built for national defense) has been urged as a step to expedite the rearmament program.

Cooper suggested that "the excess profits tax proposals be eliminated from the pending bill and that sufficient time be taken to develop a sound law that will be prospective rather than retroactive in its application." He cited the case of one company that, under the House bill, would have to pay a total of $58,000 tax on an income of $150,000 this year, although it had earned no income during the four-year base period.

Chairman Harrison of the Finance Committee said after the hearings that he opposed separation of the tax and amortization provisions of the law.

F. R. Short, president of a Chicago milling company, testified that the House bill would increase taxes on his company by 72 per cent over 1939. Declaring that his firm would receive "no benefit from defense spending," the witness asserted that the tax would penalize some new and small corporations that did not profit from rearmament.

Many small firms "are just about going to be decimated" by the proposed tax, commented Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan.

"Small companies will be driven into partnership form" with probable resultant net loss to the Government, declared Paul P. Cobey, representing some textile and building material firms.

Truck Overturns, W.Va. Boy Is Killed

Special Dispatch to The Post

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 3.—Harry Roach, Jr., 8, was killed yesterday on a mountain grade west of here when the truck driven by his father overturned. Two brothers and a sister with him and his father were not seriously injured.

The father told investigating officers he tried to avoid hitting some dogs and the truck went out of control. Coroner C. G. Power conducted an inquest and exonerated the father. Services will be held Wednesday.

D. C. Betters 1939 Health, Death Rate

But More Funds Needed to Keep Up Work, Ruhland Reports

Washington's health and death rate last year were much improved, but continued efforts and increased appropriations are necessary to dispel the "adverse reputation" it has held for many years, Health Officer George C. Ruhland reported yesterday.

Infant mortality struck a new low during 1939. A new all-time low death rate also was reported for pneumonia. In citing the infant mortality rates, 48 deaths per 1,000 live births, Dr. Ruhland said "this was particularly gratifying" since this rate has long been the most sensitive indicator of health and health progress in a community.

Expansion of the school medical service, general improvements at Gallinger Hospital, including funds for more nurses, new buildings and creation of a tumor clinic, and an adequate staff of public nurses, are listed in the health officer's program to improve further local health conditions.

Fewer Mothers Lost

Comparison of the maternal death rates for last year and the previous year shows a clean-cut improvement. In 1939 the rate was 4.8 per 1,000 live births and in 1938 the figure was 5.5 per 1,000 live births. The lowered pneumonia rate was 72.3 per 100,000 population as compared with 121.4 per 100,000 the previous year. Dr. Ruhland said this decrease reflects the success of the antipneumonia campaign undertaken by the Health Department in 1937. In 1938 pneumonia was responsible for the second greatest number of deaths in the District, exceeded only by heart disease. This was reduced to third place in 1937; in 1939 to fifth place in 1938, and is now in seventh position among the major causes of death in the District.

There was only one death last year from poliomyelitis, and no deaths occurred from either smallpox or typhus fever. Although tuberculosis remains in fourth position as a major cause of death, the rate also fell to a new low, dropping in 1938 to 87.4 per 100,000 population in 1939.

Proposals for Gallinger

Recommendations listed for Gallinger Hospital are that intensive efforts be directed toward procurement of funds either from regular appropriations or Public Works Administration to commence construction of an obstetrical-pediatric ward, enlarged kitchen and laundry building, interns' and nurses' housekeeping building and family quarters for professional heads of departments; more adequate staff of nurses, laboratory personnel, clerical workers and mechanics; funds for a more liberal maintenance of the hospital; permission to occupy a building at District Jail for an out-patient clinic; establishment of a tumor clinic.

In speaking of the work the Health Department has done in past years to improve the health of the city and the amount of money made available for this work, Dr. Ruhland commented that public health can be purchased and that "a community can, within certain neutral limitations, determine its own death rate."

A total of 8,437 persons died in the District last year for a general rate of 12.98 per 1,000 population.

Heart disease again led the way in the chief cause of death with a total number of 2,231, for a death rate of 343.2 per 100,000 population. The other major causes in order of importance follow: cancer, 1,017 deaths; nephritis, 682; tuberculosis, 560; cerebral hemorrhage, 535; accidents, 476; pneumonia, 471; prematurity, 274; diabetes, 174, and suicides, 153.

Representative Asked For Section as Group Resumes Year's Activity

A. W. Lee, real estate broker and president of the Randle Highlands Citizens Association, was indorsed for the Board of Education last night by the Southeast Council of Citizens Associations, resuming activities for the 1940-41 year.

In a meeting at the Eleventh Precinct Police Station concerned largely with school affairs, the council resolved to ask Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat of the District Court, to appoint Lee as successor to the late Gratz E. Dunkum. The meeting agreed Southeast Washington, which has no white representative of the school board, should be given a voice in school affairs.

One member, who recalled several previous failures to obtain representation on the board, said "we should keep at it" until success has been achieved.

As its school program for the year, the council resolved to seek new schools for the North Randle, Hillcrest and Bradbury Heights sections. The lack of adequate school facilities in the Southwest was condemned by various speakers.

The council, which represents 11 Southeast citizens associations, also approved "the efficient manner of operation" of police affairs in the section by Capt. Hugh H. Draver.

Ploiceman Kicked In Stomach After Car Chase

A 23-block chase through streets and alleys last night resulted in the arrest of an alleged speedine taxicab driver, but one of the two pursuing policemen received a kick in the stomach for his pains and went to the hospital.

The officer, Private Lawrence A. Hartnett, 28, of the traffic squad, was taken to Emergency Hospital and admitted for observation.

He and a fellow officer, P. H. Bixler, in a police car, started following the taxicab at Michigan avenue and Florida avenue northwest, clocked at what they said was 45 miles an hour and finally ran it to the curb in the 3100 block of Eleventh street northwest. The driver jumped out and ran into an alley, where the policemen caught a man who later identified himself as Lawrence Taylor, colored, 29, of 3129 Eleventh street northwest. A scuffle followed.

Taylor was charged with speeding, assault and refusing to show his permit. Registration papers and driving permit.

Coordinated Ambulance Service Set Up

Centralized System Is Designed to Speed Emergency Cases

More than 30 hospitals and 90 ambulances in Washington, Maryland and Virginia will be coordinated this month to speed up emergency medical service, The Post learned last night.

The centralized system, which is being organized by the Health Security Administration, also will contain machinery for the instant mobilization of medical facilities in Washington, Alexandria and nine surrounding counties for national defense.

An inventory of hospitals and ambulances in the area, the first step in the creation of the unified setup, was completed yesterday by the H. S. A., Washington's nonprofit clearing house for medical aid to the indigent.

24-Hour Phone Service

A 36-page pamphlet, listing available emergency facilities, will be distributed today by telephone operators, policemen, firemen, hospitals, physicians and nurses.

Before the end of September a 24-hour telephone service will be instituted at the H. S. A. Building, at 1823 L street northwest, which will route the nearest ambulance to each accident case and permit accident victims to be brought to the nearest hospital.

Ross Garrett, H. S. A. administrator, said yesterday that the plans for coordination were stimulated in part by the death of a 62-year-old traffic victim who had to wait 35 minutes for an ambulance last month.

"At that time," Garrett said, "there was an idle ambulance within a few blocks from the accident. There should have been no delay at all, if a coordinated system had been in operation."

When the central ambulance system is established, he said, every ambulance within a radius of 40 miles of Washington will be recorded at the H. S. A. exchange.

Arlington, Fairfax, Prince William and Loudoun counties in Virginia; Montgomery, Prince Georges, Calvert, Charles and Anne Arundel counties in Maryland, and Washington and Alexandria will be welded into a single "medical community."

In the event of a catastrophe such as an explosion, a huge fire, or the bombing of a nearby area in wartime, ambulances would be redistributed to protect the remainder of the community.

The H. S. A., aided by Community Chest contributions from the entire area, will assume the responsibility for payment of all expenses engendered by private hospitals and ambulance services, thus converting them, in effect, into public facilities.

At present, Garrett explained, only a few hospitals and ambulances, under contract with Governmental agencies, are available for emergency work. In Washington, all emergency calls are restricted to casualty and Emergency Hospital, aided by the Fire Department Rescue Squad.

Student Gets Fine, Jail Term After Vending Browder Paper

David Carliner, 21, graduate of McKinley High School and law student at the University of Virginia, was fined $25 and given a 10-day sentence in Charlottesville Police Court yesterday on charges growing out of alleged distribution of a pamphlet containing speeches by Earl Browder and James Ford, Communist leaders.

Justice J. Callan Brooks, the Associated Press reported, fined the young man $5 on a charge of failing to obtain a permit for distribution of the literature, and $20 and the jail sentence on a charge of failing to appear in court after being summoned and giving an incorrect name to arresting officers.

The judge also ordered that the student be fingerprinted.

Carliner noted an appeal on the charges. He testified in court that the reason he had given the name of David Brown, of Richmond, when arrested July 18 was that he "was afraid" and did not want to "cause any trouble."

Carliner was given a two-day suspension in 1934 while a student at McKinley after he had called a mass meeting of students to protest cancellation of the high school football games. The interleigh series was terminated before completion of the 1934 season following disorders at one of the games.

At both McKinley and the University of Virginia where he is to get his degree next years, Carliner has been known as an outstanding student.

U. S. Homes In Greenbelt 'Not for Sale'

FSA Officials Deny Schaefer's Comment Hinting at Such a Deal

Farm Security Administration officials last night pointed out that housing projects, such as Greenbelt, Md., are not up for sale.

Representative Schafer (Republican), of Wisconsin, had proposed yesterday that some of the national defense workers now crowding Washington be housed in the Maryland model town. He made his suggestion after a conference before the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee that mechanics are leaving the Washington Navy Yard because of the lack of adequate housing facilities nearby.

"If we are really interested in national defense," Schafer said, "don't you think Uncle Sam should take Greenbelt and other such projects and turn them over to the defense workers? Why sell it?"

There are no plans for selling Greenbelt, FSA officials stated, although Federally owned land near the town is available for purchase by persons wishing to build homes as part of that community. Several thousand families now are on the waiting list for housing in Greenbelt itself.

Girl, 17, Dies Motorcycling Of Injuries

Dorothy Young Hurt In Pennsylvania Crash of 2 Vehicles; 2 Others in Hospital

A 17-year-old Washington high school girl died early today in a Pennsylvania hospital after she and two District companions were injured in a crash of two motorcycles en route from New York to Washington.

Fatally hurt was Dorothy Young, of 2003 Fairlawn street southeast. Anacostia High School pupil, who suffered a fractured skull. Those injured and being treated at the Chester County (Pa.) Hospital are Jesse Pavis, 21, of 3217 Fifteenth place southeast, scholarship junior at George Washington University, who suffered a broken leg, and Calvin Hendricks, 21, of 316 Eighth street northeast, whose arm was severely injured.

The accident occurred Monday evening near West Chester, Pa., as they were returning here with three others on three motorcycles from the New York World's Fair. Two of the cycles crashed, as one reportedly attempted to pass by the ground. They had left Washington Friday and were due back Monday night.

Hit-Runner Strikes Child

In traffic accidents here yesterday, a child was struck by a hit-run driver, and three other persons were hurt in collisions.

Four-year-old Allan Hearn, of Milo, Md., visiting at 2714 Quarry road northwest, was treated by a private physician after he had been hit by an unidentified motorist in the 2700 block of Quarry road.

Mrs. Adie McDonald, 53, colored, of 230 Third street southwest, was hurt in a two-car crash at Third and D streets northwest. She was taken to Casualty Hospital with severe injuries to the legs and neck. She was riding in an auto driven by William Perry, of Marshall Hall; the other car was operated by Dorothy A. Gilbert, Riverdale, Md.

Recklessness Charged

Another two-car collision sent two persons to Emergency Hospital. They are Alva Whitehair, 55, and his wife, Elizabeth, 56, of Cumberland, Md. He suffered chest injuries and she, a dislocated neck, when their auto driven by Henry Fife, 49, colored, of 218 D street northwest, collided with a car at Eighth and F streets northwest.

Fife was charged with reckless driving.

Capital News In Brief

War, Navy Numbers, Please, Are Changed

The War and Navy Departments have changed their telephone numbers, the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. announced yesterday.

The War Department number is now REpublic 6700. The new Navy Department number is REpublic 7400. The change in phone numbers, the company explained, comes in conjunction with the impending moving of the War Department to the Social Security and Railroad Retirement Building, where the department will have a dial system of 1,800 lines.

Aquafete to Open Tonight in Takoma

The second Red Cross "Aquafete" will be held tonight at 8:30 at the Takoma Pool, Fifth and Van Buren streets, with free seats available for 5,000 spectators. Performances will also be presented tomorrow and Friday evenings.

Scores of the District's outstanding swimmers, divers, and acrobats will participate, led by Patsy Palmer, 15-year-old queen of the aquacade.

Kats to Discuss District Budget

Sidney Katz, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland-District Industrial Union Council (C. I. O.), will discuss the District budget at a meeting of the United Federal Workers of America's women's auxiliary at 8 p. m. today.

The meeting, to be held at U. F. W. A. headquarters, 522 Seventeenth street northwest, will also elect delegates to the first convention of the U. F. W. A., September 17, 18 and 19.

Pants Trap Car Looters Into Confession

How two pairs of trousers trapped two youths into confessing six cases of auto looting was revealed by Washington police last night.

The youths, 18 and 20—were arrested Sunday after they had been caught tampering with a auto at Union Station. The following day, Whitney Sidebottom, of Columbus, Ohio, walked into Ninth Precinct station to report that his auto, also parked near Union Station, had been broken into and that $150 in clothes and other valuables had been taken.

In fact, the Ohioan said, the looters had taken practically all his clothes. For instance, the pairs of trousers, one of which the owner had he was wearing. Could he recognize the trousers? He could—and did. The two youths were wearing them.

According to police, the two youths then proceeded to break into autos around Union Station and taking articles valued at more than $500.

By last night, much of the loot had been returned to its owners. Sergts. E. E. Scott and L. M. Wilson and Privates Peterson, Lee, Lobore and D. A. Higgins. Most of the $200 in clothes stolen from the auto of Mrs. Winfred Bullock, of Staunton, Va., has been returned to her, after detectives had rounded up and checked on friends of the two thieves, who had given away as gifts the clothes they didn't sell.

Last Rites Held For Arthur Burt, 81, Shoe Merchant

Funeral services for Arthur Burt, Washington shoe merchant, who died here held yesterday at his home, 1824 Wyoming avenue northwest. Mr. Burt, who was 81, died Saturday after a long illness.

Cannon Edward Slater Dunlap, of the Washington Cathedral, officiated at the services. Burial was in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Honorary pallbearers included William B. Brown, Dr. Paul E. Brengle, Frank A. Burger, Frederick C. Kendall, George A. Lewis, C. J. R. Ogilby and Frank Peckham.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Sarah Frances Burchell Burt; two daughters, Mrs. Ralph Stone, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Henry Hazen, of Washington; two sons, Edwin C. and Landon Gray Burt, Jr., both of this city, and two granddaughters.

Generally fair until Saturday or Saturday night, when showers are likely. Temperature to remain near normal today and tomorrow, and to be slightly above normal Friday and Saturday.

Relief in Washington

Ceiling of $60 Aid to Each Family a Hardship to Many

(This is the third article in a series of relief needs in Washington.)

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

With the request for an appropriation of $1,210,000 for the relief needs of life District under general public assistance in 1942, there is also a recommendation from Director of Public Welfare Robert E. Bondy that the "ceiling" be removed in the administration of relief.

The family of eight, whose questions led to this series on relief in the District, is an example of the hardship imposed by the "ceiling" provision, that no family shall receive an allowance of more than $60 a month.

Allowance Reduced

The budget needs of the mother and six children amount to more than $90 monthly. The father, who is ill and unable to work, is not included in any of the categories in which the family comes, so he is an extra member, not included in the estimate of budget needs. Eliminating him for the purpose of relief calculation, there is already a deficit of $30.

The mother worked a month to earn enough to pay rent arrearage due to this deficiency, and because of this earning, the family's relief allowance was reduced to $40 to keep the total income within the $60 figure.

Then the mother's job ended, and some time elapsed before the relief allowance was increased again. As a result, she reports, she cannot make ends meet, for the maximum allowance is more than $30 under her minimum needs. Even if she works to pay back bills, she still cannot receive only sufficient relief, supplementing her wages to meet her minimum current and debt needs is not steady.

Effects of "Ceiling" Studied

The family is given assistance under aid to dependent children. This classification, $24 is allowed for the mother and $6 for each dependent child. And the District receives reimbursement from Social Security of half of its expenditure for each family.

A study of the effects of the "ceiling" made in January showed that of 1,142 families who had no income or aid to dependent children, 731 other than from public assistance received a grant too small to cover their minimum budgetary needs. The budgetary deficiency averaged $10.23 a month, Director Bondy said.

Another family being helped under aid to dependent children is that of a mother, an ill father and four children, aged 10, 12, 15 and 16 years. There is no income.

The parents, both foreign-born, became United States citizens 15 years ago. They own a small house, free from mortgage, with hot-water heat, gas for cooking and electricity. The annual taxes amount to $25

Boy, 16, Also Ineligible

Aid to the family must be based on the budgetary needs of the mother and three youngest children. The fourth boy (16) is registered at the United States Employment Office and an unsuccessful effort has been made by the case worker to get employment for him. Neither he nor his father is eligible for aid. The family is now receiving $48 a month, $3.75 over the minimum needs for four of the six members.

Items in the monthly budget are: Food for the four, $20; rent, $22.50; clothing, $5.50; gas, $2; light, $2.50; incidentals, $2—a total of $44.25.

Now, because of the necessity for using all available funds, under the Public Welfare Department this is one of the cases that would be transferred to the home care classification. This fund is separate from the general public assistance or Aid to Dependent Children. The grant under this would be reduced to $42 per month, which does not even meet the budget.

The same administration of relief, as illustrated in this case, is hampered not only by arbitrary regulations regardless of need, but also by the necessity for shifting the case from one classification to another in order to spread the funds as far as possible. There is advantage from the standpoint of adding to the total sum available, in putting as many cases as possible under the Aid to Dependent Children classification. On the other hand, if any other fund is not entirely expended by the end of the year it reverts to the District treasury, so that all classifications must be employed to aid as many as possible.

The ceiling also operates to increase the cost to the District for hospital care. Many cases, says Bondy, have been ready for discharge from local hospitals after a period of hospitalization for tuberculosis, classification, $24 is allowed for the mother and $6 for each dependent child. And the District receives reimbursement from Social Security of half of its expenditure for each family.

A study of the effects of the "ceiling" made in January showed that of 1,142 families who had no income or aid to dependent children, 731 other than from public assistance received a grant too small to cover their minimum budgetary needs. The budgetary deficiency averaged $10.23 a month, Director Bondy said.

Another family being helped under aid to dependent children is that of a mother, an ill father and four children, aged 10, 12, 15 and 16 years. There is no income.

The parents, both foreign-born, became United States citizens 15 years ago. They own a small house, free from mortgage, with hot-water heat, gas for cooking and electricity. The annual taxes amount to $25

Boy, 16, Also Ineligible

Aid to the family must be based on the budgetary needs of the mother and three youngest children. The fourth boy (16) is registered at the United States Employment Office and an unsuccessful effort has been made by the case worker to get employment for him. Neither he nor his father is eligible for aid. The family is now receiving $48 a month, $3.75 over the minimum needs for four of the six members.

Items in the monthly budget are: Food for the four, $20; rent, $22.50; clothing, $5.50; gas, $2; light, $2.50; incidentals, $2—a total of $44.25.

Now, because of the necessity for using all available funds, under the Public Welfare Department this is one of the cases that would be transferred to the home care classification. This fund is separate from the general public assistance or Aid to Dependent Children. The grant under this would be reduced to $42 per month, which does not even meet the budget.

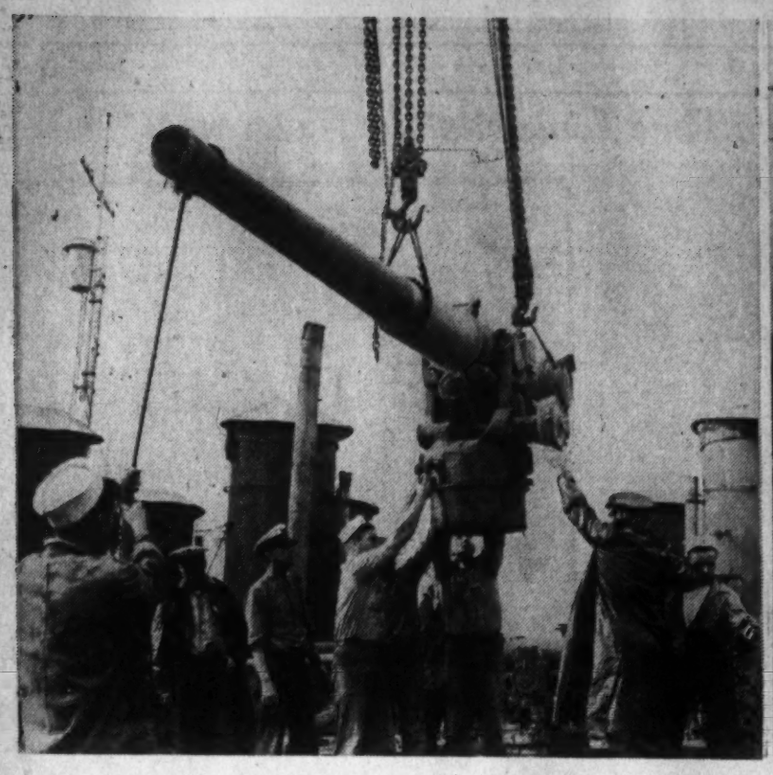
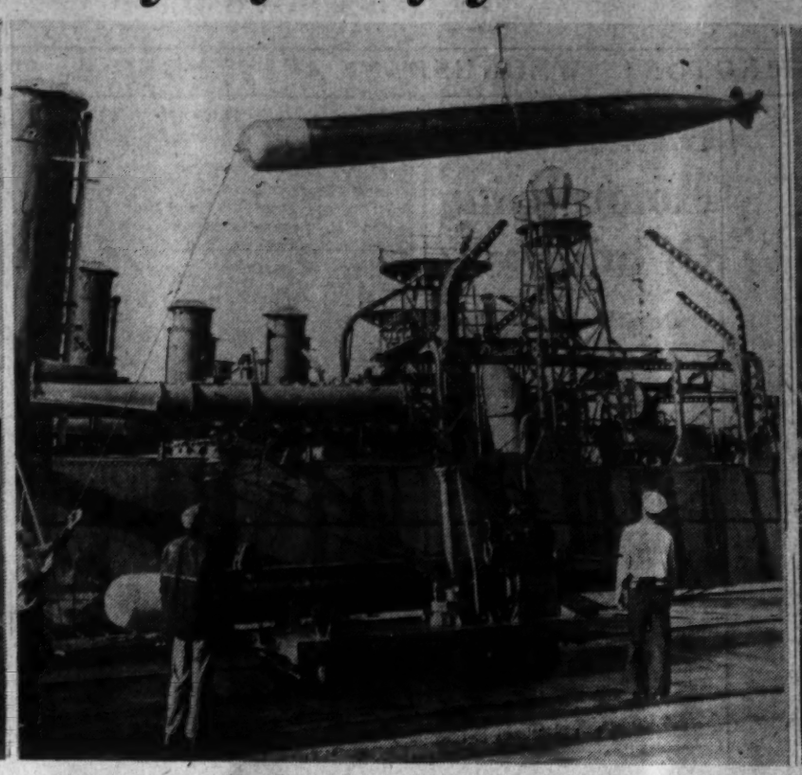
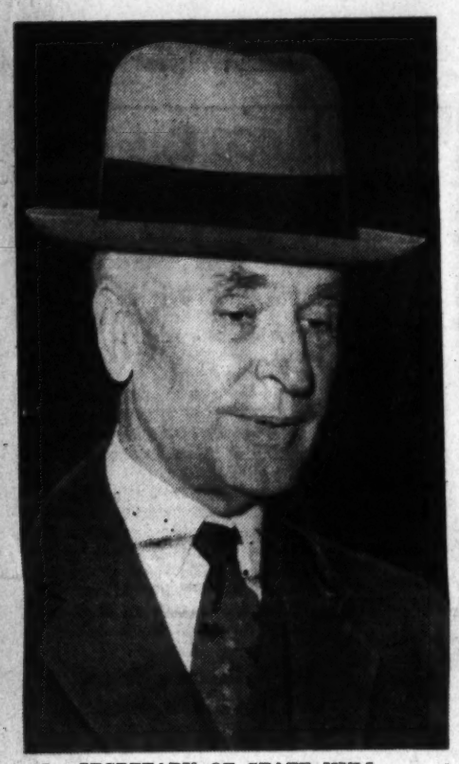
The Picture Story of 'Fifty Old Destroyers . . .'





1. FIFTY OLD DESTROYERS which the United States agreed yesterday to turn over to Great Britain a re believed to be at the Norfolk (Va.) Navy Yard and other bases on the North Atlantic. As early as April, 1939, the Navy was busy reconditioning over-aged destroyers at a cost of approximately $1,000,000. New guns were being mounted, torpedoes hoisted aboard and replacements or repairs made on frames, hull plating, boiler tubes and smoke stacks. Yesterday naval authorities said that 50 of the group needed only fuel supplies and ammunition to be ready to sail Friday. As the destroyers were exchanged, the United States acquired the right to establish naval and air bases on British territory ranging from Newfoundland to British Guiana

Associated Press Photos.



2. SECRETARY OF STATE HULL exchanged notes with the British Ambassador and the two governments agreed to designate experts to meet together immediately and determine the exact location of the bases

3. PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT informed Congress of the transaction in a brief message transmitting notes exchanged with Great Britain and an opinion of the Attorney General justifying his right to make the agreement. Meanwhile, the Chief Executive was visiting an arms plant at South Charleston, W. Va. J. W. Kinnear, jr. (in front), assistant manager of operations, showed the plant to the President, who was accompanied by Gov. Homer A. Holt of West Virginia (center) and Senator M. M. Neely, of West Virginia

4. BRITISH AMBASSADOR LORD LOTHIAN reassured Secretary Hull yesterday that the British would "never surrender nor scuttle their fleet in event of the waters surrounding the British Isles become untenable . . ."

5 PRIME MINISTER WINSTON CHURCHILL, wearing a steel helmet as he watched an air battle over Dover August 28, said in a speech before Parliament that, in effect, the British fleet would be sent overseas for defense of other parts of the empire before it would be surrendered or sunk. Secretary Hull was yesterday assured that this was the "settled policy" of the British government.

6. THE NAVAL AIR BASES leased from Britain which will give the United States an endless chain of Caribbean and Atlantic outposts stretching approximately 2,100 miles from South America to Newfoundland. Symbols show location of bases

Mrs. Harriman, Thrice Target Of Nazi Bombers, Arrives Here

70-Year-Old Minister to Norway Declines to Discuss European War Until She Sees Hull and Roosevelt

The odessy of the American Minister to Norway, 70-year-old Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, ended in Washington yesterday.

With her home, Uplands, at 1800 Foxhall road northwest, now tenanted and with a new lease for the coming winter signed ten days before the German invasion of Norway, "Daisy" Harriman put up last night at the Mayflower Hotel. With her were a Norwegian elk hound and a cocker spaniel, and a secretary.

The secretary—Mrs. Harriman declined to talk with reporters until she has made her report to Secretary Hull at noon today—said the only U. S. woman Minister would remain in Washington for about ten days but would make no definite plans for the future until "she learns what the President and Mr. Hull have in mind for her to do."

"Daisy" Harriman's odessy began last April 9 when the Nazis took Oslo. Three times she escaped bombings in reluctant evacuation to the Swedish border. Once she returned to Norway to aid fellow Americans to find safety. She was a passenger on the "terror voyage" of the American Legion which sailed a course the German government advised would lead to disaster.

Father McDonough Death Marked At G. U. Mass

The first anniversary of the death of the Rev. Vincent S. McDonough, S. J., former student counselor and for many years director of athletics at Georgetown University, was observed with a mass yesterday morning in Dahlgren Chapel on the college campus.

Alumni and members of the football squad, who were reporting for their first day of practice attended the mass at which the celebrant was the Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president of the university.

"Father Mac," as he was known to all Georgetown men for more than 25 years, died of a heart attack while listening to radio news reports of the outbreak of the European war. A movement is being sponsored by the university and alumni to erect a gymnasium and alumni hall in his memory. Head Coach John Hagarty and the Rev. John J. Kehoe, S. J., who succeeded Father McDonough in charge of athletics some years ago, were among those attending the mass.

'Until Death'

Youth Threatens To Follow Bride

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 3.—They lowered the seared and broken body of a young bride into a grave today in Bayonne, N. J.

At almost the same moment, a disheveled, frantic youth, wearing a United States Army uniform, stood on the windowsill of a fire-swept fourth floor apartment in West Twenty-second street, tears streaming down his cheeks.

Logan was the name the neighborhood knew him by, and it was his 15-year-old bride who was being buried across the Hudson River in New Jersey.

From the window in which he stood, threatening to jump, she had plunged to her death last Thursday as fire swept their apartment.

For hours, the youth held a curious throng spellbound as firemen spread a life net beneath him and priests and police pleaded vainly with him to go back into the room.

Finally, a fireman swung down from the roof on a rope and kicked him back into the grasp of police.

The youth's real name, officials said, was Stanley J. Karczewski, 20, an Army private who was reported to have deserted at Fort Benning, Ga., last January. The girl, Vera Joan Haneyko, and the young soldier were married last February in a Maryland town.

300 Shut-ins To Have School Days Here, Too

Teachers, Supervisors Begin Home Visits To Enroll Children

Preparations for the first day of school are being made this week for 300 handicapped children in the District. Ten teachers and two supervisors who will instruct them have begun visiting homes and hospitals to enroll the children and outline their courses.

For two years, the schooling of handicapped children in the Capital was carried on as a District WPA project. Last year an appropriation of $15,000 to cover it was put in the budget of the Board of Public Welfare.

Transferring it to this agency instead of to the Board of Education, under which it is carried on in most cities, was Congress' own idea. The plan was initiated without seeking the approval of the District Commissioners.

The Board of Education, which for five years has sought an appropriation in its budget for the instruction of handicapped children, is cooperating fully with the Welfare Board in its administration of the plan this year.

"WPA Did a Fine Job"

"The WPA did a fine job and we are confident that the Board of Public Welfare will do an equally good one," said Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, yesterday. "But the education of all children is the responsibility of the Board of Education. It is charged with enforcement of the compulsory education laws. The consensus is that provision for the handicapped should be included in the District's educational program, and we hope some day these children will be a part of this program with the 90,000 others who are not handicapped."

Mrs. Elizabeth M. Goodman, supervisor for the white children, and Mrs. Ida Z. Alphin, supervisor for the colored under the WPA, have been retained at the head of the two groups this year. Ten teachers have been employed, equally divided between white and colored, to handle the work done by 20 on the WPA staff last season. The supervisors will also give some time to teaching.

This staff will handle about 300 children, instead of the 375 given instruction last year. They visit each child twice or three times a week, giving an hour's lesson, keeping him as nearly as possible up with the class in which he belongs.

Teachers Listed

Sometimes, in Gallinger, Children's or Freedman's hospitals, several children will be found who are in the same grade and can be taught as a group. Otherwise individual instruction is given, always in harmony with recommendations of the attending physician.

Teachers in the white group are Mrs. Adelaide Truesdale, Mrs. Roche Padgett, Mrs. Alys McCullough, Mrs. Gladys Miller and Miss Shirley Goldberg. Those in the colored group are Mrs. Ida Bryce, Miss Helen Cooke, Miss Elsie Diggs, Miss Phyllis Reynolds and Mrs. Dorothy Strange.

38 Aliens Are Admitted To Citizenship

New Citizens Told They May Be Called Upon to Bear Arms

Justice F. Dickinson Letts told 38 persons admitted to American citizenship and 7 others repatriated yesterday that they may be called upon to bear arms in the defense of their new country.

He said in a brief address to the new citizens in Naturalization Court that as residents of the District they would be without voting rights, but would receive all the other privileges of American citizenship.

"The right of franchise is a limited one," Justice Letts declared. "It may be that in the future the rights and duties of citizens in the District of Columbia may be enlarged. Some of you may take up residence elsewhere where the full rights can be obtained and you may be called to public office."

He urged the group to find "the genius of our people" by comprehending the history of the United States.

In the group inducted into citizenship was Mrs. Jeanette Watson, 26, wife of Felthan Watson, special assistant to the Attorney General. A British subject, Mrs. Watson met her future husband when she was an employe of the British Embassy in Shanghai, and Watson was an attorney in China.

Watson was appointed to his present post in 1936. The couple was married Jauary 15, 1937.

There were 15 former British subjects, 7 Italian and 4 Germans in the group that was naturalized. Those receiving citizenship were:

Leon Czarnecki, 45, Fort Myer, Va., Polish; Philip Nimetz, 37, 1200½ Sixth street southwest, Polish; Antonio Scalone, 46, 1235 North Capitol street, Italian; Hana Lube, 40, 5811 Fifth street northwest, German; Mrs. Rose E. Scuderi, 43, 4627 Georgia avenue northwest, Italian; Maria Krenos, 52, 1743 L street northwest, Austrian; Bernard Busalnk, 71, 11 L street northeast, Netherlands; Mrs. Lillian H. Davis, 31, 5313 Fourth street northwest, Polish.

Evans Joins Helen Hayes For Guild's 'Twelfth Night'

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell

FLASH: Maurice Evans will play Malvolio to Helen Hayes' Viola in the Theater Guild's production of "Twelfth Night," set for a week at the National next month as part of the American Theater Society Subscription Season. June Walker will play Maria while another noted English actress, Sophie Stewart, will be Olivia. Margaret Webster will direct and the settings will be by Stewart Chaney. Start saving your pennies now, start writing for those tickets, for seats will be as rare as such a production itself.

This worthy news came just as this column was going to press and rather than bury it we've pushed it to the top of an already completed column. But here is what you were going to get before our telegram arrived:

NOW THAT OTHER COLUMNS have wandering Washingtonians tucked back into their accustomed nooks, critical noses seek to go awandering.

Major migration of the week, of course, is the caravan which pulled out of Union Station last evening to take Richmond for the triple-barreled premier of "The Howards of Virginia." In a day or two you'll be hearing all about this new film of which Columbia expects so much. If you read Elizabeth Page's "The Tree of Liberty," you possibly agreed with many of the country's leading book reviewers that here was one of the finest historical novels of our time. Cary Grant and Martha Scott are in it and it was filmed in Mr. Rockefeller's Williamsburg.

Yes, it will be quite an event tonight at the Byrd, State and Westhampton Theaters and if anyone happens to have a plane to hitch this writer down Richmond way shortly after 5 o'clock free, gratis, for nothing, he's got a passenger. Until then other duties force thumbs down on the junket.

Other places reviewers would like to be during this week include the Bucks County Playhouse at New Hope, Pa., that barn theater near the Moss Hart-George S. Kaufman settlements which rocketed to fame in short order. This week at New Hope is William Saroyan's new comedy "Something About a Soldier." (One can never describe a Saroyan play as being "newest," for by then he will have clipped off two or three others.) This is the Armenian-American's conceit of a celebrated American novelist, aged 71, who decided to join the army. Seems he was refused on various accounts and Creator Saroyan has him doing the next best thing by digging a trench in his front yard. Last week-end Main Liners were licking their lips over the prospect.

Then, too, the New York drama season of 1940-41 opened last night with William A. Brady's production at his own Playhouse of "Kind Lady," the Edward Chodorov play based on a story by Hugh Walpole and starring Mr. Brady's wife, gentle Grace George. Over at Ellicott City "Out of the Frying Pan," with all of the writing Swanns involved, began a holdover week.

Phil Regan's party at the Carlton yesterday yielded the report that he's just been given permission to film the life of the late Chauncey B. Olcott, that Irish tenor whom Regan and everyone who ever heard him admires so much. Mrs. Olcott herself has made possible what should be a melodious and nostalgic chrome of the past and Phil's exceptional tenor should make it a soundtrack treat.

"Democracy's Awake," the patriotic finale of the current Capitol stage revue by Sparty Donato and Gene Ford, is catching on with the whistlers and we're not surprised. It's a grand tune, far better than "I'm an American" and not much below "God Bless America," with words that are in line with the current trend although a trifle lush. Our initial praise for this one landed on the composing room floor for lack of space Saturday morning and we're glad to have the opportunity for lengthier congratulations to a swell song.

It's a 6-pound girl for Mr. and Mrs. Frank Taylor at Sibley Hospital. He's the manager of the Columbia Theater and she's the decidedly cute Marge Donleavy who was one of the Rhythm Rockets before she said "yes" to her fellow Loew patriot. She has no name yet, but good luck to you, wee one.

LOOSE ENDS: "When the Daltons Rode" will replace "Lucky Partners" at Keith's Friday morning and with the Daltons will be a new "March of Time," this one on the Caribbean defenses, "Gateways to Panama" and a shiny Walt Disney, "Pluto's Dreamhouse." The Roadside's East Lynn" is so smartly directed by Ralph Fowler that you seriously consider yourself a citizen of 1861. Art Brown returns to the Capitol organ on Friday and when will Eileen Ritter be back, you Earle people?

Swashbuckling, Beautiful Word, Endures a Quiet Moment

LOUISE PLATT AND BRUCE CABOT
Opening in "Captain Caution" Friday morning at the Capitol Theater, these two players continue the current rage for lusty action. The film is adapted from a novel by Kenneth Roberts, author of "Northwest Passage," and its other leading performers include Leo Carrillo and Victor Mature

Miss Winburn Hit in Cross Roads' Finale

Whenever a stock company, Indian summer or Eskimo winter variety, has a leading lady of genuine capabilities, "Smilin' Through" is a logical candidate for production. So it is that the Cross Roads Theater has decided to punctuate its barn season with Allan Langdon Martin's sentimental play of a generation ago.

For Elizabeth Winburn is a bright and capable young player consistently at home in the roles she has played during this her first season at Bailey's. Her playing of the dual role which kept Jane Cowl busy for three New York seasons is intelligent and charming. She reads well, her brogue has only the most infrequent lapses, she is always fascinating to watch and by the second intermission she had sent at least one beautiful lady out to the cornfields in tears.

All of which is nothing new for "Smilin' Through," but it is something of a departure for Cross Roads. Out thata way, they've been specializing in laughter and chills.

John Carteret at 70 is odd and crotchety. He plays dominoes with his boyhood friend, Dr. Owen Harding. On moonlight nights he plays with his dead Moonyeen's doll and talks with her in the half-light. He refuses to let his lively niece, Kathleen, see Kenneth Wayne, son of the man who killed his loved Moonyeen in a jealous fit the evening she was to marry him, John. Kathleen demands an explanation.

Obviously this is a questionable change of diet for a barn accustomed to horselaughs the year 'round. But thanks to the able Miss Winburn, it is not a fatal change. Her polish and experience in the role—she's played it in New England—make the play an interesting if daring summer windup.

The supporting players are few. There is too much posing to make them convincing, though. Lord knows, slipping around in a 50-year orbit is enough to try even George Arliss. Their voices and looks are well enough, but their steps are too frisky. Austin Gattis, Robert Langley and William Draper, yeomen of the Cross Roads, have the stiffest assignments. Margaret Mansfield's Ellen is convincingly spoken. W. Julian Hatcher plays the doltish Willie Ainley and Irma Gordon is Moonyeen's sister.

With "Smilin' Through," which will close Saturday evening the 14th, Howard Wentworth completes a season of genuine achievement as the Cross Roaders' director.

The New Yorker

Renee Carroll, world's most famous hat check girl, is today's guest columnist for Leonard Lyons.

MY PROUDEST boast is that I never give a check and you always get your own hat back. Only once did I think my perfect record had been blown to bits. Arthur Krock, the famous Washington correspondent, upon receiving his hat, exclaimed that it wasn't his. I explained it was the one he handed me. Still he insisted that it wasn't his, and he was going to examine every hat in the place until he received his own hat. Twenty minutes later he was still searching for his own hat. Finally he grabbed at the hat. Looking inside he saw G. N. stamped on the band. Sheepishly he explained that earlier in the week he had lunch with George Jean Nathan and must have taken the wrong hat when they parted.

I LOVE the theater. One afternoon I heard Alexander Ince tell some friends that he was going to publish a theatrical magazine and I was determined to be a part of it. That is why Renee Carroll is now assisting the publisher in putting out the new Stage Magazine, which will be on the stands October 28.

HATS AREN'T the only thing that cross my cubbyhole. I have more scripts and plays checked in my office than most producers see in a month. I can safely say that every play published on Broadway in the past 10 years got me anywhere from a dime to $10 for remaining in my checkroom. Producer Kurt Bloomgarten, on the night "Heavenly Express" closed, said, "For four years you kept it in your checkroom. I couldn't even keep it on Broadway for two weeks.

People I've Met Through Their Hats!

Alexander King—Playwright, author, artist and one of the most brilliant men connected with the theater, now editing State Magazine.

Harry Carey—Most generous man I've ever met.

William Saroyan—Who thinks he has a life-long pass to check his hat free because he once autographed a book to me.

Slangwich by Carroll

Tripster—Person who comes to look at the celebrities.
John D.—A dime tipper.
Brass Peddler—One who gives you the tip in pennies.
Heavyweight—One who loads you with seven bundles, rubbers, umbrella, and what have you, and tips a dime.
Lightweight—One who wears a hat and gives a quarter.

Food For Thought

Zorina—Hot orange juice.
Gertrude Lawrence—Caviar with oysters.
Katherine Cornell—Everything with garlic.
Erin O'Brien Moore—Borscht and sour cream.

They Never Wear Hats

Orson Welles always pays a quarter for checking his wrist watch.

Paul Draper checks his matches.

John Golden always leaves a quarter even though he doesn't leave anything to be checked. This is something John Golden doesn't know—I'm saving those quarters, and the night his first play of the current season opens, instead of a telegram, I'm sending him a hat.

SOMEHOW I can't seem to get away from hat checking. The other night, while sitting at the Tavern with Mr. Ince and Mr. King talking about the new Stage Magazine, four people came over and dropped their hats on the table for me to check.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Sept. 3 (INS).—When Paulette Goddard was out at Marson's Ranch for luncheon a few days ago a telephone call came to her from Joseph Pasternak. He is eager to get Paulette to play the lead in "Serenade to a Wealthy Widow." She'd like to do it, too; but hot or cold, as soon as she finishes "Second Chorus" and Charles Chaplin's picture, "The Great Dictator," is on its way, they are going on a holiday. Charlie is toying with the idea of going to the Orient. Paulette prefers a couple of months in New York attending the theaters, but she won't insist for she's eager to have Charlie get the rest he needs after so many months' intensive work on his picture.

PARSONS

Very wise of Darryl Zanuck not to put Mary Beth Hughes in ga-ga parts but to build her up as a sophisticated blonde who knows her way around. That's what he's doing and you'll see her next in "Brooklyn Bridge," in which she plays the gal friend of a high-up politician. Alice Faye has the top femme role and Tyrone Power, Don Ameche, Henry Fonda and Edward Arnold—all top Twentieth Century-Fox players — have important roles, so it looks like a biggie. Arthur Ceasar has written the story and Philip Dunne is preparing the script. Undoubtedly Mary Beth's work as the wife of John Barrymore in "The Great Profile" is responsible for all the renewed interest in the girl who a year ago was unknown.

Marlene Dietrich's friends have all been worried about her. She has taken off far too much weight and she looks almost wan. Perhaps that's the way she should look in "Seven Sinners," but we hope she'll put on a little more poundage for "The Duchess of New Orleans," which will go into production in November. If Tay Garnett finishes "Cheers for Miss Bishop" in time, he will accept Joseph Pasternak's offer to direct Marlene.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Bubbles Schinasi Morris is taking her baby to New York September 9, which probably means there will be no reconciliation with Wayne Morris. Too bad, as Judge Lindsay worked so hard to bring them together; Lana Turner and Victor Mature, in slacks exactly alike, were something for the visiting tourists to see; the cutest pair in town—Freddie Bartholomew and Jane Withers, dancing at the El Cortez after their personal appearance at the State Theater in San Diego; Barbara Woodall, who is talking a movie job, was once wed to Arthur Loew and before that to Oscar Levant. She played the daughter in the New York company of "The Man Who Came to Dinner;" the Frank Borzage case has been postponed at the request of Mrs. B.'s attorney; that was Abe Meyers (Lois January's ex) dancing with Carol Parker at the La Conga and Paul Felman with Isobel Jewell.

Maria Ouspenskaya and Kirsten Flagstad an interesting luncheon duet at the Brown Derby; Dean Jagger, whose performance in "Brigham Young" is the talk of the town, has bought a home in Beverly Hills. Mrs. J. was formerly a Boston socialite; the William Dieterles are hosting a party at their ranch home Saturday night; Mrs. Kay Thaw lunching with Mary Rogers, daughter of the beloved Will, wore a $125,000 diamond-encrusted hat designed by John Fredericks; Liz Whitney is getting ready to take a trip to Honolulu and leaves any day now; who is the doctor who calls Pat Morison long distance every eve? Gene Towne and Ethel Butterworth a dinner twosome at The Players.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

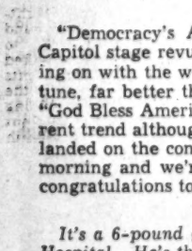
Hollywood, Sept. 3.

Orson Welles, at the age of 25, having created a sensation in radio and injected a vital spark into slumbering Broadway, has been here a year and now is actually doing "Citizen Kane." And the camera work on that picture is startlingly beautiful. The timing and pacing is as precise as Rochester's answer to a Jack Benny gag. And now it comes out that all during the filming he's done every scene to a metronome, which times your words to the beat.



HOPPER

His leading lady, Linda Winters, will be a new find, and Gregg Toland will probably get one of those nasty little Oscars. And who can blame Orson for waiting—when he gets what HE wants in the end.

Yet this hard-working lad has been vilified by pseudointellectuals who don't know him except through his publicity. He hasn't gone out of his way to make that glamorous or flattering.

Welles kids himself and everybody else. He said, after a recent lecture at a university, "When nobody interrupted me, I went on and talked another hour and nobody walked out. But I discovered later that if they had, they would have had to go to a class." He discussed intellectual hams, "those who think furiously about something while talking of something else."

Says actors are a special race of people who like to look at themselves whether they're handsome or ugly, and love the sound of their own voices. Actors don't answer any need—just fulfill themselves. Compares the urge of an actor to that mysterious thing which impels the salmon to go through rapids, whirlpools, and storms until it finally gets to a quiet pool—and lays an egg. An actor will surmount any difficulty and confusion to get out on a stage—and lay an egg.

"The theater will never die," he says, "because actors won't let it. New blood will come out of Hollywood just as early motion picture actors came from Broadway. New York has become nothing but a roadstand—Broadway is dead."

While I was dining at the Derby and thinking about all this, in walked Benny Rubin, who has a wide-eyed enthusiasm for Welles, and when I started talking about him, his eyes grew big as a couple of well-peppered fried eggs, and he exploded, "Listen, Hedda, I've got plenty to say about Orson. He's a swell guy, and it's a dirty shame the way they're kicking him around. Orson's been on the receiving end of every corny joke from coast to coast; they even laughed at his beard. Everyone says he shuns the film colony. For cryin' out loud, wouldn't you snub your best friend if you had as much work to do?"

And he went on: "Orson's really a shy, retiring modest guy! O. K., so he laughs in loud bellows when he thinks something is funny, and that makes him conspicuous. Look, some people sneeze loud, some eat loud. Orson laughs loud because he has such a delicious sense of humor. Are you gonna blame the guy?"

I didn't have time, for he continued, "The people he works with adore him. Those in the WPA Theater in New York are still with him, so there!"

Welles dresses carelessly in a loose-fitting tweed suit, which fits him like the loose hide on the rear end of an elephant, because he's taken off 50 pounds. He has an iron will and a profound conviction that he's right. And after watching Little Orson Annie direct himself in his own story, and noting all the innovations he's putting in, I wonder if perhaps he's not right.

Anyway, I do know he's far from being an egotistical poseur. His aim is to create exciting entertainment for the American public, and he takes time out to "lobby for his hobby" by teaching lesser lights how to do a scene—which helps those less fortunate to help themselves. And from the start I've wished him luck, and I still do. I think he'll surprise Hollywood.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Nothing is quite so obvious as the effort of the sporting press the past few days to be awfully nice to Sammy Snead. Like folks in a rush to make amends for a horrible mistake, the golf writers used all of the superlatives they could muster to describe the courage and the gallantry of Snead's battle with Byron Nelson in the P. G. A. finals.

POVICH

It was only a year ago that they labeled Snead everything but a quitter, in so many words, when he stood on the seventeenth tee of the Philadelphia Country Club needing only a pair of pars to win the United States Open title, and blew his chance. Snead's five on the seventeenth hole and his eight on the eighteenth set the writing boys to typing scornful pieces of his ability to play even decent golf when the chips were down.

For his crime of muffing those two holes and the Open title, Snead was castigated. The golf writers, the better to turn a phrase or two, made high carnival of the fellow's tragedy. They intimated that he would never live down his disgrace; that as a big-shot golfer he was through. With no more compunction than stepping on a roach they consigned him to the golfing discards. He was labeled.

For some reason, no other golfer ever received such harsh treatment. Even in last week's P. G. A. tournament when Gene Sarazen couldn't hold a three-hole lead over Snead on the last nine and was beaten, they put it down simply to Sarazen's age. Sarazen "tired" they said. Little mention was made of the fact that one of the reasons Sarazen "tired" was because Snead jumped two stymies laid him by Sarazen perfectly.

That performance by Snead on that last nine was certainly evidence that the fellow was not exactly of the folding type, but the golfer writers somehow failed to recognize it until Snead made his gallant last-round fight against Nelson. He fired a 68 at Nelson in the final round in a game bid to take it all, and the writing boys were constrained to tumble on the band wagon of the loser.

The mistake the golf writers made in Snead's case is an old complaint against the sports pages and their haste to imply a lack of courage by an athlete. Fighters and ball players often get the same harsh treatment by sports writers who fail to distinguish between an athlete's license to encounter and off day and a lack of fortitude.

Max Baer was labeled "quitter" when he lost to Joe Louis, perhaps justifiably, but how can one explain that in the Lou Nova fight he took far more punishment than Louis handed out yet stayed on his feet for the full 15 rounds in as game an exhibition as any man ever offered. The kind thing to note would be, perhaps, that Baer is not a quitter.

Snead's golf career is a bit peculiar, which may have been the reason for the readiness to infer that he lacked the fortitude of a true champion. He is a great golfer, yet he has been an in-and-outer on occasion. There was the finals of the P. G. A. tournament at Shawnee-on-the-Delaware in 1938 when he met Paul Runyan in the finals.

The night before his match with Runyan, you couldn't get a bet down on the latter. Nobody wanted to wager against Snead. Yet the next day, Runyan administered an 8-up-and-7 beating to Snead, the most crushing defeat in P. G. A. finals history. In the doubt of Snead's ability to win an important match other factors were forgotten; such as, for example, the fact that Shawnee was not a long course where Snead's driving would give him the advantage, but a short course peculiarly adapted to Runyan's remarkable second shots to the green.

The impression that Snead couldn't win a national title was deepened by his performance earlier in the summer in the National Open when he was tied for the lead at the end of the second round, was two strokes back at the end of the third round, and finished out of the money with a miserable 81 on the last round.

Then his critics really hopped on him, pointing out his collapse in the Open the year before, and slyly inferring that he was broken as a national title winner because he didn't have the, shall we say guts.

But what are you going to say to that? Who won the first big cash tournament that followed the open of 1939? Snead, who took down the $2,500 Miami Open. Who smashed all money records for pro golf by winning more than $19,000 in 1938? Snead, who was only a year out of the West Virginia hills. Who was the third leading money winner in 1939? Mr. Snead. Who is among the top five money winners this year? Snead.

How about the first open he ever played in, the 1937 affair at Detroit? Who set a new all-time record for the open with a score of 283? Snead. Why didn't he win the open? Because a half hour after he posted his record-breaking score, Ralph Guldahl came in with a lower record of 281.

He didn't fold in the Masters Open of last year when he fired a 68 in the last round and lost to Guldahl by a stroke. And at St. Pete the same year he picked up three strokes in the last round, finished in a tie and won after two play-offs. In the severest test of them all, the 108-hole Westchester Open, with the biggest cash prize of any tournament at stake —$5,000—who won it but Snead. And how did he win it? By shooting a last round of 69. A quitter, huh?

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Sept. 3.—If such a thing is possible, a Baer-Comiskey fight would be a good match for both men. Baer is slated to get almost as much money in guarantees and radio rights as he demanded to fight Joe Louis, and Comiskey is no Louis—yet. Comiskey on the other hand has a good chance to lick Baer, particularly if Max can't work up a mad against him. And if he beats Baer he takes that short cut to a title fight that is the dream of all minor contenders.

CONSIDINE

If the match goes through it will be a tribute to Jack Kearns' ready ingenuity, believed to have been exhausted or out of order for years. The old master of astute angle-shooting actually raised $50,000 in cold cash in Jersey City, to provide guarantees and promotion expenses for the would-be match. Fifty thousand dollars was something Kearns used to spend during a few bacchanilian weeks after one of the big Dempsey fights. But today it is important sugar in the fight game, particularly when raised in advance, and it comes under the general heading of miracles when one considers that it was raised in a city whose so-called favorite son, Tony Galento, was unable to draw much more than that for fighting Baer.

The cause of the great clash between Oscar Vitt and Jeff Heath, in case anybody cares, was Heath's belief that he is not a good pinch-hitter. Vitt sent him up to the plate to bat as a deputy in a Washington-Cleveland series, and Heath struck out. When he came back he sat down near Vitt and gave vent to a long grass-singeing sentence of cuss words.

When Heath finished Vitt said, "Is that meant for me or are you talking about yourself?"

Heath roared that it was meant for Vitt and charged the manager with trying to show him up by asking him to pinch hit. He promised to warp a Louisville slugger around Vitt's conk and Vitt ordered him to the locker room and told him to turn in his uniform. He did, but went to C. C. Slapnicka, the team's general manager, and Slappy told him to put the suit back on.

The Indians, by the way, held a secret meeting in Washington during their last stay there and didn't invite Vitt. And here's an ironic twist to that new American League rule which prohibits a pennant winner from asking trades for a year after winning the bunting. The Indians voted enthusiastically for it, figuring, like the others, that they were striking a blow at the gizzard of the Yankee monopoly.

Now it looks as if Cleveland will win, and thus will be forced to keep the same warring players on the roster. That means, as Alva Bradley has pointed out, that there is little chance that Vitt can be kept as manager, even though he wins the pennant and World Series.

Golf's most zealous recruit is Joe Louis. He dabbled around with the game for a couple of years but in the past few months he has become a rabid disciple of the pastoral evil. His short game has improved under constant lessons and he is harnessing the power that enabled him to belt a ball close to 300 yards off the tee. He goes to a course near his Utica, Mich., farm at 8 o'clock every morning and stays there most of the day. Now he plans to build an 18-hole course on his 477-acre estate—apparently in order to be able to start earlier and play later. He shoots in the low 80's but soon will be down in the 70's.

When they call pro football America's fastest-growing sport they aren't kidding. From a fly-by-night loop in 1920, the National Football League has made astounding gains. Its operating expense will be more than $1,000,000 this season—a figure that includes salaries, rentals, equipment, publicity, etc. Twenty years ago league franchises cost $50. Today a few of them are worth a half a million. The only phase of the game that has lagged is the players' salaries. They average perhaps five times as much as at the beginning of the league, but the league and its owners have realized as much as a thousand per cent on their investment.

Sox Defeat Detroit 8th Game in Row

Losers Drop Further Behind Cleveland; Pale Hose Score Seven in First

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 3.—The unpredictable Chicago White Sox put the "Indian" sign on Detroit's Tigers again today.

Scoring seven runs in a first-inning marathon, the Sox trounced the Tigers, 10 to 2, to throw another damper on Detroit's pennant chances and put the third-place Tigers four full games back of the league-leading Cleveland Indians, against whom the Sox have had little success all season.

It was Detroit's eighth straight loss to the White Sox, who have been losing to Cleveland almost as consistently as they have whipped Detroit. In 20 games this season Chicago now has defeated Dttroit 13 times, whereas the Chicago club has lost only 15 out of 19 to the league leaders.

McCosky Hurt

Detroit, dropping a half game behind the second-place New York Yankees, lost the services of Barney McCosky, possibly for as long as a week. The star centerfielder strained muscles in his side in the second inning trying for a diving catch of Taft Wright's double.

Today's victory was nothing like either game of the close double victory which Chicago scored yesterday over the Bengals. Before the first inning was over 13 Chicago batsmen had gone to the plate, scoring seven runs on four hits, a sacrifice, six passes and one error.

Fred Hutchinson, young right-hander, gave up three walks and two hits before he gave way to Hal Newhouser. The latter walked three batsmen and allowed two hits before Clay Smith took over the hurling chore and ended the inning by forcing Julius Solters to pop out with the sacks loaded. Smith

Everett Upsets Horn in National Singles

Alice Marble Wins Opener With Ease

Harris Everett's Great Comeback Prevails In Five Sets; Riggs, McNeill Advance Easily as Kovacs' Antics Amuse Fans

By the United Press

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept 3.—Harris W. Everett, the "almost guy" of the tennis circuit this year, finally came through today with a second-round win in the National Singles Tennis Championships over Welby Van Horn, who went to the finals against Bobby Riggs last year.

Everett, a Jacksonville, Fla., boy who plays for the University of North Carolina, had to come from behind to win. He staged as courageous an uphill fight as ever witnessed on these historic West Side Tennis Club courts to eliminate Van Horn, seeded tenth and the fourth ranking player in the United States, 3—6, 5—7, 6—3, 6—0, 15—13.

Everett's victory was the only thing that resembled an upset today as second round play in the men's division was completed and all but five of the second round women's matches were played.

Riggs Beats Sutter

Bobby Riggs, the Chicagoan who learned his tennis in California, began defense of his title by eliminating former national intercollegiate champion Ernie Sutter, 6—2, 6—2, 8—6 in a well-played match.

Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, who is seeded right behind Riggs and favored to oppose the champion in the finals, had little more trouble in moving ahead 6—4, 6—4, 9—7 over Joseph Fishback, of New York.

Alice Marble, seeking her fourth title and her third in a row, breezed past Mrs. Josephine San Felippo, of New York, 6—0, 6—1, and second seeded Helen Jacobs, a four-time champion herself, disposed of Cecile M. Bowes, national squash racquets champion from Cynwyd, Pa., in the same manner—6—1, 6—0.

Kovacs Is Weird

Frank L. Kovacs almost had the stadium gallery of 1,500 in hysterics with his weird antics in beating J. Norman Anderson, jr., of Hoboken, N. J., 6—1, 2—6, 6—1, 10—8.

The 6-foot 4-inch Californian, who is seeded third, knew that he could win whenever he wanted to and he had a circus prolonging the last set. With countless match points, he would try a two-handed, backhanded or underhand serve, and hit a lob with all his strength straight up in the air, or just push a little setup across the net for Anderson to kill. Anderson joined in the fun, and the match might have been going yet if Anderson hadn't batted one of those easy little setup balls across the sideline.

The foreign threat, least formidable since the World War years, almost ended completely today when four of the five invaders were ousted.

Baer and Comiskey Meet This Month At Jersey City

By International News Service

Paterson, N. J., Sept. 3.—Negotiations for former heavyweight king Max Baer to oppose youthful Pat Comiskey in a 15-round bout at Jersey City during the week of September 23 were completed today, Abe J. Greene, chairman of the New Jersey Boxing Commission, announced.

Under the contracts, slated to be signed tomorrow, Comiskey will receive a percentage instead of the $10,000 guarantee previously discussed. Promoter Jack Kearns must deposit a $30,000 check with Greene, binding Baer's guarantee.

Krakky Seeks First Victory; Yanks Are Foes

Lefty Gomez Likely Hurling Opponent In Game Here Today

Joe Krakauskas today will renew his quest for the elusive victory that would be his first of the season. Manager Bucky Harris hasn't tossed Krakky into any soft spot. His opponents will be the Yankees, the hottest club in the league for the past five weeks, and now scenting the pennant.

Beating the Nats has been something of a routine with the Yankees this season and explains, in a great measure, their presence in second place, only three and a half games removed from the Indians. In 13 games with the Yanks this season, the Nats have been slapped down 11 times.

Krakauskas will be facing a club that has come out of the ruck to win 19 of its last 23 games and threaten to win the pennant. Until they were shut out by Johnny Babich, of the Athletics, in their last game, the Yankees had won eight straight.

Pitching Decisive

A magical reformation in Joe McCarthy's pitching has literally lifted the Yanks into second place. The team's hitting has been more timely than constant. McCarthy's pitchers—Red Ruffing, Marius Rus-

40-Year-Old Jimmy Wilson's Double in 8th Decides Battle, Dropping St. Louis To Tie for Third; Beggs Wins in Relief

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Sept. 3.—Forty-year-old Jimmy Wilson, sometime manager, coach and catcher and who has a son nearly ready for pro baseball, batted the Cincinnati Reds to a 4-3 victory over St. Louis today to send them eight full games ahead of idle Brooklyn in the National League pennant race.

The champions' eleventh triumph in 15 starts also was Fireman Joe Beggs' ninth in a relief role, and dropped the Cards to a third-place tie with Pittsburgh.

Jimmy got his chance in the eighth and turned in his second double since returning to active duty yesterday as sub for the injured Ernie Lombardi.

Balk Starts Fuss

After Ival Goodman sent an easy hopper to First Baseman Johnny Mize, Frank McCormick drew a walk off Bill McGee, who until then had been pitching handsome ball. A balk, roundly disputed by the Cards, sent Frank to second and Manager Billy Southworth yanked McGee.

Lombardi, out of the game with an injured finger, batted for Jimmy Ripple and Clyde Shoun gave an intentional pass, much to the displeasure of 12,808 fans in the stands. Morrie Arnovich ran for Ernie.

McCormick was out at third try-

Post-Grad Offer Brings Ineligibility To Coast Gridder

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Sept. 3.—John Petrovich, Alhambra football star, was declared ineligible to participate in athletics at either University of Southern California or U. C. L. A., because the universities offered to finance his postgraduate work in another school, Edwin N. Atherton, commisisoner of the Pacific Coast Conference, disclosed today.

Atherton declared Petrovich and nine other prep school stars ineligible to play for three conference members on the ground the schools violated provisions of a rigid new antiproselyting code adopted last January.

The Petrovich case raised a furore in collegiate athletic circles in southern California, but in releasing his report Atherton pointed out this and other cases could be appealed to the conference and reversed if the conference disagreed with his opinion.

Petrovich was promised expenses for additional postgraduate study at California Institute of Technology in aeronautical engineering if he enrolled at Southern California.

"He was also given to understand that a sponsor would be appointed to furnish him with such financial assistance as he might need in addition to his compensation from a regular campus job," Atherton's report added.

'Skins Arrive Home After Long Jaunt

Millner's Condition Doubtful as Pros Continue Drills Here

Already minus their leading ground gainer, Andy Farkas, the Redskins today will get the verdict on the condition of Wayne Millner, one of the main cogs in the passing attack, as they settle down to work for the opening game in Griffith Stadium September 15 against the Brooklyn Dodgers.

The 1939 Eastern Division runners-up in the National Pro League arrived yesterday at Union Station at 4:55 p. m. after a 7,225-mile jaunt across the country and back and were given a respite from a morning workout.

Coach Ray Flaherty ordered everybody out at 2 p. m., however, at Anacostia Park, where the team will practice twice daily until October after Clarke Griffith's Nats are through with the ball park.

Millner, who received a painful back injury in practice before Monday's exhibition game in Milwaukee with the Green Bay Packers, will undergo an examination today by the club physician.

Coach Optimistic

As in the case of Farkas, whose knee operation will keep him inactive at least ten weeks, Flaherty minimized Millner's injury and said

Nowaskey in Stars' Line-up For Game With Giants Tonight

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 3.—The "star-less" Eastern All-Star football squad—a collection of gridders selected for ability rather than headlines—and the New York pro Giants, who have never lost to one of these "hand-picked" teams, tangle in the Polo Grounds tomorrow night.

They meet before an expected crowd of 40,000 or more in the fifth annual game for the New York Herald Tribune Fresh Air Fund.

The All-Stars, although underdogs in the betting, represent the strongest squad the Giants, Eastern champions of the National Pro League, have had to face in this annual contest. Although ten of the eleven probable starters go from tomorrow's tussle direct to National League teams, less than half ever cut any kind of a figure in the national gridiron picture during their collegiate careers.

On the other hand, the Giants take into the game the same line, sparked by all-league Mel Hein at center, which has been a standout in the league for years. Back of this forward wall, however, Steve Owen has shaken up his ball-carrying department and probably will start with Ward Cuff and his educated toe; Nello Falaschi, the ex-Santa Clara ace; Hank Soar and Len (Feets) Barnum. All but Falaschi, who

Favorable Starting Times Given Trio For Mamaroneck; Skinker in Debut

Washington's youth delegation to the National Amateur Championship, 19-year-old Earle Skinker, 20-year-old Ralph Bogart and 21-year-old Billy Shea, will leave today for the Winged Foot Country Club, Mamaroneck, N. Y., and a few days' practice before the first day's qualifying next Monday.

Pairings and starting times for the forty-fourth annual championship were announced yesterday by the United States Golf Association, and the three local players received favorable times but no prominent partners.

Bogart, the city amateur champion who will be making his second visit to the big time, will play at 9:10 Monday and 12:12 Tuesday with Mark Stuart, of the host club, and Fred Bedford, Dallas.

Pairings Listed

Billy Shea, who qualified in Portland, Oreg., three years ago and won his first-round match, will also be playing in his second national amateur. The Congressional representative drew Henry Kowal, Indianapolis, and Jack Shields, Tulsa, as partners at 10:27 the first day and 1:29 the second.

Skinker, Columbia's young delegate, who will be making his national tournament debut, will play at 11:58 Monday and 8:56 Tuesday with Walter Senna, New Bedford, Mass., and Gene Gaillard, Atlanta.

Pairings of the other players who qualified at Chevy Chase are:

Otto Greiner, Baltimore, at 11:44 Monday and 8:42 Tuesday with Cary Middlecof, Memphis, and Jack Hoerner, well-known mid-Western amateur from Glenview, Ill.

Jimmy Watts, Lynchburg, Va., with Douglas Ford, Tuckahoe, N. Y., and J. D. Hoblitzel, jr., Parkersburg, W. Va., at 11:23 and 8:21, on the respective days.

Samuel Bates, jr., Virginia Beach, with James Oleska, Brooklyn, and Fred Rochester, at 11:51 and 8:49.

150 in Field

Johnny Burke, the Georgetown graduate who won the National Intercollegiate Championship and the District Amateur while at the Hilltop, is a contender and drew former champion Jesse Guilford and former publinks champ and national finalist B. Patrick Abbott as partners. Frank Allan, finalist in the Chevy Chase Invitation here three consecutive years, will play with Gillette Burton and Leo Martin.

The field is made up of 150 players and will start at 8 a. m., in threesomes, and play through 1:37.

The low 64 scorers at the end of Monday's and Tuesday's medal rounds will qualify for the match play that starts with a pair of rounds on Wednesday.

Most attractive threesomes from a gallery standpoint will be Chick Evans, Bill Hold and Scotty Campbell; Defending Champion Bud Ward, Bob Sweeny and Bruce McCormick, and Johnny Goodman, Frank Strafaci and Reynolds Smith, and Willie Turnesa, Maurice McCarthy, another former intercollegiate champion from Georgetown, and Wilford Wehrle.

the veteran end will be ready to play in the opening game.

And just as he stated when he left for the Redskins' summer training quarters in Spokane, Wash., a month ago, Owner George Marshall said that the 1940 Redskins "are far superior to any club we've ever had."

"I frankly believe that we are going to win the Eastern Division championship this season and go on to beat the Western champions, probably Green Bay," Marshall expostulated.

Flaherty will set to work today to get the Skins primed for the exhibition Tuesday night in Boston again the Eastern College All-Stars, and may announce the second cut in the squad now consisting of 38 players, 10 of whom are new men drafted from various colleges over the country.

The status of at least three veterans—Jay Turner, former George Washington University star; Red Morgan, who came to the club last year from Southern California, both backs, and End Johnny Spirida was considered doubtful as a result of the Milwaukee exhibition.

Swanky Lad Wins First Pigeon Race

Swanky Lad, from the loft of the Morris Brothers, yesterday was adjudged the winner of the opening race in the current young bird season of the Capital City Pigeon Racing Club. It navigated the 110 miles between Cumberland, Md., and Washington, in 2 hours 55 minutes, for an average of slightly less than 40 miles an hour. A steady northeast wind hampered the trip somewhat.

In hot pursuit of the winner were a pair of racers from the loft of C. W. Morgan. In all, 120 birds from 14 lofts took part in the affair.

Hash Is Father

Boston, Sept. 3 (AP).—Herb Hash, rookie Red Sox pitcher, became a proud father tonight. His wife gave birth to a 7-pound boy.

Exhibitors Groom Pets for Spaniel Show

200 or More Entries Expected for First Annual Local Event

"Dogs, I love 'em," said jovial Harry Lustine, the real estate operator, yesterday as he rubbed his hands and watched cocker spaniels of all sizes and descriptions turn his back lawn into a shambles.

Behind Lustine's home in the 3000 block of Davenport street northwest, there were gathered enough of the flop-eared mammals to carry away most of the silverware at a pedigreed show.

And that's just what the long-haired, underslung pups were preparing to do, for Lustine was playing host to several of the exhibitors for the first annual Capital City Cocker Spaniel Club show scheduled Saturday at Silver Spring Armory.

"There," Lustine pointed to a trio of nervous pedigreeds, "is my kennel. Pretty, aren't they, and just as harmless as trained mosquitoes."

With that he hurriedly withdrew his gaze, as his wife separated two of his pets before one was able to sever the other's head with a savage bite, and introduced some of his guests.

First there was tall, somber-faced Dr. C. R. Davis, president of the club, whose show entry will be Pride of Pilot, a parti-colored cocker spaniel, marked red and white.

There, too, was G. W. Studebaker, club secretary, with his Joan's Inky Belle, sired by Trader Horn, and Mrs. Richard Hugh Bashore, with Anthony Bonnyfeather, a 3-year-old novice.

Before long one of Washington's youngest political club leaders came with another entry. It was Joan Colladay, granddaughter of Edward Frank Colladay, national Republican committeeman for the District, and herself the secretary of the Junior Willkie-McNary-Johnson-Nice Club. Miss Colladay, aged 11, will exhibit Peter Wiggle.

With Miss Colladay were other youngsters also looking forward to the blue ribbon event, Margaret Bains, 11, of 712 Montgomery avenue, Lustine's son and daughter, Norbert, 9, and Marilyn, 11, and Dr. Davis' son Bobby, 9.

The trio of the spaniels which will represent the Lustines are Gay Boy of Gay Manor; Lady Bombeseen and Sir Bombeseen II, Dr. Davis' Pride of Pilot and Sir Bombeseen II, both were sired by Champion Pilot of Wirehaven.

The Capital City Cocker Spaniel Club was founded only this year. But despite that Lustine predicted the show would attract at least 200 entries and perhaps as many as 260. Studebaker announced that entries would be accepted at the Silver Spring Armory Saturday between 6 and 7 p. m. and that the judging would begin at 8.

As a door prize for the show Dr. Davis is donating a cunning solid black cocker spaniel puppy, the chance of winning which should draw many a spectator.—MUNHALL.

Gunners Sign Lain

St. Louis, Sept. 3 (AP).—Signing of Ernie Lain, former Rice Institute fullback, was announced today by the St. Louis Gunners professional football team. Lain, a 250-pounder, is expected to report to the club this week.

ON FISHING

Tuna Weighing 927 Pounds Still Is Record

Back in 1935, with in fishing for giant interest just starting bluefin tuna in northern waters, we predicted the world record for the species, held at that time by the English, would within five years exceed a thousand pounds.

We have missed out on that prediction, but not by much, for with the present season just about over there is every probability the present 927-pounder will continue in top place until next year.

ACKERMAN

This great fish, caught just this past week by Dr. John B. Vernaglia off Plum Island on the Massachusetts coast, takes the place of the 890-pound bluefin caught by John Manning last September off Wedgeport, Nova Scotia, and brings the record for the first time to the United States.

And now for another prediction. There is little doubt in our mind but what the record for these fish will, during the next five years due to the great interest being shown by anglers, be jumped another 300 pounds.

That would be a big fish, but we have seen them caught in nets that weighed three-quarters of a ton, and there are several recorded of like weight in Nova Scotia waters by harpoon.

A Long Island angler, Frank Luderman, fishing off Bailey Island, Me., last week broke the Maine record with a 765-pound tuna that took him 14 hours and 2 minutes to land—from 10 in the morning until past midnight. There is an idea that this might be a world record for an angler playing a fish without help.

We are glad to get anglers' entries for the various fishing contests, but we don't care for the actual fish, which a diminutive Pennsylvania miss, last week, thought was necessary. That is, unless it is so far out of the ordinary as to make photographs desirable.

In this case it was a 13-ounce spot. That is not bad as far as the average for the species in bay waters this year runs, but not quite of a winning size.

At that, we would be willing to lay a bet not a single one of the species has been entered for the current Neptune trophy, sponsored by the Washington Chapter of Ike Waltons. Anglers seem to be passing up this species, which Raymond Lurba, two years ago, was sufficiently interested in to the extent of adorning his new submarine room with it. We believe he first became interested at the meetings of Ikes every Monday. Now, he doesn't pass anything up; he'll go fishing at the mention of the word—which is the way some anglers are made.

Erl Roman, whose latest book—"Fishing for Fun in Salty Waters"—is as applicable to our bay waters as it is to those of southern Florida, is vacationing here.

Probably he wants to catch those small white perch, which seem to have been his first quarry some 20-odd years before record fish first fell to his prowess with rod and reel.

How one could leave Florida big game fishing for that of our bay country is beyond our understanding, maybe it "isn't the fish, but the fishing."

DAN DOUGLAS

Dan Douglas Out for Two Months With Appendectomy; Maryland, Cards And Hoyas Stage Early Drills

By Jack Munhall

For the second straight year misfortune in the guise of an emergency appendectomy yesterday robbed George Washington football squad of a dependable player before the start of the playing season.

Operated on in the University Hospital, Dan Douglas, a junior letterman end, will be lost to the team at least two months and possibly for the duration of the season, it was announced. The Colonials are not scheduled to begin practice until Monday.

Douglas' case sadly parallels that of "Koko" Kokoski, sophomore guard, who was similarly stricken before the 1939 campaign and did not return to the line-up until the final three games when he became a star.

Hoyas, Terps Work

Reinhart, left with only two experienced ends by the unexpected loss of Douglas, a 21-year-old speedster and fine defensive player, plans to shift versatile Tim Swett to the vacated position. Swett, a converted back already has earned letters at both guard and center, and if he shows aptitude for his new job will be retained as understudy to Johnny Picco and Frank August who are ticketed for the regular flank berths.

Douglas, who stands 5 feet 10 and weighs 170, prepped at Dickinson Seminary in Williamsport, Pa. During the past summer he was employed as a life guard at the Anacostia pool.

Out at College Park six players reported for the first time, bringing the Maryland squad to a total of 42 candidates, or within three of the full complement. Bad news for Coaches Jack Faber, Al Heagy and Al Woods was the announcement that John Sansone, a sophomore guard, would not return to school. Equally as discomforting to the tutoring triumvirate was the continued absence of Fred Widener, senior blocking back, who is undecided whether to leave college for work.

Four Backs Back

Yesterday's late arrivals included Tackle Bill Krouse, and Backs Milt Lumsden, Bernie Ulman, Don Shockey and Jim Dunn and Joe Hoopengardner. Those yet expected, besides Widener, are Frank Heyer, guard, and Centers Bob Smith and Jim Wharton.

The center situation is acute, for both Wharton and Smith are on the doubtful list. Wharton, ill during the summer, may not be ready before the middle of October. Smith, bothered all last season by a trick knee, has yet to prove that a recent operation has cleared up the trouble. In the meantime the Terps have only one snapper-back with any experience, and he is Frank Blazek, a 1939 reserve.

Only 11 players were missing from Georgetown's anticipated 47-man squad yesterday as the Hoyas began a two-a-day practice schedule. Greeted by a bright sun, the athletes responded with vigor to a program of calisthenics and brief fundamentals.

Squad Looking Well

Russ Sorce, sophomore tackle and biggest college or professional player in town, weighed in at 290 on the groaning scales, but expects to shed about 25 pounds before G. U.'s first game.

Twenty-nine Catholic University players greeted Line Coach Fod Cotton and Acting Coach George Vik at Brookland Stadium for morning and afternoon workouts. Cotton, in the temporary absence of Head Coach Dutch Bergman, was in charge of practice. Vik, former Card end coach, may resume that position this season, according to the grapevine.

Players absent from the first practice were Casmir Kaychewski, tackle; Al Norris, fullback; Bill Griffin, halfback; Joe Carrig, end; Charlie Moutenot, halfback; Leo Kane, end; Jim Nemec, tackle, and Jim Rankin, end.

Annapolis Duo Wins in Nat'l Girls' Doubles

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Sept. 3.—Robin (Twink) Briscoe, Santa Monica, Calif., came from behind today to furnish the first upset in the national girls' junior tennis championship with a 3—6, 6—4, 7—5 victory over sixth-seeded Nelly Sheer, of Miami Beach.

The University of California at Los Angeles freshman, calmly taking advantage of the overanxiousness of the South's second-ranking junior star, worked on Miss Sheer's backhand at the baseline after trailing, 1—4, in the second set.

All other favorites came through the quarter-finals without difficulty, except Pat Canning, seeded No. 1, who was excused for the day because of a match in the national women's singles tournament at Forest Hills. She meets Judy Atterbury, of Great Neck, Long Island, tomorrow.

Dot Wightman Loses

Fourth-seeded Pearl Harland, Santa Monica, put an end to the hopes of Dorothy Wightman, Chestnut Hill, Mass., daughter of the Wightman Cup donor, 6—3, 6—3; while Sissy Madden, Boston, No. 8, downed Pat Hover, Los Angeles, 6—4, 6—4.

Doris' Hart, 15-year-old Florida State champion, wasted little time with Nancy Ritchie, Philadelphia, winning 6—1, 6—4.

Others advancing to the round of eight were Muriel Magnusen, Minneapolis, over Helen Harrison, Stevenson, Md., 6—4, 6—1, and Gertrude A. Moran, Los Angeles, over Marion Woolhiser, Winnetka, Ill., 6—2, 6—0.

Lhamon-Tyler Win

Play also reached the second round in the doubles.

Lucia Lhamon, of Annapolis, lost in singles to Judy Atterbury, of Great Neck, Long Island, but teamed with Annapolis townsmate Lucy Tyler to win in doubles, beating Constance Hammett, of West Englewood, N. J., and Helen Vaughn, of New Rochelle, N. Y.

so, Atley Donald, Ernie Bonham and Steve Sundra—have been functioning better than any staff in the league.

For today, McCarthy indicated that he would take the wrappings off Lefty Gomez. A back ailment incurred early in the season rendered Gomez useless to the Yanks and he has scarcely figured in their late pennant drive.

Coincident with the Yankees' four-game visit to Griffith Stadium, which will include a double-header tomorrow, the Nats will be joined by four rookies.

Robertson Comes Up

From Charlotte will come Sherrard Robertson, nephew of Clark Griffith, who was a leading shortstop in the Piedmont League where he ranked among the top home run hitters and run-producers. Pitcher Louis Thuman and Catcher Bob Hahn have also been called in from Charlotte. Thuman, who has been in the Nats' spring training camp twice, blossomed as Charlotte's best pitcher and is tabbed as a big league prospect. He is a powerfully-built right hander.

However, the rookie whose appearance is awaited by the Nats' bosses particularly is Jim Mallory, the outfielder signed directly from North Carolina University, where he was a baseball and football star.

Mallory has been acclaimed by the Nats' scouts as a sure-fire big leaguer, and was recently a figure in the National Semipro tournament at Wichita, Kans. His performances in that tournament drew a dozen big league scouts flourishing contracts until they learned he was under contract to the Nats.

eliminated the strongest of the group—Pancho Segura, Equadorean, who saw a movie of Jack Bromwich and copied his two-handed technique. Parker won 6—3, 6—1, 7—5, but only after Segura frittered away a 5—1 lead in the third set. Pancho's countryman, Juan X. Aguirre, bowed 6—0, 6—1, 6—3, to Martin Buxby, of Miami; W. C. Choy, of China, fell 6—3, 6—3, 6—2 before Eighth-seeded Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., and D. O. McDairmid, of Canada, lost to Charles Mattman, Forest Hills, 7—5, 6—4, 9—7.

Only foreign survivor was George Lyttle-Rogers, the Irish Davis Cupper, who beat Alexander Carver, of Philadelphia, 2—6, 8—6, 6—4, 6—4.

Other seeded players to advance included:

Joe Hunt, No. 5, Annapolis, defeated August Ganzemuller, New York, 6—4, 6—1, 6—2; Bryan Grant, No. 7, Atlanta, defeated Willis Anderson, Los Angeles, 6—3, 6—2, 11—9; Henry Prusoff, No. 6, Seattle, defeated J. Gilbert Hall, South Orange, N. J., 4—6, 6—2, 6—3, 5—7, 6—4.

Pauline Betz, No. 3, Los Angeles, defeated Mrs. William Hester, jr., Glen Cove, N. Y., 6—0, 8—6; Sarah Palfrey, No. 5, New York, defeated Nina Brown, England, 6—0, 6—1; Virginia Wolfenden, No. 7, San Francisco, by default of Doris Hart, Miami.

Duke, Strong at All Positions, Seems Good Bet for Nat'l Title

Wade's Team With Backfield Averaging 200 Pounds, to Get Early Test in Vols

By the Associated Press

Durham, N. C., Sept. 3.—For a coach who avowedly judges his teams on how well they play rather than on games won and lost, William Wallace Wade may come mighty close to winning the mythical national football championship with his Duke eleven this season.

Reporting for their first drills yesterday, the big blue Dukes looked like a squad that could duplicate the perfect record of 1938 that landed them in the Rose Bowl for a losing assignment against Southern California.

Despite the loss of eight veterans of that game, the Blue Devils appear to have everything, including a fast, versatile backfield averaging about 200 pounds.

The Dukes will know early whether it's going to be a banner year or a bust. They meet Tennessee in their Rose Bowl "consolation" match October 5, the second game of the season.

Once by that test, Wade could aim for a perfect season—something he has missed by one game no less than three times since he came to Durham nine years ago. Last year Duke's only defeat was at the hands of Pittsburgh, 14-13.

"We should make a good showing," is the only prediction from the taciturn veteran whose policies of "it isn't whether you won or lost, etc.," has produced in recent years a consistent member of the Nation's top ten.

To replace George McAfee, graduated to the Chicago Cardinals, Roger Robinson, and Willard Eaves, in the backfield, Wade has a host of fine backs. Wesley McAfee, George's younger brother, is a triple-threat man who last year completed 23 passes in 46 tries with no interceptions. Frank Killian is another triple threater. Jap Davis is a swift 215-pounder at fullback. Tommy Prothro is a 210-pound giant quarterback, Steve Lach another 200-pounder who can do everything well. Carl Deane, Frank Swiger and Winston Siegfried all saw action in the big games last season.

Gone from the line are Ends Bolo Perdue and Bill Bailey, Guards Allen Johnson and Frank Ribar, and Center Gordon Burns.

Dinkey Darnell, a senior, and Al Piasecky, sophomore star last year, will man the flanks. Four fine tackles are available: Capt. Alex Wintersen, Tony Ruffa, Mike Karmazin and Bob McDonough, all veterans. John Nania, a veteran, and Charlie Jett, up from the reserves, are the guards. Bob Barnett, a letterman, will be a capable center.

Sophomores Jim Devonshire and Frank Ezerski, backs, and Speedster Bill Wartman, who was out of school last fall, all are sensational runners, but likely will be seasoned through the coming months for later use.

The schedule: September 28, Virginia Military at Durham; October 5, Tennessee at Knoxville; October 19, Colgate at Hamilton; October 26, Wake Forest at Wake Forest; November 2, Georgia Tech at Durham; November 9, Davidson at Durham; November 16, North Carolina at Chapel Hill; November 23, North Carolina State at Durham; November 30, Pittsburgh at Durham.

Rams Play Midwest All-Stars Tonight

Cleveland, Sept. 3 (U.P.).—Presenting Ohio's edition of the annual preseason warfare between professional and all-star football teams, the Cleveland Rams battle the Midwest College All-Stars in Cleveland Stadium tomorrow night.

The Rams won both previous games from Ohio College All-Star elevens, so the ranks of the rah-rah boys were broadened this year to include players from such schools as Northwestern, Notre Dame, Carnegie Tech, West Virginia and Detroit.

Coach Bill Edwards, from Western University, said the collegians, whom he is piloting, "are in pretty good shape now with the exception of Fullback Joe Thesing, of Notre Dame, who has a sprained toe."

Coach Dutch Clark is smiling over prospects of the Rams in the American Legion-Cleveland News charity brawl.

Brewers Beat Pepco, 2 to 1, for 2d Straight Sandlot Title

James Hurls Six-Hit Ball For Winners

Rival Doug Morgan Yields Only Five But Walks Nine in Tourney Finals

For the second straight year, The Washington Post Industrial League's Heurich Brewers are masters of all they survey o nthe sandlots in the District.

they survey on the sandlots in the title yesterday when they nosed out Pepco, 1937-38 city champion, 2-1, in the final clash of the D. C. tournament. Contrary to their usual custom, they did it without coming from behind, merely pushing across both their runs in the sixth and withstanding every Pepco rally from there on in.

For the third straight day, Ellipse stands were packed for the meeting of the stellar clubs. Fans saw Walter James pitch a heady 6-hit game in Heurich's behalf, and Pepco's Doug Morgan, who allowed only five safeties, lost as a result of his own wildness. He passed nin batters.

Brewers Leave Today

Heurich thus will represent the District in the National Amateur Baseball Federation tourney in Birmingham, Ala., starting Saturday. The team will leave tomorrow afternoon from Union Station on a special train which will already be carrying champions of Waterbury, Conn.; Springfield, Mass., and Baltimore. The Cumberland (Md.) titlist will be packed up n route to Cincinnati, where seven more city and State champs will complete the passenger list.

Despite the nine passes issued by Morgan, Heurich needed only one for its winning margin. That one went to Catcher Pat Murphy to start the sixth. Mack Posnack followed with the only hit of the inning, a single to centerfield, but Pepco then ran into trouble. Outfielder Leatherwood hurled wildly over third base in an attempt to stop Murphy, and the ball went into the crowd. Murphy scored easily and Posnack went all the way to third. It took only a long fly by Huck Stahl to chase Posnack home with the most important run of the game.

Pepco Threatens

Pepco's retaliation came in the seventh inning and had Brewer enthusiasts biting their nails. James' fumble of Simonds' line drive put him on first base, and Fitzpatrick moved him to second with a clean single. Sullivan's contribution was a sacrifice that moved both men up, and then Pinchhitter Garvey drove in Pepco's only run with an infield out, Kaufman to Posnack. Fitzpatrick died at third as Morgan duplicated his predecessor's effort.

Immediately following the game it was announced that D. C. sandlot fans, wishing to follow the Brewers South, might do so at a special rate on the same train. Reservations may be made at District 3300.

San Diego Wins In Legion Series

Albemarle, N. C., Sept. 3 (AP).—San Diego, Calif., defeated Albemarle, N. C., 6-5, today in the opening game of the national championship series of the American Legion's junior baseball tournament.

The California juniors, national titlists in 1938, pounded J. W. (Lefty) Lisk from the mound in the fifth with a seven-hit barrage and five runs. Clyde Dick, who relieved Lisk, allowed only two hits for the remainder of the game, but the damage already had been done.

Gov. Clyde R. Hoey pitched the first ball with Secretary of State Thad Eure receiving.

62 Boys Begin Grid Drills At Eastern

Coach Kelley Promises Candidates a Tough, Grueling Program

By Bill Burnett

Mike Kelley can think of approximately 24 things he'd rather be doing than coaching Eastern High's entry in the Interhigh football series. But as long as the job is his he'll probably make the best showing possible.

As the gruff Marine officer puts it, "I'm too darn old to get the same kick out of this sort of thing. Among other jobs, I'd rather put more time on drilling the cadets. You wouldn't believe it, but a coach takes almost as much of a beating at his job as the kids he works with."

Whether he's tickled to death with the task before him or hates it equally as much, Mike started off in pursuit of the 1940 public school crown with a bang yesterday. Sixty-two starry-eyed youngsters reported for the first day of practice, and as a result there are 62 advanced cases of rheumatism today.

80 Expected

Unless they hear about the awful grind, Mike expects a total of 80 candidates to be working each day before school starts. Two workouts daily will be the order—from 10 to 12 a. m. and from 1:30 to 3 p. m.

Explaining this stiff procedure, Mike says, "A team is never any better than the condition of its individual players. Other coaches let their kids off with briefer drills, but mine will have to sweat for their places."

If the first day's turnout means anything, Kelley may wind up with something special at the end of the season—maybe even Eastern's third interhigh football title in 48 years.

Lettermen Back

Four lettermen came back, including Post All-District Tackle Bob Pieri. The others were Harry Bordow, guard; Paul DiMeglio, center, and Eddie Teague, back. A couple of basketball players who have performed well as grid reserves—Neil Craig and Moe Shulmen—also put in an appearance in search of backfield spots.

Linemen with at least a little experience upon whom Kelley can call are Francis Manilli, a huge tackle; Fats Moore, a newcomer also looking for a tackle job, and Buddy Kent, a fast and heavy end.

With that array of talent, and whatever else turns up unexpectedly, Kelley hopes to hold his own in interhigh competition. His first game isn't until the 28th, against Episcopal, so more than three weeks are available for his particular type of "conditioning."

Phil Fox, former Central High and Wilson Teachers' star, who has somewhat the same ideas, will assist Kelley with the routine. Between them, Eastern may be expected to do pretty well by itself this year.

Government Net Entries Near Close

Entries for the annual Federal and District government employes' tennis championships opening Saturday on the Potomac Park courts will close tomorrow.

Entry fees are $2 for the singles, and $3 per team for the doubles. Entries can be made at the Tennis Shop, 1015 Fifteenth street northwest. None will be accepted by telephone.

Rosedale Boys Take Recreation Swim Title by Wide Margin

Don Bradley Named Outstanding; Essex Sisters Capture Girls' Medals

Rosedale Playground's swimming team, paced by Bucky Simnods, Don Bradley, Bob Watson and "Flip" Flanagan, won its fourth straight D. C. Recreation Department swimming championship yesterday with a total of 85 points.

The next best team was that of Takoma, which accounted for 45 points. Anacostia was third with 36 and Georgetown fourth with 16.

Awards to its swimming stars were also made at Rosedale yesterday, Betty Essex earning the Jake Hengstler Trophy as the outstanding girl swimmer, and Don Bradley taking the Hengstler Trophy for boys. In each case the prize was donated by Rosedale's popular coach.

Other girl medal winners were Pat Essex, in the 9-years-and-under class; Carol Essex, 13 and 14 years; June Snyder, 15 and 16 years, and Jeanette Milbrandt and Rita Essex, 17 years and over.

Boys medalists were Joe Taylor, 70 pounds; "Flip" Flanagan, 85 pounds; Billy Martin, 100 pounds; Buddy McCreary, 135 pounds, and Richard Specht, unlimited.

Who Will Fight Henry Armstrong, Where and When?

Who is going to fight Henry Armstrong for his featherweight title, and where? And when?

Washington's Variety Club and Promoter Joe Turner have announced that they have Armstrong under contract to defend his title here on September 23, against an opponent to be named.

Pittsburgh's Dapper Dan Club, a charity organization, announced two days ago that Armstrong would sign this week for a $25,000 guarantee to defend his title against Fritzie Zivic in Pittsburgh "late this month."

Yesterday, according to the Associated Press, Promoter Mike Jacobs, of New York, notified the Pittsburgh promoters that Armstrong's next title bout would be against Lew Jenkins under Jacobs' promotion in New York.

Said Promoter Joe Turner last night: "It's all bunk. Armstrong will fight in Washington on September 23."

Mrs. Meckley Upset Victim in Mason-Dixon

Mrs. R. J. Pailsey, Dark Horse, Wins First-Round Match

Special Dispatch to The Post

White Sulphur Springs, Sept. 3.—Mrs. R. J. Pailsey, a dark-horse contender from Cleveland, provided a major first-round upset in the annual Mason and Dixon women's championship here today by defeating Mrs. Betty P. Meckley, a many-time contender from Washington, 1 up, on the nineteenth hole.

Two up at the turn and one up and one to play, Mrs. Meckley three-putted the eighteenth green to allow Mrs. Pailsey to square the match and the District player lost on the nineteenth when she dubbed six straight shots and the Clevelander won with a five.

Mrs. Meckley's roud included eight three-putt greens.

Washington's other championship flight representative, Edith Miller, lost every hole to Medalist Virginia Guilfoil, who posted a 10 and 8 markin of victory. Miss Guilfoil played the first nine in 40.

Other District results: Mrs. H. A. Knox, second flight downed by Mrs. W. A. Givens, Pittsburgh; three and two; Mrs. F. R. Keefer, victor six and four over Mrs. D. N. Jones, Cleveland; third flight, Mrs. H. L. Lacey beaten by Mrs. F. L. Lewis, Dayton, seven and six; Mrs. C. H. Rhodes, defeated by Mrs. C. A. Stover, Pittsburgh, three and one; Mrs. Trezise, one up over Mrs. H. A. Mihills, all-Washington match. Fourth flight, Mrs. C. H. Willingham ousted by C. E. Wise, Pittsburgh, two up, while last District player, Mrs. H. L. Cobb, lost to Mrs. John Morrison, Charleston, four and three. All first round defeats into consolation.

Stars, Giants To Play Tonight

joined the Giants a year ago, are veterans.

Tuss McLaughry, the Brown University coach and pilot of the Stars, still is undecided as to just which of his backs will start. His son, John, who played under Tuss at Brown, probably will handle the fullback chores, and Merl Condit, Carnegie Tech's forward passing star, will be at one of the halfback slots. The other posts probably will be decided from among Ben Kish, of Pitt; Jerry Ananis, of Boston College, and a couple of huskies from the "small college" ranks of Pennsylvania, John Rogalla, of Scranton, and Walt Strosser, a left-handed passer from St. Vincent. Ed Boell, New York U.'s fine passer, and Ronnie Cahill, of Holy Cross, are sure to see considerabl action later. Bob Nowaskey, of George Washington, will start at left end.

Heading the line squad is big Ed Kolman, from Temple, who was played for all but a few minutes when the All-Stars took on the Green Bay Packers last week.

The probable lineups:

Giants	Position	All Stars
Poole	L.E.	Nowaski (G. W. U.)
Cope	L.T.	Koiman (Temple)
Del Isola	L.G.	McGee (Temple)
Hein	Center	Titus (H. C.)
Tuttle	R.G.	Gussie (W. Va.)
Mellus	R.T.	Christofek (Pitts.)
Howell	R.E.	Riddick (Fordham)
Palaschi	Q.B.	Condit (C. T.)
Cuff	L.H.	Rogalla (S'anton)
Soar	R.H.	Strosser (St. V.)
Barnum	F.B.	McLaughry (Bwn.)

Officials—Referee, William Friesell (Princeton). Umpire, Bill Halloran (Providence). Linesman, Larry Conover (Penn State). Field Judge, E. E. Miller (Penn State). Game time—7:45 p. m. (E. S. T.).

Zaharias Boys In Arena Show Tomorrow

Brothers Babe, Chris To Go Into Action In Rassle Cofeature

Two of the Zaharias brothers will appear on tomorrow night's wrestling show at Turner's Arena, and indications are that in the very near future they will challenge for two-man team honors.

Tomorrow, however, Babe Zaharias will take on Abe Yourist, the Jewish grappler, while brother Chris will do battle with Maurice LaChappelle, the Frenchman.

Depending on how well the Zaharias brothers work, Promoter Turner may elect to have them team up against the winners of the two-man headline bout in which Lou Plummer and Eddie Newman, the villains, will tackle the 600-pound beef team of Sheriff Tom Hanley and Herbie Freeman. Hanley and Freeman are said to be training diligently for this two-man task.

Plummer and Newman are determined to win tomorrow, and thus force Ernie and Emil Dusek into a return bout. The Dusek beat Newman and Plummer last week.

Danno O'Mahoney, former world's champion, will make his 1940 debut, meeting Emil Dusek in the semi-windup.

Huntley Glen to Seek Another Jump Title in Columbus Show

Mrs. Perry's Washington Champion To Face Strong Foes Over Week-End

Huntley Glen, brilliant open jumping champion of the Washington Horse Show last spring, will shoot for the same crown in the Columbus Horse Show to be held Saturday and Sunday at Meadowbrook Saddle Club, in Chevy Chase, Md.

Secretary Vincent P. Lester said last night that the sterling performer from the barn of Mrs. W. Haggin Perry, Cobham, Va., sportswoman, has been entered in a majority of the jumper events which are expected to provide spectators at the show with many thrills.

Scene of Victory

In entering the Columbus meet, Huntley Glen will be returning to the scene of his spectacular triumph in the Washington show, for it was on the grounds of the Meadowbrook Saddle Club that he won the Washington title this spring.

A strong array of jumping talent will contest Huntley Glen's bid for the tricolor. In the group will be three of the foremost stars of the Fort Myer Horse Show team—Smacko, Rusty and Inclusive.

Among the last-minute entrants in the show is Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Whitney, the former Mrs. John Hay (Jock) Whitney, who has nominated Spring Hope, The Bear and Bon Nuit for many classes.

Virginia Horses Entered

Dr. L. M. Allen's Clifton's Lad, which won the Culpeper (Va.) Horse Show title for his Winchester, Va., owner, and Golondrina, which captured the reserve championship in the same show for Mrs. James C. Hamilton, of Warrenton, Va., both will be among the horses taking part in the meet.

From Asheville, N. C., will come Candolette, winner of many championships for Miss Eleanor Moffett, while another holder of many titles, Royalty II, owned by Robert S. Waters, of Johnston, Pa., a standout hunter developed by Ernest Redmon, of Middleburg, Va., is another entrant.

Mare Rallies To Win With Clever Ride

Erstwhile Quitting Mare Pays $18.20; 6,000 Fans Wager $93,000 on Card

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Timonium Race Track, Md., Sept. 3.—Herbert Claggett, Eastern Shore boy who rode his first winner at Marlboro's meeting, climbed into the saddle of Lula Khayyam here this afternoon and transformed the front-running mare to a come-from-behind horse in the featured Towson Nurseries Purse.

The 5-year-old mare with quitting habits was all run today under the horsemanship of the youthful rider. Those who know her probably gave up when she was caught in a tangle in the rear of the field, directly after the start. However, they did not reckon with the way she would perform for Claggett.

At the end of 6½ furlongs, Lula Khayyam was a length in front of Mrs. M. V. Jenkins' Quick Vine and another length and a half in advance of E. Samaha's Counora. What's more she caused the mutuel department to hang out an $18.20 mutuel.

Today's crowd was only a drop in the bucket as compared with the huge Labor Day gathering. However, the 6,000 who did show up had plenty of what it takes, for $93,000 went through the ticket windows, some $25,000 more than on the corresponding day last year.

Counora Tires

In the feature, Counora and Quick Vine broke in front and waged a merry duel for pacemaking honors. Counora, on the inside, had the best of it in the early stages. In the meantime, Lula Khayyam had overcome her trouble and set sail around the outside of the field.

Counora finally tired and Quick Vine took the lead but only momentarily. Lula Khayyam caught her on the swing for the stretch and then held on with all her might. Quick Vine closed gamely but Lula Khayyam had her punch left.

$26.80 Shot Wins

Carl's Choice, a $26.80 shot, won the day's steeplechase by a half length. C. Holloway, a gentleman rider who had never ridden a winner, had the mount and the combination wore down Forest Charm, another long shot, on the final flat run. Qualm was third in the field of seven. Judge's Bid, installed the favorite, failed to respond to Jockey Norman Brooks' urging and finished far back.

The daily double paid $24.40 and involved two well-played horses. Lady Andy won first race which was marked by a spectacular spill in which both horses and riders escaped injury. Lady Andy paid $7.50. Westing scored in the second race and paid $6.70.

KAPTAN	(Dufford)	113	6	7	Fell			174.60

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY ANDY, $7.50, $4.00, $3.20; DON BARR, $4.90, $3.50; SOLO DASH, $3.50.

LADY ANDY escaped trouble at first turn, drew out and was not threatened while finishing easily. DON BARR was strongly handled throughout and was no match for winner. SOLO DASH showed good effort. REAL BOY almost went down leaving gate, went to inside, and was rushed into horses and failed to recover.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:32. Off 2:33½. Winner, Mrs. E. A. Christmas' ch. f. (3), by Westwick—Lespedeza II. Trained by J. H. C. Forbes. Value to winner, $275; second, $75; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 1:24⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WESTING, $6.70, $3.70, $2.70; NANCI'S BEST, $14.60, $5.60; REPEAT, $3.20.

WESTING was hustled to front, withstood challenges of REPEAT and was kept to pressure to stave off NANCI'S BEST. The latter lacked early speed, came wide for racing room and closed with good energy on outside. REPEAT was used up chasing pacemaker and weakened. SNUGGLE stumbled while in first flight and recovered to rally in final furlongs.

Daily Double, LADY ANDY and WESTING, Paid $24.40

THIRD RACE—About 2 miles. Purse, $500; claiming; steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:02½. Off 3:02½. Winner, R. A. Hall's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CARL'S CHOICE, $26.80, $9.30, $4.60; FOREST CHARM, $15.60, $7.30; QUALM, $6.70.

CARL'S CHOICE, prominent from break, responded when placed to punishment in final quarter and disposed of FOREST CHARM. The latter set good pace while fencing well, but weakened on flat. QUALM was hard ridden and had no excuses. WRACKONITE made bad landings.

FOURTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:33½. Off 3:34. Winner, E. L. Richards' br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LANCEMAN, $5.30, $4.00, $3.80; WILD IRISH, $6.00, $4.70; LITTLE MISTRESS, $6.30.

LANCEMAN cut over in front of LITTLE MISTRESS in taking command and was kept to drive to hold WILD IRISH safe. The latter was well placed from start and closed willingly. LITTLE MISTRESS was in on rail throughout and tired. Garrett's claim of foul against winner was disallowed. EXHORT was held safe.

FIFTH RACE—Six an done-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:06. Off 4:07. Winner, H. D. Massey's ch. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FRANK H, $10.40, $7.10, $4.80; BEST POLICY, $11.20, $6.30; BRAZEN HUSSY, $5.20.

FRANK H. was hard ridden while in front, shook off early bid of ARMSTRONG and held BEST POLICY safe in closing drive. BEST POLICY, allowed to settle into best stride, improved position gradually and hung right at close. BRAZEN HUSSY had speed in spots. YANKEE LAD and GOODWINE were held safe.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:06½. Off 5:07. Winner, C. L. Parsons' b. g. (5), by Last Revelle—Witchbroom. Trained by P. G. Simms. Value to winner, $275; second, $75; third, $33; fourth, $15. Time, 1:52⅗.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLOX, $32.10, $12.10, $5.60; SUN SWEEP, $7.00, $4.00; KAI-MIN, $3.30.

BLOX headed field while close up early, came with good energy when placed to drive and wore down SUN SWEEP to win going away. SUN SWEEP, first away, set strong pace, but weakened in closing test. KAI-MIN was hard handled and tired.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:36½. Off 5:38. Winner, Mrs. H. Walters, Jr.'s, dk. b. g. (4), by Groucher—Happy Lope. Trained by L. M. Carver. Value to winner, $275; second, $75; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 1:52⅖.

Selections at Timonium

Dear Al:

This track missed the record for a day's betting on the half-milers on last Monday but it was really trying. The take was $24,000 short of matching the best day, Bel Air's $259,000 on the first Saturday this year. However, the total was the best in the 62-year history of this course. Some persons who were not at the track couldn't imagine a 50,000 crowd at the fair and races. I'll admit that I also would be a doubter had I not witnessed the throng. I will say that not more than 10,000 ever got close to the betting window. Speaking of Monday's racing, Art Brown is still in a fog as a result of it. Somebody gave him a tip on a horse whose name began with War. Art couldn't remember the last part of the name for the life of him. He finally gave up. Four "War" horses won. They were War Plumage, War Scare, War Port and War Dog. Jockey Leon Garrett, after being unable to get good mounts, was a rather up a winner at Marlboro and two dejected boy. However, he picked a couple of breaks to put a boy here Monday and he is in high gear now. Sometimes it just takes on his feet. Garrett never was and never will be a Sande or a Workman but, when he has his confidence, he can really guide a front-running horse. But Chilly Ebbie came from behind, at that. Racing Secretary Eddie Brennan treated horsemen, jockeys and scribes to lunch, and I had to miss it because of engine trouble. The boys in Wheeling are now doing so pretty good, so I'm told. Jockey Mike Sarno, who weighs 118 pounds, was trying to reduce. He left the track to go to the Turkish baths but got interested in the Yankees' ball game on the car radio and sat out in the parking lot until the battle ended. See you on the rail.—BILL.

First race—Misty Eye is far down the reserve list and a doubtful starter but will be a cinch if sent postward. Delhi Dan appears best of these assured a starting position. Baby Mowlee has speed and is a possible surprise.

Second race—Mac's Cantor is the class of this field and needs only the right ride. Likes the route and is in with only steadying weight. Scarlet Flame won last out in good fashion and should be prominent. Sail By has been rested and is dangerous.

Third race—Champfleury knows the way around this sharp jumping course and seems to have an edge on those gathered for the 2-mile test. Golden Reel has been jumping around the big time and should go well in this field. Rouge Catalan may better that last.

Fourth race—Wale Signal was messed about in the early stages of that race at Marlboro. Seems better placed in this field and I'm going to string along. Dabs has been rested and should be in the thick of contention. Reigh Tetrarch for the show end.

Fifth race—Navigation breaks off the rail and has the speed to make the most of the position. Looks like the right spot. Golden Mayne, in present form is dangerous. Bell Chimes was a paddock tip at the other town.

Sixth race—Bellthorn appears best of those gathered for this distance affair. May go to the top and stay there. Victory Light performed in good style at Marlboro and is a threat. Two Aces likes this track and could awaken.

Seventh race—First Fling shapes up as the right one in a rather open race. Has the top weight assignment but is capable of handling it. Channing is much better than shown at the other town. Dohoev can better that last.

Eighth race—Dacotah, a recent winner, gets the call in the day's finale. Flyhalk and Blue Cyclone have speed and are dangerous contenders.

Ex-V. P. I. Player Goes to Spiders

Richmond, Va., Sept. 3 (AP).—William B. Porterfield, former Virginia Tech star at center, has been added to the University of Richmond football coaching staff.

Glen Thistlethwaite, head coach at Richmond, said Porterfield's connection with the squad would be only part time since he had another position, but that he would help develop a center to replace Ed Merrick, graduated All-Southern Conference player. Porterfield will also serve as a scout.

Corby Cup Play Deadline Today

Entries for the Corby Cup Tournament, opening event on the fall schedule of the Women's District Golf Association, close today at 1 p. m. with Mrs. L. F. Hurley, at Emerson 4129.

The 18-hole medal play event will be played Friday at Columbia, and the tournament is restricted to players with handicaps of 18 and under.

The Maryland State Golf Association Seniors' Championship will be played today, over the 18-hole route, at the Green Spring Valley Club course. Several District players are expected to be in the field.

Dotted Swiss Wins Feature At Aqueduct

Now What Defeated Again in Class 'C' Nahma Handicap

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 3.—Alfred Vanderbilt's Now What, one of last year's best juvenile fillies, took another beating today when she finished a struggling second in the Class C Nahma Handicap at Aqueduct. It was only her second time in the money in seven starts as a 3-year-old.

Dotted Swiss, another 3-year-old, from Arnold Hanger's stable, won the race by three lengths over the Vanderbilt filly after a keen struggle up to the last furlong. W. C. Winfrey's One Jest was third, another length and a half behind. The winner, favorite in the field of seven fillies and mares, paid $3.70 for $2 and ran the six furlongs in 1:12 3-5.

Small World set the pace for nearly a half mile, but stopped when Wait for Baby, Dotted Swiss and Now What, all moving together, shot past her. Dotted Swiss gradually pulled clear and increased her advantage while Now What shook off Wait for Baby then held the fast closing One Jest safe.

Nine Cellulose Firms in 'Pool,' FTC Charges

Transparent Sheet Makers Ordered to Halt 'Price Pact'

By the Associated Press

The Federal Trade Commission announced yesterday the issuance of an order calling upon nine members of the transparent materials converting industry to "cease and desist from agreeing to maintain uniform prices of transparent cellulose sheets and rolls such as cellophane, sylphrap, kodapak and protectoid."

The commission said it also had named National Converters Institute, Chicago, trade association for the industry, and Richard M. McClure, institute manager.

The FTC listed these manufacturers as respondents: Stellmar Products Co., Mount Vernon, Ohio; Milprint Products Corporation (now Milprint, Inc.), Milwaukee, Wis.; Traver Paper Corporation, Chicago; Dubeckmun Co., Cleveland; Dennison Manufacturing Co., Framingham, Mass.; Caton Printing Co., Kansas City; Thomas M. Royal & Co., Philadelphia; Nashua Gummed & Coated Paper Co., Nashua, N. H., and Pioneer Wrapper & Printing Co., Los Angeles.

The last three have resigned from the institute, the FTC said.

The commission charged that the respondents entered into agreements with each other to maintain uniform prices and exchanged confidential information through the institute to facilitate this.

B. & O. Rescinds Furlough Because Of Defense Needs

Baltimore, Sept. 3 (AP).—A Baltimore & Ohio Railroad order rescinding a prior decision to furlough between 350 and 400 machinists, today was attributed to the anticipated demand, under the national defense program, for locomotives and locomotive parts.

The workmen were to have been laid off today because an adequate surplus of locomotive parts for the normal requirements of the railroad has been built up, railroad officials explained.

In view of the anticipated demand on railroads under the defense program, the B & O said it had decided to keep the men at work.

Tariff Cuts Declared No Key For Expanded U. S. Exports

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser
Economic Commentator

Internationalists in our State Department, confronted with present dire realities in Europe, have been making a rapid retreat from their own trade theories.

For example, Henry F. Grady, Assistant Secretary of State, who was intellectual father of the Hull foreign trade pacts, now seemingly concurs with the opposition view that they are "obsolete." Instead of keeping up the prewar argument that the Hull formula of generalized tariff reductions was the key to salvation, Dr. Grady, before the National Foreign Trade Council, conceded: "What the nature of our international trade relations will be after the war, no one of course knows."

DR. GRADY

In the circumstances, Dr. Grady thinks that the practical course is to improve trade relations with Latin America, yet an unemotional reading of the trade statistics shows that in large measure certain Latin-American countries compete with us in raw material production.

Prospects for enlarged permanent trade are better with some Latin-American countries than others. As far as the total Latin-American trade is concerned, in normal years, we buy from the whole of Latin America more than we sell.

In other words, with them we have what is called an unfavorable balance of trade, so that there is some room in Latin America for us to increase our exports, especially to those countries which habitually sell more in the American market than they buy.

A notable example is Brazil, which in ordinary years sells twice as much in this market as it buys here. Brazil uses its excess dollar credits usually to take care of its purchases and debts in Europe. The same is true to a slightly lesser degree of Colombia and Cuba, but when we come to the Argentine the situation is reversed. Ordinarily in nondrought years, we buy from the Argentine considerably less than we sell, so that it is folly to generalize about foreign trade relationships and opportunities.

A realistic approach to Latin-American trade improvement would be in the opposite direction of the Hull formula, which in accordance with the unconditional most favored nation principle generalized to all countries except Germany reductions in American tariff rates. On the other hand, bilateral trade agreements with such countries as Brazil, Colombia and Cuba could be productive as a pickup in American exports.

Obviously, the outcome of the war may have a distinct bearing on the currency of foreign trade theories and fantasies, but the turn of events cannot change the underlying arithmetic. From the American viewpoint, we should in any circumstances relate foreign trade plans to the needs of our domestic economy.

We should import those materials which we lack and need, and pay for them in exports of farm products and manufactured goods which the outside world will take. But we should not be blinded by theoretical assumptions that any type of exports at any price is desirable.

In foreign, as in domestic commerce, we should understand true costs, and limit our operations to those in which we have an opportunity to recoup costs, including the cost of capital. The limiting factor on American exports lies in the fact that we pay labor more in terms of goods and services than other nations, and until foreign nations emulate our high living standards our zeal for exports must be tempered by a decision to protect the rich home market from coolie competition.

U. S. Oil Output Declines in Week

Tulsa, Sept. 3 (AP).—Texas and Oklahoma continued to gain and Illinois to lose as daily average crude oil production in the United States dropped 24,017 barrels to a total of 3,490,435 for the week ended August 31, the Oil and Gas Journal reported today.

The Texas flow swelled to 4,704 barrels a day to 1,205,036, with east Texas gaining 50 to 374,898. Oklahoma was up 7,700 to 415,000, and the Rocky Mountain States 170 to 100,180.

California production declined 22,750 to 594,000; Illinois, 9,800 to 371,500; Kansas, 4,900 to 176,900; Louisiana, 1,070 to 212,740; Michigan, 345 to 53,369, and the Eastern States, 400 to 103,200.

U. S. Gold Imports Slump in Week

By the Associated Press

Gold imports fell abruptly to $36,549,136 in the week ended August 28, from a recent average of about $100,000,000 a week.

The amount shifts nearly every week with the quantity of British Empire metal coming in.

Incoming shipments included $23,681,479 from Canada, $4,172,492 from Mexico, $2,916,572 from Portugal, $1,129,695 from the United Kingdom, $1,174,508 from Hongkong, and $1,635,241 from South Africa, last week.

Diamond Shoe Corp. Plans to Recapitalize

New York, Sept. 3 (AP).—A special meeting of shareholders of the Diamond Shoe Corporation has been called for September 9 to vote on a recapitalization plan. The plan calls for retirement of the 6½ per cent preferred stock, the issuance of new 5 per cent preferred stock and a two-for-one split of the common shares.

The company has a plant at Brockton, Mass. Its retail division, A. S. Beck Shoe Corporation, operates more than 100 stores.

Coffee Futures Firm

New York, Sept. 3 (AP).—Coffee futures displayed a firm price front today when short covering purchases revealed meager offerings from primary sources because of a holiday in Brazil.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, Sept. 3 (AP).—(United States Department of Agriculture).—Trading on wools in Boston today was rather light. Buyers were thought to be waiting for the awards of contracts on Government orders before making further commitments on raw wools. Over the week-end and holiday a fair weight of fine fleece wool for shipment direct from the country was reported to have been sold. Prices ranged mostly 29-32 cents, in the grease, delivered, or 83-87 cents, scoured basis, for country packed fine bright fleeces in lots containing staple and French combing lengths.

Storage Eggs Set New 2-Year High

Chicago, Sept. 3 (AP).—A trong undertone in the egg market here today lifted prices on storage packs to the highest levels since July, 1938, and fresh graded firsts to their best level since last February, as the Government announced discontinuation of purchase of surplus eggs until further notice.

As dealers bid advances of ½ to 1 cent a dozen for fresh eggs; storage packed extras rose to 21¼ cents a dozen and firsts to 19¾ cents a dozen. Fresh graded firsts advanced to 18¼ to 18¾ cents a dozen.

Egg futures prices rose ¼ cent to new highs since mid-August and closed at the day's best positions, October selling at 18.85 cents and November at 18.95 cents.

New York Dry Goods

New York, Sept. 3 (AP).—Demand for gray goods continued today, although volume of sales was under that of last Friday and prices for most constructions held firm. Awards on Government contracts and further bids on material for Army needs attracted most attention on the woolens goods section. Rayon and silk fabrics divisions remained quiet.

Sales were reported on the basis of the following quotations for immediate delivery:

Print cloths, 38½, 64x60, 5.38, 4¾@4¾. Broadcloths, 37, 100x60, 4.10, 6½. Sheetings, 37, 48x48, 4.00, 5½@5¼. Combed lawns, 40, 76x72, 9.00, 6¼.

Shift of Vital Defense Plants To Rural Sections Is Noted

New York, Sept. 3 (AP).—Vital defense industries are leaving congested metropolitan areas for rural or suburban sites at an increasing rate, Leonard C. Yaseen, local manager of the Fantus Factory Locating Service, said today.

Changes in factory locations, Yaseen said, are being made with Federal Government approval and in some cases at Government suggestion.

War industries' need for supplies of skilled labor played an important part in the decision of many companies to change their location. Also important, Yaseen added, was the site of the factory with respect to vulnerability to air attacks.

A third vital factor, it was pointed, was the necessity to establish factories where quick additions to facilities could be made. In areas already crowded, this would be difficult or even impossible.

Moving plans will be accelerated, he said, by clarification of Government tax schedules covering erection of new defense plants.

The Fantus Service has on hand plans covering expenditures ranging from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000.

Important factory changes slated for the near future, Yaseen said, included:

Construction in the Middle West of a 400,000-square foot plant to make precision metal parts and machine tools. This company at present employs around 10,000 workers in the New York metropolitan area and is a major factor in the United States' superiority in certain types of war and peace equipment.

An aviation engine manufacturer contemplates a branch plant in Connecticut employing about 400 me. The company is now engaged on Government orders.

A large textile concern intends to se up a plant in the South, using around 1,000 workers, to fill Government contracts.

Only last week Auto-Ordnance Corp. took 65,000 square feet of floor space in a Bridgeport, Conn., factory. The company employs about 300 workers who are producing Thompson semi-automatic rifles for Army use.

Brush-Moore, Inc., Newspaper Chain, To Redeem Bonds

Cleveland, Sept. 3 (AP).—Smith Davis, financial agent for Brush-Moore Newspapers, Inc., announced today the publishers would reorganize their financial structure with replacement of securities amounting to $4,100,000.

The program approved by directors includes redemption of the company's 5 per cent bonds of which $2,000,000 are publicly owned.

The present 7 per cent first and second preferred stock, of which $2,100,000 is outstanding, will be replaced with a single 6 per cent preferred issue in the amount of $2,000,000.

The new shares will be offered to present bond and share holders. The bonds will be replaced with a $2,000,000 bank loan refunded over 15 years at 4½ per cent.

A shareholders' meeting to approve the program has been called for September 24 at Canton, Ohio. Davis said 80 per cent already have assented. The company publishes daily newspapers in Salem, East Liverpool, Marion, Steubenville, Canton and Portsmouth, Ohio.

Chicago Livestock

Chicago, Sept. 3 (AP).—Fed steers uncovered a new high for the year at $13.35 in a fairly active and fully steady market today. Hogs were steady to weak with some sales 10 cents lower and the top remaining at $7.75. Spring lambs sold steady.

Cattle receipts were large, totaling 17,000 head, but all classes of strictly grain fed cattle, with the exception of medium to good grades which sold steady to 25 cents lower, were fully steady, the average price for all cattle last week rose 50 cents to $11, the highest since November, 1937.

The 10-cent lower sales were on hogs weighing 230 pounds and upward. Last week's average was $6.745, up 45 cents from the preceding week and the highest in 10 months.

(U. S. Department of Agriculture).—SALABLE HOGS—Receipts, 14,000; total, 19,000. Market, generally steady to weak on most barrows and gilts and sows. Foreign Markets

London, September 3 (AP).—Top-grade securities edged higher today as quiet buying held prices steady to firm in most groups. The market continued to show the calm it has exhibited for some time under the Nazi hammering of England from the air. Store and cement shares moved a little higher. Coppers, rubbers and oils were listless.

Liverpool, Sept. 3 (AP).—Cotton futures closed 3 points higher to 1 lower today. Small gains in near positions were ascribed to unwillingness of holders to sell.

Wheat, Cotton Lead Staples In Mild Rise

Wool Tops and Cocoa Exceptions to General Commodity Climb

By the Associated Press

Raw foodstuffs and industrial staples continued last week's gentle rise in important futures markets yesterday.

Wheat at Chicago advanced ¾ to 1 cent a bushel in a late rally influenced by a strong Minneapolis price undertone. Corn ended ¼ lower to ⅛ of a cent higher.

Responsive to fresh activity in New York textile markets, plus firm overseas markets, cotton advanced 25 to 50 cents a bale.

North Carolina Leaf Marts Open; Trading Brisk

Raleigh, N. C., Sept. 3 (AP).—Brisk selling at the opening of the 14 flue-cured tobacco markets of the North Carolina new bright belt today brought average prices estimated from 15 to 17 cents a pound.

The average price on the belt last year was 15.94 cents while in the whole State the average was 15.66 cents. Prices have averaged between 17 and 18 cents on the North Carolina-South Carolina border belt markets this year.

Some grower dissatisfaction with prices was reported but offerings generally were of poor quality.

Labor Day Shutdown Cuts Steel Operations

New York, Sept. 3 (AP).—Steel operations will decline 8.8 points to 82.5 per cent of capacity this week from 91.3 per cent a week ago, due to the Labor Day shutdown, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today.

A month ago operations were at the rate of 90.5 per cent and a year ago 58.8 per cent of capacity.

Tobacco Review

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 3.—With receipts decreasing to 1,606 hogsheads, mostly due to the rainy weather, tobacco sales totaled 1,786 hogsheads last week. While prices were definitely lower on most of the medium-priced grades, all other grades held fairly firm. It is now evident that this 1939 crop will total nearly 5,000,000 pounds more than the Government estimate.

Crop Prospects

Maryland—Since our last report of August 24 we have had a week of continuous rainy weather, consequently very little progress has been made in harvesting the past week. The rains have caused many bottom leaves in the uncut early fields to waste away. The late tobacco, however, has been decidedly helped by the rains.

Maryland 1939 Crop

Firm leaf—Nondescript, 5.00@6.00; dull and greenish, 6.00@15.00; sound to good common, 6.00@25.00; short to medium bright, 26.00@36.00; good to fine red or bright, 36.00@42.00.

Seconds—Common, 7.00@12.00; medium, 12.00@23.00; good to fine, 23.00@36.00.

N B.—Badly mixed hogsheads, from 2.00 to 5.00 per 100 pounds lower.

McDonald Reports $23,688,423 Volume In August Period

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Members of the District of Columbia Bankers Association as well as the bankers' profession nationally have cooperated consistently with the Government's program for modernization and repair of properties and, according to Federal Housing Administrator Stewart McDonald, housing requirements in many parts of the country are being filled to a large extent by this campaign.

Loans for modernization and repair of existing structures during the month ending August 24 reached the highest point this year, he said, indicating that housing needs in certain localities are being alleviated by this rehabilitation work. Modernization loans are made under Title I of the National Housing act, and may be for as much as $2,500, with an amortization period up to three years and 30 days. Maximum discount which may be charged is $5 for each $100 principal.

Mr. McDonald reports that during the month ending August 24, there were 55,250 of these notes reported for insurance to the FHA in an amount of $23,688,423. In many cases, he said, these loans were used to alter existing structures so that they might accommodate more families, or in other cases to repair and modernize dwellings that have become obsolete through age and use.

Eligible expenditures include those for structural alterations, repairs, or additions upon the structure itself or in connection with it. Thus funds for the enlargement of existing, living quarters, new stairways, plumbing, wiring and heating systems, which in themselves are alterations and improvements, are eligible expenditures.

The construction industry is equipped and prepared to perform all national defense construction with the necessary speed, quality and economy, Managing Director Edward J. Harding, of the Ascsociated General Contractors of America, has reported.

Heavy Buying Advances Prices Of Cotton Fabrics

New York, Sept. 3 (AP).—Textile mills today boosted quotations on some cotton fabrics ⅛ cent a yard over Friday levels as last week's late buying splurge continued.

Inquiry was again broad although the higher prices stymied many buyers. Sales up to midafternoon were estimated at about 5,000,000 yards in the Worth street selling district. On Thursday and Friday combined sales were placed around 40,000,000 yards.

Textile brokers said current buying revealed consumers stocks at low ebb, a condition emphasized by the fact most new orders were for quick shipment.

The Market

Speculative Ardor Dampened by U. S. Barter Of Warships; List Closes Unevenly Higher

New York, Sept. 3.—Wall street returned to work after the extended week-end in a bullish frame of mind and for a period during the morning it appeared as though some near-by records would be broken. The close was not impressive, however.

The early bulge and the greater activity of mid-morning ran into a wall of profit taking and nervousness over the international situation, a major factor of which was the President's action in giving 50 American destroyers to Great Britain in exchange for leases on potential naval bases on British possessions in this hemisphere, without having consulted Congress.

The result was an irregularly higher close and only a modest volume of business. While many individual stock issues sold at their highest since last May, the average of the entire market showed a net advance of only 0.16 point and the day's turnover was 544,550 shares.

The announcement of the destroyer deal late in the day caught Wall street by surprise, just as it did Congress. It confirmed the belief of many in the financial district that this is a good time to be cautious, for things are being done to us and for us at a rapid pace, without any of the normal checks and balances. In such a period no investor wishes to get too far out on any limb.

This contributed to the attitude of caution in the financial district today. Other factors seemed minor in comparison. The trade statistics of the early part of the week did little for the speculative community. The drop in steel operations was in line with expectations. The Labor Day holiday naturally will throw all of the old-line business figures out of gear for a week.

Special stocks were the feature of today's trading and no one group distinguished itself. Interest in the machine tool industry contributed to buying in Bullard, which was one of the four issues to make a new high for the year. American Telephone was up a point, as was Johns Manille. Most of the building supply stocks were in favor. Gains of one to more than two points were scored by a number of the inactive issues, such as Kodak, Douglas, Dow Chemical, Wright Aero, Union Pacific and Mesta Machine. In most cases, the major gains were made by preferred issues which rarely appear on the tape. Phillips Jones preferred jumped 3.

Curtiss-Wright was the day's most active stock and the center of trading was the aviations, steels and motors. Most of the leaders, however, ended with fractional price changes which meant little.

Listed bonds turned strong today under the leadership of rails and Government issues, as volume on the stock exchange picked up sharply in all categories. Final bid prices for Governments showed gains of up to 10-32 on some of the longer-termed issues, showing slight recessions in some instances from first quotations on the big board. Volume in Governments was $90,000 against $10,000 Saturday.

British Dominion bonds also were strong, with gains of up to 2 points on some of the Canadian issues being recorded. The apparent success of the British in beating back German raids added value to Belgian and Norwegian issues, while, conversely, Axis liens weakened somewhat. Latin American obligations were mixed, as Argentines, Colombians and Uruguayans added more than a point.

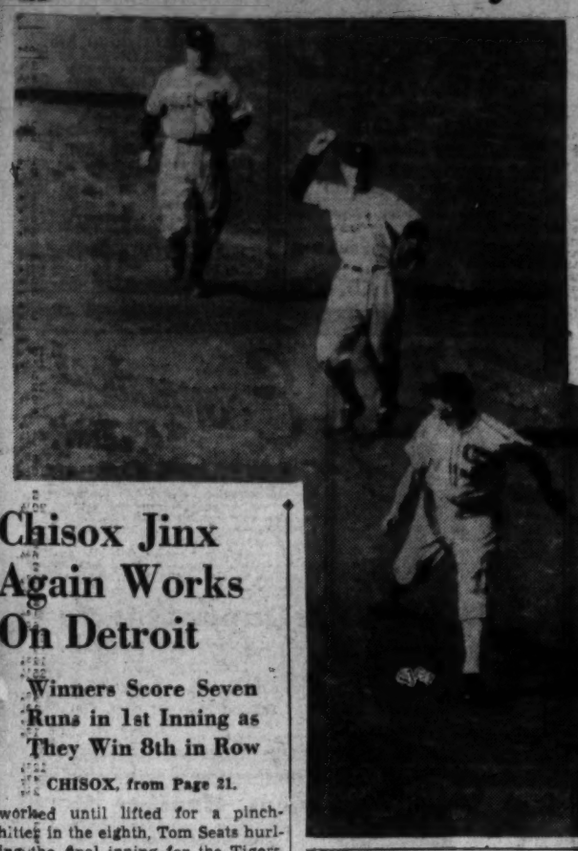
And He Got Out of Tigers' Trap



Julius Solters, of the White Sox, appears to be pretty thoroughly hemmed in by Tigers in this play when he tried to advance an extra base, but the Tigers lost their man. Solters reached second safely in the game at Chicago yesterday. He is seen between Second Baseman Dutch Meyer (with ball) and First Baseman Rudy York (No. 4). Shortstop Dick Bartell is backing up the play worked until lifted for a pinch-hitter in the eighth, Tom Seats hurling the final inning for the Tigers.

A walk, a wild pitch and a single gave Chicago another run in the fourth. The final two White Sox markers came in the fifth on three hits and Birdie Tebbett's second error of the afternoon.

The Tigers averted a shutout in the ninth, getting their two runs on two hits, two walks, a hit batsman and an infield out. The bases were loaded when Jack Knott, who scored his tenth win of the season against seven defeats, forced Pete Fox to fly out, ending the game.

ing to make hay on a short passed ball, but Morrie got to second. Jimmy then sent his grass-scorching double down the third base line to send Morrie across with the winning run.

After the Cards picked up a pair of runs in the first two innings, ending Rookie Johnny Hutchings' efforts, Ripple put his teammates back in the ball game in the fourth with his first Redleg homer into the right center bleachers, with Frank McCormick aboard.

Beggs, credited with the Reds' thirty-second one-run victory, really turned on the hose when he relieved Witt Guise, a portside knuckler just up from Columbia of the Sally League in the seventh period.

Witt, who otherwise pitched effective ball, gave up three dinky singles to load the bases in the seventh, walked one run across on four pitches and had thrown two balls to Mickey Owen when Beggs came on.

The former Yank farm-hand persuaded Mickey to put out a double-play ball to Lonnie Frey and the threat was over.

Al Smith Wins Three Matches In D. C. Tennis

C. Alphonso Smith played and won three matches yesterday to catch up with the rest of the men's singles field in the D. C. Recreation tennis championships on the Reservoir courts.

Smith reached the semifinals together with top-seeded Barney Welsh and Frank Shore. The baldish veteran, just home from the National Singles where he was eliminated by Bill Talbert, started his marathon performance with a 6—2, 6—3 victory over R. L. Willis.

Next he polished off B. Price, 6—0, 6—0, and he finished up with an impressive triumph over Dean Judd, 6—1, 6—1.

MEN'S RESULTS

Quarterfinals—Barney Welsh defeated Harry Brinkerhoff, jr., 6—1, 6—4; Frank Shore defeated Bob Threadgill, default; C. A. Smith defeated Dean Judd, 6—1, 6—1.

Second round—C. A. Smith defeated B. Price, 6—0, 6—0; Lynch defeated DeWitt Smith, 6—2, 2—6, 6—1.

First round—C. A. Smith defeated R. L. Willis, 6—2, 6—3.

Doubles

Second round—Curran and Curran defeated Pappa and Verta, 6—1, 6—4.

WOMEN'S RESULTS

Semifinals—Charlotte Decker defeated Hazel Bishop, 6—2, 6—3.

Second round—Peggy Smith defeated Margaret Graham, 6—2, 7—5; Dorette Miller defeated Frances Rowan, 10—8, 6—6.

First round—Margaret Graham defeated Shirley Coombs, 6—2, 6—4.

Doubles

Doubles—Brainard and Keever defeated Adams and Cordova, 6—0, 6—0.

Arlington Aces Beat Sholl's In Play-off, 4-3

The Arlington Aces ended Sholl's team's chances of taking another D. C. girls softball title last night at Ballston Stadium when they eked out a 4-3 victory in the final game of the Metro Girls League playoff.

For eight innings the teams battled on even terms until the Aces pushed over two tallies in the upper half of the ninth to nullify a Sholl counter in the last half-inning.

Lelia George went the route for the winners, giving up seven hits, while B. Herbert, of Sholl's was touched for only six. It was a single by Rosemary Trone with the bases loaded that eventually won for Arlington.

Batting star of the game was Anna Liegus, of Sholl's, who had a home run and double in two official times at bat.

Today's Radio Highlights

11:20 a. m., WRC—The Post Food Editor Martha Ellyn subs for Mary Mason and discusses the food men like. Carter Barron, local theater magnate, is her subject for the delectable foods of the District and Georgia.

1:15 p. m., WMAL—"The Foundation Stone of Republican Government" was a speech delivered by Judah P. Benjamin in 1845, declaring that the primary duty of a republic is to educate its people that they may forever be wise enough to detect all governmental tendencies away from democracy.

3, WJSV—Arch McDonald comes on at 3 with a brief Dugout Chatter session before the Senators meet the Yankees in you know what.

7, WMAL—Quiz Kids begin a new time schedule, having made themselves the summer's sensation when they filled in during Alec Templeton's vacation. The questions, for the information of doubters, are submitted by listeners and selected by Sidney L. James of the editorial staff of Life and Time.

8:30, WOL—Mutual airs the All-Star football game.

8:30, WJSV—The night's symphony music comes from the Columbia Concert Orchestra, Bernard Herrman conducting. The "Pelleas and Melisande" suite of Sibelius is the principal work while Luigi Boccherini's Sinfonia in D major opens the program.

10, WOL—The Squared Circle, reenactments of famed heavyweight prizefights, begins a new series for sports fans sponsored by a local store. Tonight's opener is John L. Sullivan vs. Paddy Ryan. In later airings John L. will battle Jake Kilrain and James J. Corbett among others.

Every night and morning, for well over a year now, over WJSV and the Columbia network you've been hearing the calm, factual voices of C. B. S.'s European correspondents in London, Berlin and other strategic centers bringing you their up-to-the-minute roundup of what's going on in a continent at war.

Even amazing things become commonplace when you've heard them that long, day in and day out. And one has a tendency to accept them without much thought for the technical and historical miracles.

It should be interesting for you to read, therefore, of some of the birth pangs that went with their creation many months ago in C. B. S.'s European and N. Y. headquarters.

The September Atlantic Monthly headlines an article by William L. Shirer, C. B. S.'s Berlin correspondent, telling you just how these "News of Europe" programs were born. The very idea of daily broadcast from Europe a couple of years ago, Shirer points out, was fantastic. "My home office thought I was crazy," he relates, when he suggested that he should be given five minutes daily to tell of the Sudeten crisis.

How, within a week, however, C. B. S. was broadcasting daily, not only from Prague, but from London, Paris, Rome, Berlin, Godesburg and Munich, and how it's been bringing in daily foreign broadcasts ever since makes nice historical reading.
